Patriotic Program Given In Mound Park

Portsmouth's first open air celebration of Memorial Day was given last night when an entertainment and patriotic program was given in Mound Park under the auspices of the American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary. The program was given by a number of children under the direction of Mrs. J. Albert MacCorkle. Two more reels of pictures were then shown, these being on a Children's Health Conference. Singing of the Star Spangled Banner was led by Mrs. MacCorkle. Taps were sounded by the bugler and the cannon of Battery 13 then boomed a farewell salute, the firing of the cannon being heard in every section of the city. The program was delayed for about a half hour on account of a change made in the moving picture screen.

Bankruptcy Petition Filed Against Largest Brokerage House On Curb Market

NEW YORK, May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed today against Jones and Baker, the largest brokerage house connected with the New York curb market with branches in all parts of the country. The curb market suspended the firm upon notification that Alfred C. Cox, Jr., had been appointed receiver by Federal Judge Goddard under $50,000 bond. The petition for receiver stated that the firm had more than 500 customers and that it should be carrying at least $7,000,000 worth of securities for the account of these customers. The greater part of these, it was said, was believed to have been pledged with banking institutions. Wm. R. Jones and Jackson B. Baker comprise the firm which has offices on Broad street. The petition was filed by lawyers representing three creditors—Joseph M. Williams, Clyde W. Pope and Robert S. Dodge, with claims totaling slightly more than $3,000. The firm issued a statement asserting it was not insolvent and expressed hope that the prompt liquidation of assets would realize 100 cents on the dollar for their customers. The company has been under investigation by the curb exchange for the last two weeks. PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Trading ceased at the Pittsburgh office of Jones and Baker this afternoon when the news reached the manager, "Hub" Baker, as he put it, that an involuntary petition in bankruptcy had been filed in New York. The Pittsburgh office was looked upon as one of the firm's most important branches and until recently it did a large business.

Court House

Going After Prisoner
Sheriff Harry M. Dunham will leave early Friday for Columbiana, Ala., to return to Portsmouth Edward Voss, formerly of this city, to answer to a complaint in Municipal court, charging him with abandoning his minor child. Voss was taken into custody by the authorities of the Alabama city at the instance of the local sheriff. Sheriff Dunham will drop off at Columbus Friday to secure requisition papers from Governor Donahay for the extradition of the prisoner.

Jailed On Peace Warrant
County officers responded to a call to Scioto Furnace yesterday and arrested Newell Cantrell, 26 years old, after he went on a rampage and threatened to kill his wife, Helen Cantrell and others. It was claimed Cantrell was brought to jail and today Magistrate George S. Morgan put him under a $200 bond to keep the peace and in default the defendant was committed to prison. It is claimed that Cantrell has shown symptoms of mental trouble and that his condition is due to shell shock while serving with the American forces overseas during the World War.

Joseph Gets Parole
Pete Joseph, East End man, who was sent to jail more than a month ago for nonpayment of a fine assessed against him for violating the dry laws, was released from custody Thursday when his application for parole was granted by the county commissioner. When informed that Joseph is in bad health and may have to submit to a severe surgical operation soon.

Wife Seeks Alimony
Sylvia Gordon charges abandonment in her suit for alimony and custody of their minor child, now eight years old, instituted in Common Pleas Court Thursday against Hiram Gordon, whom she married in October 1914. In her petition filed through Attorneys Blair and Blair, the wife says that Gordon abandoned her and their child on May 17 last, without any cause whatever and that his whereabouts are now unknown. She further claims that she is injured, believes and therefore charges that the defendant has deserted her and left the state with another woman, declaring that she has not heard from him except by way of letter purported to be written by him from St. Louis to his mother. The wife asks that Gordon be enjoined from disposing of his real estate consisting of two lots in the Spelacy Addition, and certain personal property including 15 shares of building and loan stock.

Tax Collection In Full Blast
The June tax collection is now on in full blast at the Court House and County Treasurer Henry B. Ruel and his force of assistants are being kept busy raking in the shickels. While the books will be kept open until July 10 for the payment of taxes Treasurer Ruel urges that patrons to come in now and avoid the usual rush during the closing days.

Executor Appointed
John A. Shultz has been appointed by the Probate Court as executor of the estate of the late Maggie E. Shultz, who died April 15, 1923, at her home in this city, leaving property with an estimated value of $4400, represented by $4000 realty and $400 personally.

To Visit Native Land
Gus Esaures, New Boston real estate dealer, filed application with the clerk of courts Thursday for a passport to Greece, his native land, where he will visit his mother and other relatives. He expects to depart on the first lap of his journey on June 25 when he will go to New York and sail from there on July 11. He will be absent four months.

Graves Decorated
Appropriate Memorial Day services were held in the Friendship cemetery on the West Side yesterday and the graves were beautifully decorated.

MORE ARE OWNED HERE THAN ANY OTHER CITY OF ITS SIZE IN STATE

To properly visualize Portsmouth as a city of homes, one has to go back a quarter of a century and compare the residential districts of today with what they were then. As the mind travels instantly back to the nineties and returns, it is as if a magic wand had been waved, making a change inconceivable. In 1898 Portsmouth was a slow old river town, with all the words implying buildings were of ancient build and estate, even for those days, they were without porches and mostly of scarcely passing acquaintance, with paint. They were weather-beaten and woe-be-gone. The streets, in condition, were fitting ways to the homes. With the exception of parts of Market, Second and Chillicothe, none were paved. Front was a quagmire. Third was a morass and in seasons Fourth had a contest as to whether it would go deepest in mud or dust. Sunny-side was a series of ridges and washes. The Hilltop was a bedraggled and forlorn patch of stunted corn and ragweeds. As an incident of those days of dilapidation and disorder, it is recalled that one spring the Times started a paint-up campaign. Something better was a-brewing in the home conception of the people that helped the campaign to success, and several hundred houses got their first outdoor bath in anywhere from ten to forty years. Later the cry became, build a porch and grow a lawn. No one, unless a resident, then, can conceive how derelict homes were of both. Take Fourth street from Gay to its end. Not as many as half a dozen dwellings had anything like a piazza and the front yards, the little there was of them, were brown and bare. One good thing begets another. When Fourth street had painted up a bit she wanted a dustless street to save the paint. She got the paved thoroughfare and promptly began to spruce up. By this time the town was growing rapidly and increasing traffic on dirt streets made larger sections of town undesirable as locations for homes. This led to the opening up of the Hilltop. Far-seeing real estate owners laid out additions and built brick streets and smooth sidewalks. Those parts of the town were soon lined with spruce and pretty houses. This was followed by reserved plots, also on the Hilltop, calling for the construction of homes costing at best a certain sum. Rivalry of a desirable sort was then bred and soon handsome structures of more-up-to-date details began to go up on the vacant lots and plots down town. So came modern Fifth and Sixth and others to vie with the pretentious Hilltop, which along with Sunny-side, grew and expanded into Scioto Trail, and even back to Cole's Boulevard. Each extension, each year, brought improvement in the general character of construction until today Portsmouth has many lovely homes and residential districts that will compare favorably with those of any other town. But there is something better about the homes of Portsmouth than outward appearances and interior accommodations. They are homes in fact as well as in name, because more of them are owned by the families that occupy them, than in any other town of its size, and ownership makes the most exquisite and enduring quality of home.

Sciotoville Bacca laureate Sunday

Baccalaureate services for the Sciotoville high school graduating class will be held at the Sciotoville M. E. church Sunday evening with Rev. Charles Reinhard of the Sciotoville Christian church delivering the sermon. He has chosen for his subject, "A Living or A Life." No services will be held at the Berwan Baptist or Christian churches, union services to be held at the M. E. church. There will be special music for these services.

THIEF ENTERS MENIX HOME

Using a skeleton key, a thief Tuesday night gained entrance to James Menix home at 2240 Vinton avenue. After ransacking the house the thief left with $1.50 in change found in a bureau drawer, and a safety razor belonging to Mr. Menix. A purse containing a good sum of money left in another bureau drawer, was overlooked.

ERECTING SHAFT TO SON'S MEMORY

Mrs. C. L. Wood, of Nureon, with her son, Black Wood yesterday visited Quiner, Ky., where she is having erected a monument in memory of her aviator-son, Louis Wood, who gave his life in the World War. The memorial, which will be an impressive shaft will be completed soon, and will stand on the family burial lot in the cemetery there. Louis Wood was captured after being wounded and died in a German hospital. His remains are at rest in the soil of Belgium.

MRS. HAGER PAINFULLY INJURED

Severe cuts on the forehead which required several stitches to close were suffered by Mrs. James Hager of 509 Offshore street Wednesday afternoon when the automobile in which she was riding hit a rut in the road and caused her to be thrown forward over the back of the front seat and against the windshield. Mr. and Mrs. Hager were on their way to Akron to attend an outing when the accident occurred. She was brought to Mercy hospital where her injuries were attended by Dr. G. D. Waite. Later she left the hospital for her home.

Seriously Ill.

I. H. Gee, 1614 Highland avenue, left last night for Rush, Ky., to be at the bedside of his mother, who is seriously ill at her home there. He was accompanied by his son, Everett Gee, business manager of the Carlisle ball team.

Knight Flays Harding Plan

CLEVELAND, O., May 31.—Further international struggles can be prevented only by pinching the war making power in the hands of the people or by declaring war an international crime, former Congressman Charles I. Knight of Akron, declared in an address, attacking the league of nations court at luncheon before the Kiwanis club here today. "The idea that we can prevent war by joining the court is an assumption founded upon no facts and wholly at variance with experience," he said.

McDermott Man Suffers Fatal Heart Attack; T. J. Hill Dies Suddenly

Rheumatic Pains Go Swollen Joints Vanish

Thousands of sufferers have freed themselves from the bondage of rheumatic pains, reduced the swollen joints, and away came and crutches, and are able to be of use to themselves and families.

While sitting in bed and making an effort to talk to his wife, Thomas J. Hill, well known resident of McDermott, suffered a fatal heart attack and passed away about 3:50 o'clock this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Hill awakened about 3:30, their usual time, and Mr. Hill raised up in bed and seemed to be making an extra effort to get his breath. His wife asked him if he was suffering with pains in his chest again and he did not reply, but fell back on his pillow. She made an effort to arouse him but soon found that death had intervened.

Coroner Virgil Fowler was called and he examined the body and found death due to natural causes. Mr. Hill had suffered from severe pains about his heart for several years, but had not had any severe attacks the past year. He had remarked of late that he was feeling much better than usual and relatives noticed that he was in better health than during the past few years. He attended a ball game in the village yesterday afternoon and worked about his home in the evening.

Thomas J. Hill was born at McArthur, Clinton county, March 28, 1868, and came to this county about 25 years ago. For the past eighteen years he had been employed in the Waller Bros. stone quarry at McDermott and held the job of quarry superintendent.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Standing in Arlington Memorial Amphitheatre and facing the wooded slopes where rest thousands of the war dead of the nation, President Harding, yesterday uttered a prayer that the United States do its full part toward making war unlikely if not impossible.

"We have already proven that we can have less of armament," the president declared.

"Let us strive for the assurance that we shall have none of war." Scarcely had the applause from those assembled in the great national cemetery for the annual Memorial day exercises died away when the president, coupled with his prayer the hope that should war come again to America, "we will not alone call to service the youth of the land . . . but we will draft every resource, every activity, all of wealth and make common cause of the nation's preservation."

Several minutes passed before the applause which greeted this pronouncement allowed Mr. Harding to continue and then he asserted: "It will be a more grateful nation which consecrates all to a common cause, and there will be more to share the gratitude bestowed. More, there will be fine conscience in our war commitments and that sublimity of spirit which makes a people invincible."

The prayer and the hope were the high points in the president's address, delivered at the exercises which in their impressiveness and spirit had a similarity to ceremonies today in many parts of the land. The President, in voicing the prayer that the United States do its part to make war impossible, recalled how two years ago, he had stood "at Holokoen pier among five thousand dead in their flag-draped coffins." There "was death in war's unheeding allotment, corridors of sorrow and sacrifice so far as the eye could see, and grief that no human soul could appraise," he said, and added:

"Under the spell of the great sorrow which gripped my heart, I said then and repeat now, 'It must not be again! It must not be again!'"

Amplifying the prayer with the declaration which many interpreted as referring to the proposal for American membership in the world court, he said: "I believe it to be a God-given duty to give of our influence to establish the ways of peace throughout the world. We cannot guarantee but we can promote the peaceful adjustment of disputes, we can aid in the establishment of the agencies of peace, we can be influential in committing the world to the triumphs of peace, and make hateful to human kind the spoils of war."

Ceremonial programs were also arranged at other cemeteries in and around the city with special exercises under the auspices of the American Legion in the World War section of Arlington cemetery.

The program for separate exercises at Arlington under the auspices of the Disabled Veterans of the World War included the dedication by Mrs. Harding of an elm tree to the World War dead. The site of the tree is about one hundred yards from the tomb of the unknown soldier.

In the principal address at the American Legion memorial services at Arlington, Acting Secretary Dwight Davis of the War Department declared the legion "must demand that never again shall American boys be sacrificed as many of these, our comrades, were sacrificed, because we forget the lessons of the past."

"Those who opposed in times of peace," Mr. Davis said, "the training of these boys for self defense, must feel a heavy weight of responsibility for this unnecessary sacrifice. Yet, today we hear the same voices again raised, urging that our defenses be thrown down, our army and navy disbanded, our men again left unprotected for self defense."

"War is horrible, they say, and being horrible, must be made impossible. With that aspiration we all agree; as to its present probability and the means of accomplishing it, we differ."

"The constructive way to work for real peace is to bend our every energy toward removing the misunderstandings, the jealousies and the hatreds between peoples. The training of a strong and peace-loving people to defend themselves against attack is their best guarantee of peace. That is the teaching of our forefathers who won for us our independence."

Why Do French Women Always Look Young?

In France, mothers and daughters look like sisters. How are the women there able to retain their youthful looks until long past middle age? It is known that they are much given to the use of mercurized wax. This wax possesses a remarkable absorbent property which quickly removes the fine particles of cuticle which are constantly aging and which are the immediate cause of an old-looking complexion. Thus the French, healthier, younger and more beautiful is given a chance to breathe and glow back. You can try this treatment yourself. In less than two weeks your complexion will become as clear, soft and beautiful as a young girl's. One ounce of mercurized wax will cost American druggists there as far as 10 cents. Advertisements.

Fail To Find Body Of Princess

GRAVESEND, England, May 31.—(By The Associated Press).—Excavations were begun in the graveyard of St. George's church today in an endeavor to locate the bones of the Indian princess, Pocahontas, who, according to tradition, was buried there in 1617.

Early this morning, amid great secrecy, in the presence of the rector of the church, Canon Gedge, Dr. Philip Franklin and James Van Allen Shellen, representing the English-speaking Union, and Captain Page Gaston, and W. P. Pyerant, acting on behalf of the anthropologist department of the British museum, a grave to which a number of bodies had been moved when the original church was burned some years ago was opened.

It was thought the body of Pocahontas might have been one of those moved. Thirteen skeletons were found, but none of them was identified as that of Pocahontas, and the belief prevails that her remains still rest in a grave beneath the channel of the new church.

Today's work was done under the authority of the home office and it is understood the expense is being borne by Captain Gaston. As search beneath the channel of the church will require the demolition of a part of the building, a new permit will have to be obtained from the home secretary. It is asserted, however, that this permit will be requested and the work proceeded with.

Heavy Snow Falls At Montana Points

BUTTE, MONT., May 31.—"Next winter," started in Montana yesterday, when a heavy snow blanketed Butte and the surrounding country and when a cold rain and snow struck Helena.

Great Falls, also reported cold and rain. Snow continued to fall in Butte throughout the afternoon.

Altitude Will Not Affect Fighters, Physicians Hold

BY BILL BREITSTEIN

SHELBY, MONT., May 31.—Jack Dempsey and Tommy Gibbons can stand the altitude.

The arena's elevation—2,253 feet above sea level—will not affect their wind in the slightest.

Each will be acclimated thoroughly to Shelby's rare air when they step into the ring on the afternoon of July 4, leading northern Montana physicians agree.

Great Falls, where Dempsey is training, has an altitude of 3,500 feet, while Havre, where Gibbons is working out, has one of 2,155 feet.

Then Jack, coming from Utah, naturally is accustomed to a high elevation, the doctors point out. And Tommy, they explain, began to fortify himself against it on his recent theatrical tour.

"True, the fighters will have to breathe lower to get the same amount of oxygen they get at lower altitudes," says Dr. J. R. Reynolds of Great Falls, who's on the ground as official physician. "But I don't believe they will notice it."

"Now at Butte, it's different. The 5,000-foot level there often perceptibly slows up eastern boxers. A 3,000-foot altitude, though, never has proven detrimental to trained athletes, as far as I know."

Dr. D. S. MacKenzie, Havre; Dr. C. D. Howell, Valer, and Dr. C. J. Bresse and Dr. D. K. Woods, both of Great Falls share Dr. Reynolds' views. All have looked after participants in various bouts throughout the state.

Are You Run-Down?

A Discovery that has Done a World of Good

Cambridge, Ohio. "Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery did me more good than any other medicine I have ever taken. I had become all run-down, was so weak I could scarcely walk around. I could not eat and did not have enough blood, and had a hacking cough, which annoyed me. I was a physical wreck when I began taking the 'Discovery' and three bottles of this medicine completely put me on my feet. My cough stopped. I could eat well and felt well and strong. It gave me such wonderful help that I do not hesitate to recommend it to others who are ailing as I was."

To Form National Democratic Victory Club Here

(Special to The Times.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 31.—Portsmouth is one of the Ohio cities in which the Democratic National Committee will shortly organize a "National Democratic Victory Club," to win in 1924, as part of a campaign to elect a Democratic president in the approaching election, Chairman Cordell Hull announced today.

The forming of these clubs in Ohio is part of a nation-wide campaign the Democrats are launching in which they will establish a Democratic Victory Club in each of the 6,000 towns of the country. Clubs have already been organized in eight Eastern and Southern States, Pennsylvania at the present time is first with seventy-three clubs, North Carolina second with sixty-one and West Virginia third with forty-four.

"The main object of these clubs,"

Chairman Hull declared today, will be to assist the Democratic party in winning the presidential election of 1924. The clubs will give the Democrats a stronger political organization than they have ever had in the past and will also aid greatly in financing the party during the coming campaign.

The National Committee, through these clubs will raise more than one million dollars to be used in electing a Democratic President in 1924. Each member of a Victory Club pays dues of $5.00 a year to the National Headquarters here.

According to the present methods the National Committee is employing in organizing these clubs, a president is appointed in each town by Chairman Hull and is asked to enroll a minimum of twenty members. Where the clubs have been formed here in the East they have been entered with enthusiasm by Democrats and from present indications the nation-wide campaign will be completed sometime next fall.

It is pointed out here by Democratic leaders that the party should raise even more than a million dollars through the forming of these clubs.

By organizing a club of only twenty members in each of the 6,000 towns the National Committee would have a revenue of $600,000. Most cities, however, where the clubs are already organized, have a membership usually ranging from forty to sixty after only a two weeks campaign for membership. The committee believes that as soon as the national organization is perfected enough loyal Democrats will join the clubs to give the party a campaign fund from this source alone of more than five million dollars.

Officials at the national headquarters today said the first steps to organize these clubs had already been taken in Ohio and it was hoped that the state would be completely organized by the middle of summer.

Chairman Hull in a statement issued today concerning the Victory Clubs and their Presidents declared that "every man or woman who enrolls in a National Democratic Victory Club renders a service to the party that cannot be measured."

"He or she makes it possible for the National Headquarters to carry out an effective program of education and organization this year," he continued. "Each one can feel that, due to his effort, the party is not going to wait until the last three months and then try to elect a President, but is doing what all Democrats want it to do working and fighting every day, between elections as well as during the heat of the campaign. "The Republicans, with their unlimited means, are flooding the country with propaganda in a desperate struggle to overcome our lead and we must combat their efforts now we cannot wait."

"I am forming a Victory Club in every town in the Union, and the Victory Club President in each town is the keystone of the arch. The whole structure depends on him. "That is the reason I am deeply grateful and appreciative of the services rendered by the loyal men and women who have already enrolled their clubs, and through them, thank the loyal Victory Club members who have sustained them. Such cooperation will bring Democratic success next year and will serve to emphasize the vital part played by the Victory Clubs this year in producing that result."

Miss Dolly Wise

She is here to answer any and all questions concerning love, marriage, troubles, woes, etiquette, etc. Inquiries should be addressed to Miss Dolly Wise, care The Daily Times, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Dear Dolly—If a girl is 18 years of age before the new law raising the legal age limit of girls from 15 to 21 years of age goes into effect in July be considered of age, or will she come under that law and not be of age until she is 21?
A. S.

Dear Dolly—Will you please help me locate my "Prince Charming," I saw him for the first time over a year ago, but did not meet him until four weeks ago. I saw him on Sunday and again on Monday, and I haven't seen him since. Dolly, I would like to see him before Saturday night. If he does not want to do this I hope he will send me his picture. I am not a flirt and no one else need apply because I don't get this man. I don't want any one else. I will give you my name and address in case he wants to write me. Dolly, he is the handsomest man I ever saw and if he ever comes back to me I will bring him down and let you see him.

LONESOME K. N.

I hope he calls for your name and address so I can get a peek at him.

Dear Dolly—After the new law is passed, will a girl be considered of age if she is 18 years of age and has been married without her father's consent until they are 21 years of age?
A. S.

tablespoons of rolled crackers, three tablespoons of milk and two beaten eggs. Mix well and form into a loaf in a pudding dish. Pour over hot half pint of water, bake two hours. This is a very good cake and your guests will like it.

Dear Dolly—Why don't these mismatched and disgruntled husbands and wives who are filling your column about their woes, imaginary and otherwise, get busy and settle their own troubles?

Every couple in the world can get along if they want to. They agreed on everything and got by with it before they got married and they could keep on doing so after they got married if they wanted to. Now let them get busy and see how nice they can get along, without telling their troubles to the whole world. They ought to be ashamed to let their friends and neighbors know that they would fall down on the job of being a husband and wife. What do you think about it Dolly?

DISGUSTED READER.

I think if they would pull together, they could get along all right.

Real Artists Give Concert Here June 4

Monday evening, June 4th, will be a Red Letter day for Portsmouth music lovers.

On that evening, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the Trinity M. E. church, Walter R. Jenkins, will know baritone singer, now with the "Billy" Sunday party in Louisville; Robert Matthews and Albert Peterson, also members of the Sunday party, will present a musical program of classic and popular numbers.

Mr. Jenkins writes to Portsmouth friends: "We are anticipating a most pleasing time in Portsmouth."

The Woman's Home Missionary Society of Bigelow church will meet on next Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. F. Carr on Second street, with members of Group 10 in charge. The members of this group are Mrs. T. B. Lawson, Mrs. George Koerner, Mrs. E. Carr, Misses Charles Horst, Mrs. J. F. Carr, Misses Emily and Anna Paul. The election of officers will be held at this meeting and the report of the convention recently held at Jackson will be given by Miss Mary Smith. Each member is asked to bring a dozen of eggs to the meeting as a crate will be packed and sent to the Hancock Rest Home at Ocean Grove, N. J.

The members of the George D. Scudder Guild of the First Presbyterian church have made final arrangements to present the delightful comedy, "The Klemmmaniac," which will be presented this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Sunday School room of the church.

The playlet will prove an entertaining diversion, as it includes a group of girls, one of whom imagines that she has been picked, and she gathers a group of friends to find the culprit. The entanglements that ensue are interesting and quite amusing. The cast of characters includes: Mrs. John Burton (Peggy), Miss Ella Barker (Armsby), a young widow; Miss Clara Nannemaker (Mrs. Charles Dorer), (Mabel, a bride); Miss Josephine Banta (Mrs. Preston Ashley (Bertha)); Mrs. William H. Gleiser (Miss Freda Dixon); Miss Avis Smith (Miss Evelyn Evans, a journalist); Miss Ellen Oursler (Katie, Mrs. Burton's maid); Miss Louise Oursler (Freelancing the play, Miss Eva Hunt will give a dance and monologue.

Tickets for thirty-five cents may be obtained from any members of the Guild or from the W. H. Schwartz Clothing Store. The proceeds will go toward the fund for sending a delegate to the College of Missions to be held at Wooster in August.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Gableman, who have been visiting relatives here, are now the guests of relatives in the Webster before returning to their home in Springfield.

Mrs. Philip Gableman, who has been ill at her home on Baird avenue, is improving.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Child's Hair With

If you want to keep children's hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This irritates the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Multifid coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this cannot possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. Two or three teaspoonfuls of Multifid will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and does not leave a greasy or dusty deposit. Multifid cleanses quickly and evenly, and leaves a fine and silky, bright, fluffy wave and easy to manage.

You can get Multifid coconut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and a few ounces will last for months. Be sure and ask for "Multifid." — Advertisement.

Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Brakaw, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hudson, Mr. and Mrs. Edson Tener, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Scott, Mr. and Mrs. John Willis and children, Ruth Marie, Maurice and Robbie, Mrs. Nicholas Hoffman and daughter, Miss Helen Hoffman, and Mr. Hobart Blackburn motored to Powellsville Decoration Day, where they enjoyed a picnic at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Distler.

Mrs. Mattie Portis and son Rupert of 525 Second street returned home Tuesday from Tazewell, Va., where they were called on account of the serious illness of Mrs. Portis' father, Mr. J. D. Suthers.

This evening at the United Brethren Church Miss Dorothy Cline will be presented in a recital, under the auspices of the Ruth Sisters Class taught by Miss Edna Streich. Several of the best musicians of the city will appear with Miss Cline and there has been a very interesting program arranged consisting of readings, songs and instrumental music. The entertainment promises to be one of the best ever given in the city and the public is invited to attend. The proceeds of the entertainment will be divided between the Ruth Sisters Class and the Loyd at Reapers Class of the First Christian church of which Miss Cline is a member, and which is taught by Mrs. Gilbert E. Dadds.

The Otterbein Society of the United Brethren church will entertain with a farewell party on Friday evening in compliment to Miss Mildred Jackson of Twenty-second street, who leaves soon for Roanoke, Va., to make her future home. The friends of the Society will assemble for the evening in the home of Miss Irene McCallie on Monroe street.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Baker of Third street and sisters, Mrs. Caroline Folsom and Misses Emma and Anna Cramer of Fourth street, counsel a motor party to Jackson yesterday.

Friends of Miss Mary Margaret Keen will be sorry to learn that she continues ill with an attack of tonsillitis at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. Edward Keen, 1527 Sixth street.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Kendall Avenue Baptist church will give a Strawberry and Ice Cream Festival on Tuesday evening, June 4th, at their new church lot, Robinson avenue and Young street to which the general public is cordially invited.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Williams and their sons and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. James D. Williams of Third street, Mr. and Mrs. Evans Williams of Sunrise Avenue, Sunnyside, Mr. and Mrs. David Williams of Twenty-first and Timmonds and Mrs. John E. Williams' brother the Rev. Mr. Davies of Philadelphia motored to Ironton Wednesday to spend the day with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Peadar of Second street, returned home Wednesday afternoon from New York City, where they visited for two weeks with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Stacy D. Arrowood.

Miss June Williamson of Catlettsburg, Ky., was joined here this week by her cousin, Mrs. Mildred Williamson of Jackson, and together they went to Toledo to visit with Mrs. Adelbert Crowell.

WOMEN FROM FORTY TO FIFTY

Will Be Interested in Mrs. Hooker's Recovery by Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

St. Paul, Minn.—"I was going through the Change of Life and suffered from a run-down condition and the troubles a woman has to go through at that time, hot flashes, nervousness and headaches. At times I was not able to do my work, but since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I am gaining every day and can do my work with more ease than I have for five or six years. I owe it all to your great medicine." —MARTHA HOOKER, 114 College Ave., St. Paul, Minn.

When women who are between the ages of forty-five and fifty-five are beset with such annoying symptoms as nervousness, irritability, melancholia and heat flashes, which produce headaches, dizziness, or a sense of suffocation, they should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is especially adapted to help women through this crisis. It is prepared from roots and herbs and contains no harmful drugs or narcotics.

Write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts, for a free copy of Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book for Women.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

Wild Mustard

One morning Mr. Tatters looked out of his window.

One morning Mr. Tatters, the little Raggy Man, looked out of his window in Raggy Land (which was under the ground, you know) and saw something, something that hadn't been there the day or two before.

He looked again. Indeed, to make quite sure, he looked three times. And finally he took off his nightgown and put on his raggedy overalls and ran out of his little house and went over to the something and looked right at it.

"Yes, sir!" As sure as you're born, that's it," he nodded talking to no one at all. For it was early and none of the little Raggies or either of the Twins were awake yet.

"Yes, sir! That's it," he repeated. "I've been afraid all along it would come sometime, and here it is at last."

Then he blew his whistle. At that every one of the Raggies jumped out of bed and into their coats and flew out to see what Mister Tatters wanted. And you may be sure Nancy and Nick were there first.

"What is it?" asked Nick breathlessly. "Is something hurt?"

"Something will be," said Mister Tatters. "If we don't get to work at once. And we'll have to get the Brownies and elves and pixies to help us."

"What is it? Oh, do tell us," cried Nancy. "It must be something awful!"

"It is," answered the Raggy man pointing to some roots overhead. "Don't you see what that is? The gnomes have planted wild mustard in Farmer Brown's wheat field. It will ruin the wheat, and every Raggy, and we'll pull it all out at once. It's just started to grow!"

"Then such a busting as there was! They worked all day and nearly half the night."

But Farmer Brown's wheat was saved. Thanks to the Twins and the Raggies.

"Oh!" shouted Jack, as the Flying Horse kept right on flying into the air. "I believe we are going to run into that cloud." "That's just the thing to do," replied Flightry. "That's a rain cloud and our horse is going to get above it so we won't get wet." Then the horse plunged into the cloud.

For a few moments everything seemed dark and then, as the Flying Horse reached the top of the rain cloud and brought Jack and Flightry in to the clear air again, Jack heard a loud peal of thunder. "We were just in time," shouted Flightry. "If you'll look down you'll see that it's raining."

Memorial Day Impressively Observed In Lucasville

Ideal weather, a crowd of hundreds, splendid music, a stirring address, and quantities of beautiful flowers set the scene for the combined observance of Decoration Day here one of perfect and fitting tributes in years to the departed soldiers of the four wars, who are sleeping in Lucasville cemetery. The plans of the Baker Post American Legion were successfully carried through in every detail. In the morning ten machines conveying soldiers, the Lucasville band, and friends drove to Rushtown and assisted in the services of Memorial there. On their return the soldiers, their wives and members of the band were served a hot dinner in the basement of community hall.

The local cemetery, always beautiful, was at its best. The band, showing the benefit of the present full maturity of roses and many other flowers. Old Lucasville neighbors, scattered for many years, met and mingled among the graves.

At 1:30 the procession was formed at Community hall, the Grand Army flag at the front. The band, civil war veterans, Spanish American war and world war veterans, citizens and flower and flag bearing boys and girls followed the colors to the cemetery, where they entered the north gate, the band playing. Prayer, the ritual of the American Legion, taps and details of soldiers and children decorating the graves, comprised the simple and impressive services preceding the address of memorial. The address, which was delivered by Rev. G. H. Weaver, was a stirring message of patriotism.

On the graves of about half a hundred soldiers of four wars of the country, from William A. Lanes of revolutionary service, his son, John Lanes, who platted Lucasville, of the war of 1812, to the great majority of the boys of '61-'65, and the two world

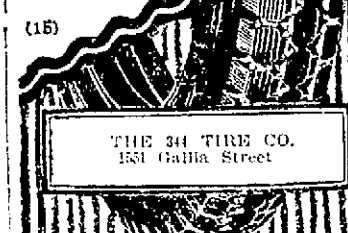

Benefit Given For Allen Chapel, Success

The benefit program given last night at Allen Chapel for the benefit of the church building fund debt proved very successful. There was a fine attendance and the entertainment was thoroughly enjoyed.

The program included readings by Mrs. Lena Kline Reed, songs by the junior choir, and music under the direction of Fred G. Minor. Invocation was made by the pastor, Rev. Norman W. Brown.

It is our constant endeavor to give the motoring public the best possible service. That is why we feature Lancaster Tires.

Nominations Made

Semi-annual nomination of officers was held at the weekly meeting of Onawa Council Degree of Bonhomm last night, the nominations resulting as follows:

J. E. Shump, real estate broker, dealer and builder, with offices in the First National Bank building, opened his first real estate office 18 years ago. His first offices were in the Turkey building, and upon the completion of the First National Bank, he secured offices in this building. Mr. Shump has placed on the market and sold 15 large additions and subdivisions. He now owns the entire addition of Hill Crest, West Portsmouth, and will place on the market next month over 300 large lots in Cole Park, on Galena Pike. These Cole Park lots will be restricted to homes costing $3,000 or more. Home seekers desiring to locate near the Country Club will find lots the size and price to suit. These lots will be 50x150 and larger and will cost $5 to $12 per front foot.

In Thirty Years The Sam'l. Horchow Co. Has Had A Phenomenal Growth

The Samuel Horchow company, as it is now, representing the best, the finest in the furniture line, in Portsmouth, grew out of a very small beginning.

Its founder, Mr. Samuel Horchow, came to Portsmouth thirty years ago and settled down to take up the work of helping to build up Portsmouth and its business interests, starting out in selling household articles from house to house.

By honesty, service and decent business methods, Mr. Horchow built up the largest establishment in the house furnishing line in the city of Portsmouth.

Seventeen years ago, the business was incorporated under the name of The Samuel Horchow company, having for its stockholders only the members of his own family. The business was then moved to its present location, 542-544 Gallia Street.

Five years later, Mr. Horchow purchased the building in which his business is located and proceeded to improve all the departments to meet the needs of his large business.

Today, The Samuel Horchow company stands for fairness, service, straight forward dealing and high class merchandise. Any city should be proud of an establishment like the one which The Samuel Horchow company is conducting and its success is due to the honesty, integrity and fair dealing of its members.

In 1920, Mr. Horchow gave one-half interest in the business to his two sons, Joseph Horchow and Leo Horchow and, today, the business is mainly carried on by the younger generation, on the same principles, the same methods and with the same fairness as established by himself.

cordently but it was one out of hundreds of other statements issued by the Republican national committee supporting the state department's policy. Mr. Adams wasn't here when it was issued and the incident has been brushed aside as having no more significance than the scores of indiscreetly which subordinates in public committees of the political parties commit from time to time in their paper proofs of publicity and partisan clamoring.

The first of the league court have been provoked into extreme statements by the irritated statements of friends of the league of nations that admission to the world court means ultimate entry in the league itself. The Republican national committee has to keep on hammering the issue covered in Mr. Harding's New York speech to the effect that he and his party have turned their backs on American membership in the league. Not a word in Mr. Adams' latest statements was said about the world court. The assertion was made, on the other hand, that the foreign policy presumably upheld in the election of 1920 by the votes of the people is still being supported by the Republican national committee.

This public national committee can also be interpreted as meaning that Mr. Harding hasn't departed from pledges made in the 1920 campaign. The president came out then for a world court and feels he is entirely consistent. And Chairman Adams' statement is an adroit effort to emphasize that nothing more is being done than was expressed by Mr. Harding in his 1920 speeches, namely entrance into the world court.

Some critics inside the party may not accept that view of it, some may insist that the Republican national committee hasn't seen the real obstacle, namely the connection of the world court with the league, but there again it all depends upon individual view point and interpretation. The Republican national committee is going on the assumption that harmony can be maintained, that the world court is not the paramount issue and will not bedevil domestic problems—Mr. Harding himself said so in his New York speech—and the upshot of it all is that the Republican national committee, instead of setting out to develop resistance to the world court has really embarked on a course of peace making within the party—a reconciliation of discordant elements at a critical moment in the affairs of the party, a few months before a presidential election. Thus all Mr. Adams' statement means.

Wheeler Says New York Would Become Rum Runners' Lair

ALBANY, N. Y., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Governor Smith was told by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League at the opening session today of the governor's public hearing on the repeal of the Mullan-Gage act that New York state would become "the rendezvous of rum runners and liquor bandits of other states" if the bill was signed.

Mr. Wheeler, citing voluminous decisions of the United States supreme court and other federal and state tribunals, declared that the states were duty bound to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment.

"The repeal of the Mullan-Gage act without providing a substitute is an attempt to defeat or thwart the amendment and a violation of a constitutional duty," he declared.

"Among the 48 legislatures which ratified the Eighteenth Amendment, was that of New York state."

Mr. Wheeler said that the repeal of the enforcement code of the state "would be a fruitless attempt to nullify the constitution." Its sole effect, he asserted, would be to take away from officers of the peace their present power to arrest law breakers.

"By adopting this repeal New York would be in the position of seeking to retain the protection of a national government of laws without contributing to that protection," he said, "to repeal a law necessary to enforce the constitution and substitute nothing for it, is plain and palpable nullification."

"It is nullification of the slacker type that stands idly by and sees life and property destroyed that could be saved. If a state may assume constitutional obligations and then ruthlessly disregard them at the whim of a legislative body, the constitution is reduced to a mere scrap of paper."

Why Bother Cooking when Jerseys are READY?

THERE is a big difference in the work of preparing cooked cereals in hot summer and serving ready-cooked Jerseys IN ONE MINUTE.

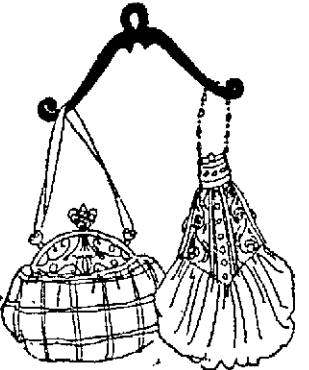

Jersey Corn Flakes have a delicate corn flavor and are highly nourishing and digestible. Made from the inner hearts of choice white maize—have a body and firmness that class them as a real food—unlike old-style corn flakes that grow mushy in milk. Jerseys stay crisp and buoyant until the last spoonful is eaten. Children eat them five times a day.

Pullman Cars Form Aladdin Cities For Shriners' Convention

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Aladdin cities designed to house from 3,000 to 40,000 persons are springing up just outside of Washington in preparation for the Shriners' convention next week. They are located near Alexandria, Va., and Remling and Eckington, Md., with Pullman cars by the hundreds forming the bones of the inhabitants.

Except for the peculiar type of houses these "towns" are to be models. They have their own water and sewerage systems, play grounds and public baths, as well as their own police and fire departments. Dining cars will operate day and night and shuttle trains will be run direct from the "towns" to Washington.

The band, civil war veterans, Spanish American war and world war veterans, citizens and flower and flag bearing boys and girls followed the colors to the cemetery, where they entered the north gate, the band playing. Prayer, the ritual of the American Legion, tips and details of soldiers and children decorating the graves, comprised the simple and impressive services preceding the address of memorial. The address, which was delivered by Rev. G. H. Weaver, was a stirring message of patriotism.

On the graves of about half a hundred soldiers of four wars of the country, from William A. Lucas of revolutionary service, his son, John Lucas, who platted Lucasville, of the war of 1812 to the great majority of the boys of 1865, and the two world war soldiers, were placed flags and flowers. Since the Memorial Day last year, two more veterans of the civil war here have answered the last roll call and joined their comrades on the other side, and only seven of the members of the Grand Army of the Republic, George Marsh, Jacob Benson, Nicholas Reese, J. T. McClellan, John W. Monk, David Musie and W. H. Musie today were here to join in the observances of this day of reverence and appreciation. To the strains of music of the band the crowds dispersed, closing one perfect Memorial Day.

It is to be noted with pride the accomplishment of the Lucasville band, on this, its first big public participation, and a great deal of appreciation is due the many local folks who have assisted in perfecting this organization and to its leader, Esso Davis, who has given freely of time and labor.

The committee desires to thank cordially the people of Lucasville and surrounding country for their splendid response to the request for flowers.

In Thirty Years The Sam'l. Horchow Co. Has Had A Phenomenal Growth

The Samuel Horchow company, as it is now, representing the best, the finest in the furniture line, in Portsmouth, grew out of a very small beginning.

Its founder, Mr. Samuel Horchow, came to Portsmouth thirty years ago and settled down to take up the work of helping to build up Portsmouth and its business interests, starting out in selling household articles from house to house.

By honesty, service and decent business methods, Mr. Horchow built up the largest establishment in the house furnishing line in the city of Portsmouth.

Seventeen years ago, the business was incorporated under the name of The Samuel Horchow company, having for its stockholders only the members of his own family. The business was then moved to its present location, 522-544 Galila Street.

Five years later, Mr. Horchow purchased the building in which his business is located and proceeded to improve all the departments to meet the needs of his large business.

Today, The Samuel Horchow company stands for fairness, service, straight forward dealing and high class merchandise. Any city should be proud of an establishment like the one which The Samuel Horchow company is conducting and its success is due to the honesty, integrity and fair dealing of its members.

In 1920, Mr. Horchow gave one-half interest in the business to his two sons, Joseph Horchow and Leo Horchow and, today, the business is mainly carried on by the younger generation, on the same principles, the same methods and with the same fairness as established by himself.

curiously but it was one out of hundreds of other statements issued by the Republican national committee supporting the state department's policy. Mr. Adams wasn't here when it was issued and the incident has been brushed aside as having no more significance than the scores of indiscretions which subordinates in public committees of the political parties commit from time to time in their page proofs of publicity and partisan clamoring.

The foes of the league court have been provoked into extreme statements by the irritated statements of friends of the league of nations that admission to the world court means ultimate entry in the league itself. The Republican national committee has to keep on hammering the issue covered in Mr. Harding's New York speech to the effect that he and his party have turned their backs on American membership in the league. Not a word in Mr. Adams' latest statements was said about the world court. The assertion was made, on the other hand, that the foreign policy presumably upheld in the election of 1920 by the votes of the people is still being supported by the Republican national committee. This can also be interpreted as meaning that Mr. Harding hasn't departed from pledges made in the 1920 campaign. The president came out then for a world court and feels he is entirely consistent. And Chairman Adams' statement is an adroit effort to emphasize that nothing more is being done than was expressed by Mr. Harding in his 1920 speeches, namely entrance into the world court.

Some critics inside the party may not accept that view of it, some may insist that the Republican national committee hasn't seen the real obstacle, namely the connection of the world court with the league, but there again it all depends upon individual view point and interpretation. The Republican national committee is going on the assumption that harmony can be maintained, that the world court is not the paramount issue and will not become domestic problems—Mr. Harding himself said so in his New York speech—and the upshot of it all is that the Republican national committee instead of setting out to develop resistance to the world court has really embarked on a course of peace making within the party—a reconciliation of discordant elements at a critical moment in the affairs of the party, a few months before a presidential election. That's all Mr. Adams' statement means.

Cardinals Win From Peebles

The Cardinals of this city walked the Peebles aggregation twice in the same spot by taking both ends of the holiday double bill, the first in the morning and the second in the evening. The morning conflict was a nail-biting one, the afternoon exhibition 12 to 7.

Schumacher was on the firing line for the winners in the first contest and Shover pitched the afternoon battle with Riffe on the hill for the blase athletes. The games were played on the Peebles diamond.

Wheeler Says New York Would Become Rum Runners' Lair

ALBANY, N. Y., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Governor Smith was told by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League at the opening session today of the governor's public hearing on the repeal of the Mullan-Gage act, that New York state would become "the rendezvous of rum runners and liquor bandits of other states" if the bill was signed.

Mr. Wheeler said that the repeal of the enforcement code of the state "would be a fruitless attempt to nullify the constitution." Its sole effect, he asserted, would be to take away from officers of the peace their present power to arrest law breakers.

"By adopting this repealer New York would be in the position of seeking to retain the protection of a national government of laws without contributing to that protection," he said, "to repeal a law necessary to enforce the constitution and substitute nothing for it, is plain and palpable nullification."

"It is nullification of the slacker type that stands idly by and sees life and property destroyed that could be saved. If a state may assume constitutional obligations and then ruthlessly disregard them at the whim of a legislative body, the constitution is reduced to a mere scrap of paper."

Mr. Wheeler, citing voluminous decisions of the United States supreme court and other federal and state tribunals, declared that the states were duty bound to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment.

"The repeal of the Mullan-Gage act without providing a substitute is an attempt to defeat or thwart the amendment and a violation of a constitutional duty," he declared.

"Among the 48 legislatures which ratified the Eighteenth Amendment, was that of New York state."

Pullman Cars Form Aladdin Cities For Shriners' Convention

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Aladdin cities designed to house from 3,000 to 40,000 persons are springing up just outside of Washington in preparation for the Shriners' convention next week. They are located near Alexandria, Va., and Benning and Eckington, Md., with Pullman cars by the hundreds forming the homes of the inhabitants.

Except for the peculiar type of houses these "towns" are to be models. They have their own water and sewerage systems, play grounds and public baths, as well as their own police and fire departments. Dining car restaurants will operate day and night and shuttle trains will be run direct from the "towns" to Washington.

Shriners from the south and southwest who do not find accommodation in the capital, will be housed at the Alexandria "town" while those from the east, north and northwest, will live aboard Pullmans at Benning and Eckington.

Special tracks have been laid at the three places with accommodations near Alexandria and 700 cars each at Benning and Eckington. This is expected to relieve congestion at Union Station, where a capacity crowd is expected to pass into the city, exceeding even those at inauguration times.

One Killed—5 Hurt

DAYTON, O., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Mrs. Julia Bates, 52, Dayton, was killed and four others, two women and two men, were seriously injured and one man arrested following a collision of two automobiles on the Lebanon pike six miles south of Dayton last night.

W. F. Baughman, secretary and manager of a local auto agency, is held in the county jail without bail on charges of driving an automobile while intoxicated and possessing intoxicating liquor.

According to witnesses the accident occurred when the car driven by Baughman attempted to pass another machine going in the same direction.

Hit By Pitched Ball; May Die

Realty Value Shows A Steady Rise In Price

"Home Beautiful" Campaign of Times and Sun Is Being Promoted By Portsmouth's Leading Concerns

To own your own home brings the greatest contentment, happiness and pleasure that can come to any man or woman. In Portsmouth which is destined to be one of the most beautiful of the most enterprising and one of the most prosperous municipalities in this country, the opportunity for the home purchaser or the home builder is almost beyond description. The purchase or the construction of the home means not only all the joy and contentment that can come with possession, but it means a tremendous financial advantage for the sober student of the development of Portsmouth will deny that home investment will increase instead of decrease in value.

All one has to do is to look back and see the tremendous things that have been accomplished in the last two decades. What once were farms and open fields for the cultivation of grain, almost within a stone's throw of the city, have been transformed into wonderfully beautiful and attractive residential sections. Real estate which could be purchased for almost a nominal amount has increased in value to an extent almost beyond belief.

Everywhere in every direction which but a few years ago seemed far out in the country, has now become in effect a part of Portsmouth with handsome homes, boulevards, drives and shrubbery, and with all the facilities of the city. Those who have been the pioneers have found themselves almost a month after month being surrounded by neighbors and where roadways once existed are now paved streets with sewage systems, water systems, electric lights and all the modern facilities that make a progressive community.

In almost every direction there are still wonderful opportunities to buy lots for home building. Almost everywhere homes are going up that may be purchased at a cost which within a few years will seem small. New districts are being developed repeatedly where the price of ground is well within the financial reach of most every one.

The home and building enterprises of Portsmouth never have been so well equipped to meet the situation to erect homes in harmony and in compliance with the tastes and desires of the home lover. In connection with the Home Beautiful campaign and artistic design, the home owner is in a position to construct a home that is not only a home, but a masterpiece of art. The best kind of home is the kind that one owns. And the best satisfaction in a home is one that you have constructed out of the savings of your income.

SATISFACTION IN OWNING HOME

There is a satisfaction in owning a home of your own whether large or small, and having to furnish and decorate it in good character and good harmony. This is one of the big reasons why the builders and those who are opening up for development new home areas are taking the vital coordinate interest in the general plan for the Home Beautiful.

The appeal to the home owner already has aroused a tremendous interest in the hearts of every one, and the demand for homes and more homes will not only be continuous but grow in volume from week to week.

This is the big controlling spirit of The Daily Times and Morning Sun's great campaign to arouse interest in the American home lover, an interest which will grow and will bear fruit far beyond the dreams of all expectations of refined men and women who are backing in every possible way the movement to arouse every one to the advantages and pleasures and comforts of a real home.

The builders and real estate men of Portsmouth are keenly alive to the situation and are ready to render every service possible in this forward movement to make Portsmouth the greatest city of homes in the country. The best and most effective way and soundest policy in planning your home is to consult the builder and the real estate expert, who knows by long experience and by expert knowledge better than any one where and how and in what manner to go about securing a good location and best advantages, and the most advantageous conditions under which the home lover may realize the dreams of having a home of his own.

The three exhibition homes, all of them typical and located in various sections of the city, will give a good idea what the modern home is. For the home seeker they are just the beginning, for there are thousands of other beautiful places that can be secured either already built, or sites where the building of a new home will give you every satisfaction, both in surroundings, location and convenience.

Columbus Woman Tells How Ka-di-ol Relieved Her Ills in Very Short Time.

Ka-di-ol is designed to relieve, Kachid, liver and kidney trouble, rheumatism, and a run-down, debilitated system. That it fulfills its purpose in the majority of cases is evidenced by the numerous testimonials which are daily received. In fact, a treatment of Ka-di-ol has helped them. Among those recently benefited is the following from Mrs. Paul Christian of 674 M. Vernon Avenue, Columbus, who says: "Until recently I suffered constantly from indigestion and stomach trouble. After eating the simplest sort of food, or even taking a small drink of water or other liquid I would almost immediately have the most miserable pains in my stomach. I felt continually tired and sore and was very nervous. My complexion was very yellow; like I might have jaundice. I was advised to try Ka-di-ol and, after taking a treatment of a few weeks ago, the results have been most gratifying; since that time I have increased in weight several pounds and can eat anything with relish and without my stomach feeling affected in the least. I feel continually better and looking as well as I have been for a long time. I can truthfully say that Ka-di-ol has done me more good than I ever expected and I am glad to give this testimonial for the food it may do others."

Every spoonful of Kellogg's Bran helps free you from toxic poisons!

Constipation is largely responsible for auto-intoxication that leads to dangerous diseases unless it is not only checked but permanently relieved. Constipation, in fact, is the basis of a majority of human ailments which could be headed off if people would only help rid themselves of this serious, health-undermining condition, which can be easily done.

Constipation must be fought to a finish—not with pills and cathartics, which are dangerous to the delicate membranes of the intestines and tend to break down the system. Kellogg's Bran is the best laxative, the greatest cereal, the most healthful food. Kellogg's Bran works like a magnet, drawing out the poisons and leaving the system clean and healthy.

Kellogg's Bran is wonderful in its work because it is ALL BRAN. And, to get permanent relief, ALL BRAN is a necessity, for it is the "bulk" of Kellogg's Bran that sweeps and purges, ridding the system of poisons and leaving the system clean and healthy. Kellogg's Bran regularly—at least two tablespoonsful daily; as much with each meal in chronic cases—and we guarantee that you will get relief permanently and naturally.

Kellogg's Bran is delicious. You do not have to learn to like it. Eat it as a cereal or sprinkle on or mix with hot or cold cereals. Or, cook it with hot cereals, allowing the table-spoonful of each of Kellogg's Bran to make a delicious cereal.

Leading hotels, clubs and restaurants serve Kellogg's Bran in individual packages. All grocers.

FOOT SORENESS

When Joint-Ease Soaks In Foot Agony Gets Out—Quick

You can't get rid of sore, inflamed, itching feet unless the remedy you use soaks right into the many joints and tendons of the feet.

For that is where all foot trouble starts.

Treating the skin with powders and ointments does no real good—it's a thing of the past—try the new way.

Just rub on Joint-Ease—Watch it work right in one minute!—The worst sort of sore feet are like new in a couple of days! It's a painless preparation and a tube is only 60 cents.

"The Ampico" On Display

At Summers & Son's

The local music house of Summers & Son have been appointed exclusive representatives for Portsmouth and Southern Ohio for "The Ampico." The Ampico re-creates the artist. Comparatively few people, however, are familiar with the wonders of this new instrument. Many confuse it with a regular player piano. Yet it differs greatly. It is an electrically impelled instrument that re-creates the talented playing of the great pianists, bringing forth every variation of the artists' touch and every subtlety of expression and tone color. Be sure to hear this wonderful musical achievement.

Sciotoville Seniors To Present Clever Class Play

The Senior class of Sciotoville high school will present their class play, "What Happened to Jones?" on Friday and Saturday nights of this week in the Sciotoville high school auditorium.

The play will start at eight o'clock sharp with the high school orchestra of 100 pieces under the direction of Miss Esther Severinghaus furnishing the music. The members of the cast have been chosen by Mrs. Walter Gableman and the play promises to be one of the best ever given by a Sciotoville graduating class.

Class night is to be observed next Tuesday night when the graduates will have a program in the high school auditorium.

The cast of characters for "What Happened to Jones?" is as follows: Jones Lynn Sloane; Ebenezer Goodly William Dammann; Anthony Goodly, D. P. Vernon Cross; Richard Heatherly Charles Warnock; Co-wit Vern Sloane; Minerva Lillian Brady; Alona Starlight Lillian Purdy; Helena Mary Williams; Place—New York City. Time—The Present. Hour, 7:15 p. m.

This New Treatment Never Fails to End Piles

Many sufferers from Piles or Hemorrhoids have become despondent because they have been led to believe that their case was hopeless and that there was nothing in the world to help them.

To these people we say, "Go to your druggist and get a original box of MOAVA SUPPOSITORIES." One of these inserted into the rectum according to directions will be found to give immediate relief. They reach the source of the trouble and by their soothing, healing, antiseptic action first ally the pain and soreness and then directly contact with the ulcers and piles cause them to heal up and disappear forever.

This simple, wonderful, low speedily they can be relieved. Even in cases that have steadily resisted all other treatments, MOAVA results have been obtained.

All druggists dispense MOAVA SUPPOSITORIES in the original box or can get it for you on MOAVA NOTICE. ITCHING PILES are not piles in the true sense of the word. They are a local irritation. MOAVA OINTMENT will be found all that is necessary. Advertisement.

SALESMAN WANTED

OPPORTUNITY FOR HIGH CLASS SALES EXECUTIVE

The Williamson Heater Company of Cincinnati, an old reliable and nationally known manufacturer of heating apparatus, is marketing a new gas burner known as "SNOW WHITE," suitable to new houses, professional builders, architects and the housewife. Judged by merchandising experts to hold the greatest national possibilities of recent times.

It drives clothes in ten minutes. Its installation makes the housewife independent of weather conditions. It eliminates the drudgery of carrying clothes outside. It permits washing and ironing to be done the same morning. In smoky communities it is indispensable. Every woman appreciates its advantages. It appeals to the professional builder, as it enhances the suitability of his building. It appeals to the apartment owner in eliminating the back yard problem. To the most exacting of owners it is a high grade home it sells itself. The price is less than any other laundry equipment. Every resident and apartment owner should have one.

Other cities operating successfully. We have a definite, proved method of sales procedure. Large quantities of literature are available for further procedure. Free—Sufficient material to establish show room. 2nd—A successful sales experience. 3rd—An unimpeachable personal record. 4th—Vision to realize the potential possibilities. To such a person we can offer a money-making opportunity.

Tell us fully of your qualifications along the above lines, and we will gladly put this over in a big way. Address the Dryer Division of the Williamson Heater Company, Cincinnati, Ohio. Advertisement.

Market News

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, May 31—Fresh buying power came into today's stock market and prices resumed their upward movement. A brisk demand for the rails was noted in the steel, equipment, auto, motor and motor accessories. Some of the minor oils were slightly heavy. Gains of a point or more were registered on initial sales by Crucible Steel, Stewart Warner Speedometer and U. S. Steel Iron Pipe preferred.

Equipment assumed the leadership in the advance in the first half hour. American Locomotive rising 2 1/2 points to 14 3/4, a new high for the year and Baldwin moving up 1 1/2. Underwood Typewriter jumped 3 points to a new high and Studebaker extended its gain to 2 points. Gains of a point or more also were recorded by Republic Steel, American Can, National Lead, May Department Stores, Canadian Pacific, Bosch Magneto, California Petroleum and Kinney Company. Stewart Warner extended its gain to 2 1/2. There were a few isolated heavy spots, notably Simmons Company and American Agricultural Chemical, off a point and Marine preferred and White Motors each off 1/4. Foreign exchanges opened irregular. Demand sterling advanced 1/2 cent to $4.62 1/2 and French francs eased slightly to 65.88. German marks continued their course toward the vanishing point, being quoted nearly 2 1/2 points lower at 90.14 1/2 cents, another new low record.

Speculative sentiment continued bullish during the morning, indications of accumulation being noted in several popular industries. Trading in rails became rather lethargic, and oils, with the exception of California Petroleum, which advanced 3 1/2 points, were sluggish. Hearings of Standard Oil and Phillips Petroleum was attributed to speculative uncertainty over the earnings position because of relatively low crude oil prices. Pools again were active. General Electric advanced 3 1/2 points and Stewart Warner extended its gain to 2 1/2. Gains of 2 to 2 1/2 points were recorded before noon by Mark Truck, Crucible Steel, Studebaker, Westinghouse Electric, Famous Players, Colorado Fuel, Manhattan Electric Supply and Kinney Company. The last named touched a new top for the year. Call money opened at five per cent.

Conflicting price movements took place in today's stock market. An early period of strength was followed by a reactionary spell induced by sentimental selling of oil shares following the filing of a bankruptcy petition against the arrest curb market house. An irregular recovery took place during the close. Sales approximated 700,000 shares.

U. S. ARMY OFFICER FREED BY CHINESE

Smith Holds Open Hearing On Dry Enforcement

ALBANY, N. Y., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Governor Smith was almost the only person in Albany today who professed to have an open mind on the advisability of signing or vetoing the legislature's bill for repeal of the Mullan-Gage state prohibition-enforcement act.

Officially undecided, despite a flood of letters and telegrams that have deluged him from partisans of both sides and despite a vast amount of political pressure that has been brought to bear, he went up to the capitol seeking more light to guide him to a decision at a bi-partisan hearing, scheduled to start at noon in the assembly chamber.

Every train that arrived during the forenoon had its quota of enthusiasts and indications were that the 1,500 chairs that had been placed in the hall would prove far from adequate.

Opponents of repeal were primed with arguments that to make the repeal bill law would leave New York state a prey to bootleggers with only a handful of federal agents to enforce a law, the enforcement of which to date has been done for the most part by state forces.

Orville S. Polansky, counsel for the State Anti-Saloon League, had prepared figures showing that state agencies, since the enactment of the Mullan-Gage act, had done 25 per cent more enforcement than federal agents. He said that while the federal courts had convicted only 2,172 bootleggers, the state courts had convicted 14,142 at the start of 1922 to 2,565 at the end of the year.

Dr. Edward Hendrick, former president of the Chemists Club of New York, and a lecturer on chemistry at the college of the City of New York, planned to attack the Mullan-Gage bill as an enemy of industry. A statement he prepared for the governor, declared that while the Volstead act defined as intoxicating liquor, the manufacture or sale of which is prohibited by the Eighteenth Amendment, only such compounds containing more than one-half of one per cent of alcohol as may be classed as "for beverage purposes" the Mullan-Gage act defines all compounds containing more than one-half of one per cent alcohol as intoxicating liquors.

No political pressure was to be applied at today's hearing. Most of it already had been applied. The governor has been told that if he signs the repealer he has a good chance to lead the Democratic party in the 1924 presidential campaign on a wet platform.

He has also been told that if he vetoes the repealer he has a good chance to lead the Democratic party in the 1924 presidential campaign on a wet platform.

The difference is one of advisers profess to think he could make himself more popular by striking the key note by signing the repealer while others say he ought to veto the repealer to show his respect for the Eighteenth Amendment, and Volstead act as long as they stand and then seek the presidential nomination on a platform aimed at their modification.

Only Spiritual Reform Can Prevent Disaster Doyle Says Northcliffe's Spirit Warns Americans

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Sir J. Conan Doyle says he has had a message from Lord Northcliffe's spirit saying that only a wave of spiritual reform can save the world from plunging headlong into a catastrophe which will make the world war seem insignificant.

"The American people," Lord Northcliffe's message said, "are too busy. That was the mistake I made in my life time. I was too busy then but I understand now that wisdom is lost in the scramble for material progress. When men lose wisdom they invite disaster."

Sir Arthur declared that he also has received other messages from the spiritual world which verified the statements made by Lord Northcliffe's spirit. Some even have gone so far as to predict that the disaster will descend during his life time, Sir Arthur said.

Kitchin, Prominent Democrat, Succumbs

WILSON, N. C., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Representative Claude Kitchin, former Democratic leader in the house of representatives, died here early today.

Death had been expected for three days but the patient rallied yesterday afternoon and last night a spark of hope was held out for his recovery, but he began sinking shortly before midnight and died soon afterward.

At the bedside were Mrs. Kitchin, Mrs. Lewis Suter, daughter, Miss Kitchin, a son, and Dr. Thurman Kitchin, a brother.

The body will be taken to Mr. Kitchin's old home at Scotland Neck, where the funeral will be held. Arrangements for the funeral had not been completed.

Dr. C. A. Woodward said Mr. Kitchin's death was the culmination of complications which developed after he suffered a stroke of paralysis in 1920. He had never been in good health since.

During his months of suffering Mr. Kitchin always maintained a bright, cheerful and courageous disposition, which characterized his more than twenty years on the floor of congress.

Mr. Kitchin suffered his stroke of paralysis in April, 1920, a few months after he had delivered an address in congress on the peace resolution. He returned to his seat in December, but did not remain long, being forced to go to his home again.

On the advice of his physicians Mr. Kitchin shortly afterward entered a hospital at Albany, N. Y., where he underwent an operation. Mr. Kitchin's friends thought he would soon be able to resume the leadership in the house. Shortly after his return, however, he went to his home at Scotland Neck, Halifax county, to take a long rest.

Last winter Mr. Kitchin contracted influenza which developed into pneumonia, and he never completely recovered, complications setting in and causing his death.

Officials Invited

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—President Harding, members of the cabinet and military officials of the army, navy and marine corps were invited guests for the annual school concert today by Washington school children. Eight thousand children composed the chorus which was supplemented on the program by selections by the Marine Band.

War Trophies Worry 'Em

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—War trophies brought back from France by the A. E. F. after their capture from the Germans are proving an increasing embarrassment to the War Department, particularly with the approaching disposition of the port of Newark, N. J., army base site and facilities, a large portion of the nearly 3,000,000 big and little cannons, rifles, machine guns and other fighting equipment of the enemy still being stored at that place. The remainder of them is in storage at Norfolk.

Efforts through two years to get legislation through congress for the disposition of the war trophies to the various states have failed. A new bill is in process of formulation at the War Department.

Turkey Gives Up Castelorizo

LAUSANNE, May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Turkey has withdrawn her claim to Castelorizo, thus admitting Italian sovereignty over the island which lies off the Asia Minor coast. Announcement of this decision came after a conversation between Ismet Pasha and G. C. Montagna, chief delegates of the two countries at the Near East peace conference.

Japs Send Their Views

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Japan today joined the group of foreign powers which have made representations to the State Department in connection with the supreme court decision on ship rapids. On instructions from Tokyo the views of the Japanese government were presented verbally by Ambassador Hamihara.

Corset Stay Deflects Bullet

CINCINNATI, O., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—A steel stay in the corset worn by Mrs. Anna Peddenopol, 47, stopped a bullet fired by her husband, Bernard, 50, a metal worker, today, and saved her life. Mrs. Peddenopol was shot in the chest when her husband met her on the street and fired four shots. One of the bullets struck the corset stay, another caused a superficial wound in Mrs. Peddenopol's hip, and the other two went wild.

Peddenopol was arrested. He said he shot his wife because she refused to live with him.

Petrograd Opera House Burns; Many Are Killed And Hurt

HELSINGFORS, FINLAND, May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—The Petrograd opera house was burned last night and many in the audience were killed during a panic stricken rush for the exits, according to a Central News despatch received here.

The dress of one of the performers caught fire and the flames quickly spread to the scenery. The safety curtain was lowered but panic had already seized the audience and there was a wild rush to the exits. The despatch gave no details as to the number of casualties other than the statement that "many were killed and more injured."

The efforts of the fire brigade were fruitless and the building was destroyed.

Forest Fires Checked

SUPERIOR, WIS., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Reports today indicate that all forest fires which raged throughout the northwest during the past week, have been checked.

Starts Golf Marathon

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Clarence Mangham, professional of the municipal golf course here started at 5:00 o'clock this morning on a golf marathon. He will endeavor to herd the dimpled sphere around the course for a total of 30 rounds or 180 holes, thus breaking the world's record of 161.

Mangham in a test round yesterday found that he could average a hole every four minutes. This figures up at 72 minutes per round which will keep him on the links for about twelve hours.

Mangham played remarkable golf, although he kept his coolies at a trot. He made his first round in 73 and his second in 81. The air is heavy and the golfer was wet with perspiration but grinning and striding strongly.

Elks To Have Charge

WASHINGTON, C. D., May 31.—(By the United Press)—The 72 calibre revolver with which Jesse W. Smith, close personal friend of President Harding and Attorney General Daugherty in Daugherty's apartment in Washington, D. C., was bought at a local hardware store last Friday. Smith who paid his last visit to the town, Friday, said he was buying the revolver for the attorney general with whom he had been living in Washington. The Washington C. H. Lodge of Elks will have charge of Smith's funeral here tomorrow. He has no relatives here. Dr. L. L. Brooks, Smith's physician, attributed the suicide to mental depression as a result of failing health.

Fire Chiefs To Meet

COLUMBUS, O., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—At the invitation of State Fire Marshal Louis F. Miller, fire chiefs of Ohio, will gather here June 5 and 6 to discuss fire fighting problems.

Among speakers who will address the convention are Prof. R. A. Brown, Ohio State University, and Dr. E. A. Hayhurst, of the state department of health, who will talk on "dangers of carbon monoxide."

COLUMBUS, O., May 31.—Jack Perry, Pittsburgh middleweight, and Anthony Downey, Columbus, have been matched for a 12 round bout to be staged here Monday night. It was announced today.

Accidentally Kills Self

NEW YORK, May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Francis J. Bangle, 11 years old, accidentally killed himself while playing dead in his little dog Browne would whine in sorrow, the police believe.

Francis' body with two neckties drawn in a slip-knot about the neck was found hanging from a door knob in their Brooklyn home last night by his six-year-old sister Eleanor, when she returned with Mrs. Daugherty from the movies. Browne was muzzling his dead master and whining.

Hundred Children Patients Rescued

PITTSBURGH, PA., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—The children's hospital of Pittsburgh, was destroyed by fire today. More than one hundred little patients, most of them crippled, were moved to another hospital nearby. So far as the authorities were able to determine, there was no loss of life.

Four firemen were injured when the roof of the administration building fell in and two of them were taken to a hospital unconscious. A policeman was overcome by formaldehyde fumes.

The fire started by the explosion of a water heater. The loss was estimated at $65,000.

The main building built many years ago, and widely known, as the Moorhead home, was the center of a number of frame wings built as the needs of hospital increased. The fire started in one of the wings and spread so rapidly that fire chiefs saw the place was doomed, and directed their attention to saving the children.

Nurses, marshalled under Mrs. Ford, the superintendent, and reinforced by workmen from factories, and a trolley barn in the neighborhood, carried out the children while a dozen or more automobiles from residences nearby drove close to the burning buildings and hurried them to the other hospital a few blocks away.

Adams Seeks Peace In Republican Ranks

(Copyright 1923 By The Portsmouth Daily Times)

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Published reports assuming that the statement issued by John T. Adams, chairman of the Republican national committee, on Tuesday, was intended as an attack on President Harding's world court policies, are without foundation. This assurance was given today by the man who wrote the statement, Chairman Adams himself, who knows what he intended to convey and the object he had in mind.

The situation inside the Republican national committee is unusual. There is no secret made of the fact that differences of opinion exist as to the wisdom of the world court issue. The Republican national committee headquarters is the agency that tries to preserve harmony in the party without taking sides. Chairman Adams is a 100 per cent Harding man. He is on such intimate terms with the president that he would not write a statement that could offend him. On the other hand, he did not consult the president about the philosophy of the statement because he believed it is a matter entirely within the political sphere of the party and one that can best be adjusted by the mediating influence of COLUMBUS, O., May 31.—Jack Perry, Pittsburgh middleweight, and Anthony Downey, Columbus, have been matched for a 12 round bout to be staged here Monday night. It was announced today.

Accidentally Kills Self

NEW YORK, May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Francis J. Bangle, 11 years old, accidentally killed himself while playing dead in his little dog Browne would whine in sorrow, the police believe.

Francis' body with two neckties drawn in a slip-knot about the neck was found hanging from a door knob in their Brooklyn home last night by his six-year-old sister Eleanor, when she returned with Mrs. Daugherty from the movies. Browne was muzzling his dead master and whining.

Foley And Stoneham Called In Failure

Charles A. Stoneham and Tom Foley.

In the investigation into the $500,000 failure of the alleged "bucket shop" of E. M. Fuller and Company, of New York, the referee in bankruptcy, Harold P. Coffin, has summoned Tom Foley, veteran "boss" in Tammany Hall and political go-to Governor Albert E. Smith and Charles A. Stoneham, broker and owner of the New York Giants. The referee wishes to know why a check for $250,000 was paid by Fuller to Foley a few days before the failure and this check was never put through Foley's bank account, but was cashed by Stoneham. Other transactions will be inquired into.

Elks To Have Charge

WASHINGTON, C. D., May 31.—(By the United Press)—The 72 calibre revolver with which Jesse W. Smith, close personal friend of President Harding and Attorney General Daugherty in Daugherty's apartment in Washington, D. C., was bought at a local hardware store last Friday. Smith who paid his last visit to the town, Friday, said he was buying the revolver for the attorney general with whom he had been living in Washington. The Washington C. H. Lodge of Elks will have charge of Smith's funeral here tomorrow. He has no relatives here. Dr. L. L. Brooks, Smith's physician, attributed the suicide to mental depression as a result of failing health.

Fire Chiefs To Meet

COLUMBUS, O., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—At the invitation of State Fire Marshal Louis F. Miller, fire chiefs of Ohio, will gather here June 5 and 6 to discuss fire fighting problems.

Among speakers who will address the convention are Prof. R. A. Brown, Ohio State University, and Dr. E. A. Hayhurst, of the state department of health, who will talk on "dangers of carbon monoxide."

Negotiations For The Release Of Others Proceeding

TIENTSIN, May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Hope for the speedy release of all the foreign captives held by the bandits of Paotzu Mountain brightened almost to assurance today with the news that Major Robert A. Allen, U. S. A., and W. Smith, of Manchester, England, have been freed unconditionally and that of the prisoners remaining in the inextricable fortress at the summit of the mountain, Major Roland W. Pinger, U. S. A., and Leo Solomon, American, have been moved to a lower level.

A message from Tsoochwang said that "negotiations" are going on favorably. The release of Major Allen and Smith left twelve foreign captives. Besides Major Pinger and Mr. Solomon, the Americans among them include Leon Felemana of Chicago, and Shanghai; Jerome A. Healey, of New York and Shanghai, and John B. Powell, Shanghai newspaper publisher.

In a letter to the Associated Press, written before he was moved down from the summit, Major Pinger expressed gratitude that his parents had been kept informed of his situation.

"While we can see for sixty miles around," he wrote, "we hear only what little gossip percolates from the temples where the other foreigners are stationed. None of the bandit chiefs come up to the top. We three are kept busy, correspondence taking a substantial share of the day. We are constantly improving the appearance and utility of the 'Nap Club'. Solomon cooks on a charcoal stove; Allen and I alternate at dish washing, which we view as a wagger because of the fater-borh diseases.

"With plenty of food and comfortable cots, we cannot help comparing our lot with that of the Chinese child captives here. One kiddie's ribs are sticking out as infamously pictures. Every time we give them food, the bandits snatch it away.

Major Pinger said he was preparing a detailed narrative of his experiences for the American press.

Desperado Falls From Bullets Of Possemen

NORTH BAY, ONT., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—After two weeks of terror, today this town stood free of the menace of Leo Rogers, 21-year-old desperado, who last night fell before the bullets of a posse that had sought him since May 16, when he escaped from court, where he was on trial for a minor offense, when he flourished a card-board pistol.

Two men were killed and several fell wounded by bullets from his pistols before the youth was brought down when surprised by possemen who came upon him as he was washing his hands in Lake Nipissing.

On various occasions Rogers had threatened to kill North Bay's police chief and the judge before whom he was being tried at the time of his escape. The population was in a state of terror during the time he was at large.

Arrested by Constable Fred LeGrove, for theft, Rogers escaped from court May 16. The next day he telephoned the North Bay authorities that they could find him at a certain lonely spot near here. A posse found him true to his word. LeGrove, in the lead, was shot to death. The desperado disappeared in the underbrush.

For days he was trailed but always managed to make his escape. An expert woodsman and an uttering shot with pistol or rifle, his pursuers held him in high respect. Several were wounded when posse apparently had singled him in.

Early yesterday watchers saw a youth slink into the home of the father of the desperado. Aid was summoned, as the house was surrounded, and the posse leaders entered. They were met by a fusillade of shots. Sergeant Urquhart, in charge, was shot to death, a bullet through the heart. Although the house was surrounded, Rogers made his way through the cordons and again escaped into the woods. The possemen found his trail at daylight and came upon the youth at nightfall.

Episcopal Clergyman Commits Suicide

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Dr. James M. Bridgman, a widely known Episcopal clergyman and university instructor, shot and killed himself here today.

Dr. Bridgman, who was 76 years old, was rector emeritus of St. Paul's Church here, which he founded. He had served in various churches and had been a lecturer on ethics and philosophy in various educational institutions over the country. At one time he was president of the Society for Philosophical Inquiry.

Until a few moments before his death Dr. Bridgman had been seated with members of his family on the veranda of their home. He was planning of being fired, went to his bedroom upstairs and fired the shot which ended his life almost instantly.

Dr. Bridgman was a native of Harvard, Pa., and a graduate of Harvard and of the Episcopal Theological school at Cambridge. He had held pastorates at Wellsville, N. Y., and Bedford, Pa., before coming to Washington in 1892, and had been an instructor in the Seabury school in Minnesota and other institutions and a lecturer for the Carnegie Foundation.

Just before he ended his life, Dr. Bridgman had engaged in a long conversation with his son, H. D. Bridgman, now the active pastor of All Souls' church. When he retired to his room he lay down on the bed. A housemaid who entered soon afterward with a blanket for him, found him standing before the dresser with a revolver pointed at his head.

"It's all over now, my son," she quoted him as saying just before he fired the fatal shot.

New Suspect In Mills Case

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—County officials have unearthed a new suspect in their investigation into the murder last September of the Rev. Edward Hall and his choir leader, Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills. It was learned today.

Officials admitted that a man previously questioned and who had presented an alibi, now was the subject of investigation. It was said his story which earlier had caused his elimination as a suspect, had been found to be untrue in essential details.

Recent investigations, officials said, had further convinced them that the story of Mrs. Jane Gibson, a nearby farmer woman, was without foundation. Mrs. Gibson maintained she had seen a man and a woman unidentified by her, commit the murders.

Receivership Asked For Knights Of Ku Klux Klan; Temporary Restraining Orders Secured

ALBANY, Ga., May 31.—Receivership for the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan was asked in a petition filed in the Fulton county superior court today by David M. Rittenhouse, and others of Philadelphia, who charged gross mismanagement to W. H. Evans, Imperial Wizard. The petition also charged that the Imperial Wizard and W. J. Simmons, Klan Emperor, entered into a collusion in settling the recent controversy involving control of the organization.

Judge Humphreys signed an order temporarily restraining the use of any Klan funds and citing the defendants to show cause before him on June 9, why the petition should not be granted. Judge Humphreys also restrained the use of any Klan money to pay expense of the meeting of the Klansmen called by Imperial Wizard Evans to meet in Washington June 1 and 2.

The defendants likewise are temporarily enjoined from removing the headquarters of the Klan from Atlanta. Twenty other Klansmen are named in the petition in addition to Imperial Wizard Evans, and Emperor Simmons. The petition also charges Dr. Evans and Colonel Simmons with having violated the patriotic principles and with having tried to convert the Klan into a purely money making machine.

Dr. Evans is charged by the petitioners with having appointed Bertram G. Christian, head of the department of propagation in the State of Illinois under an alleged agreement that he and Christian would split five dollars of the initiation fee on a fifty-fifty basis.

Imperial Wizard Evans the petition alleged, maintains a large opinionnaire system and on one occasion, the petition alleges, he issued an expenditure of $68,000 to agents who were to give him information which would aid him in retaining supreme power over the Klan.

It was further charged that this and similar acts on the part of Dr. Evans and his associates in dis-integrating the invisible empire and causing rebellion in many quarters. Those named as defendants include E. O. Stephenson, of Columbus, Ohio, and Charles J. Orblson, Indianapolis.

Eight Local Men Are Indicted By The Federal Grand Jury

CINCINNATI, O., May 31.—Portsmouth and Hamilton men were named in indictments returned here today by the federal grand jury.

Jack H. Crowe, Portsmouth, was indicted on a charge of selling an army revolver belonging to the government and the following were charged in indictments with alleged violation of the prohibition law: Harold V. Morris, Decker Walker, Allen Walker, Richard McCann, Edward Sautter, Thomas Jones and Edward Coleman, all of Portsmouth; George B. Rigley, Charles P. Archart, and was fined $300 and costs by Judge Smith Hickenlooper.

Butler county. Archart is a blind man. August Meyer, owner of the Stockton club, a roadhouse near Hamilton, pleaded guilty to an indictment charging illegal possession of beer and was fined $300 and costs by Judge Smith Hickenlooper.

Morris and Decker and Allen Walker were arrested recently after a 200 gallon still was found in the Morris home on Twentieth street. McCann and Sautter were arrested when the McCann soft drink place at Eleventh and Findlay streets was raided.

Kills Brother To Protect Mother

POMEROY, O., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Edward Pritchard today shot and killed his brother, William, a former inmate of the state insane asylum at Athens, after the latter had attacked his aged mother. Edward Pritchard, who is a cripple, when he saw his mother attacked, he secured a revolver and shot his brother three times. Before William died he expressed the wish that no charges be placed against his brother.

Edward is being held in the county jail here on a charge of murder. The Pritchards reside at Apple Grove, near here.

New Boston Meat Dealer Is Missing

No trace has been found of Wyatt Ladd, meat dealer of 4045 Gallia street, New Boston, who left home about four o'clock Wednesday morning to go to his place of business, but never showed up there or at home again during the day. His absence became known when young men employed in the meat market waited for him to open up the place of business yesterday morning. Joseph Cooley and Walter White are the clerks looking for Mr. Ladd. Ladd lives at 4202 Pine street, New Boston. His wife says that he remarked to her that he was going to work early so he could get home early for the holiday. Relatives were called yesterday evening by Mrs. Ladd, but she could not locate him last night or today. Ladd also has a daughter, Annabelle.

17 Year Locusts Appear In County

Seventeen year locusts have made their appearance in Scioto county.

Charles N. Franck, who has a farm in Bloom township, visited his place yesterday and reports that he found great numbers of the locusts damaging his young fruit trees.

T. H. Parks, cytologist of the extension department, Ohio State University, has sent out information to county farm agents to be on the lookout for the pests which were in this section of the state in 1906. The same brood is due again this year. Advance word is that no great damage is expected. History of this brood showing that the southern Ohio counties visited in 1906 were not seriously damaged.

Farmers in all sections of the county are urged to watch for the visit of the locusts and to report the damage caused by them.

If You Build with Brick

HOME PLANNING ENGAGING STUDY

Requires Careful Consideration of Many Points.

CHOOSE LOCATION FIRST

Selection of Home Site Is First of Many Problems and Influences to Be Overcome by Home Builders.

The sage advice to catch your rabbit before making a pie may well be duplicated in any advice concerning the construction of a house. First get your lot, one generous enough for your needs and in as desirable a location as possible.

Building a house, except for the very wealthy, is certain to be a compromise. You would rather build it in the more expensive manner in a more desirable location; but very naturally the limitations of your pocket book must be considered.

Assuming that you have not yet purchased your building lot you are then unrestricted in your choice. Keep in mind the transportation to and from your work, look to the schools, churches and parks, and consider, if you can, the future of the neighborhood.

A lot may best be chosen if you already have in mind the type of house you intend to build. Building lots are wide or narrow, sometimes upon a corner, and others are in the center of the block. Remember that the site will inevitably affect the design and perhaps the size and shape of your house. If your lot is narrow by all means do not contemplate the construction of a house that is wide. The effect will be cramped.

If you own an automobile or contemplate the purchase of one at some future time, do not overlook the garage facilities at the time you build. Many houses have been designed with combined garages, and other plans are laid out to call for a garage with an adequate roadway to it, to be constructed with the home or even at some future time.

Deciding the Size.
The size of the house nearly always puzzles the prospective builder. The best guide to the size by which is primarily meant the number of rooms—is a decision upon the number of bedrooms. Two, three or four bedrooms; you can scarcely contemplate building a house with less than two, and for the ordinary family, four bedrooms should be entirely adequate.

Of the making of house plans, like the making of books, there seems to be no end. One would think that all possible plots for books had been exhausted long ago—and there are those who say they have. Likewise, every kind of house has had itself constructed until a person who desires to erect a home entirely distinctive and individual must call to his aid a most unusual architect.

Distinction in other things, however, is generally held to be of more value than being individual in the matter of house styles. A reasonable conformity to the neighboring houses—provided of course that they have been constructed in good taste—is more to be desired than utter difference.

Each house will then contribute something of value to the others. Nothing is more discouraging to the advocates of "the city beautiful" than a long row of houses, built after factory methods, as alike as peas in a pod. There is no necessity for the lack of diversity, for there are scores of plans which admit of different treatment of precisely similar building lots. Be different, but not too different.

Consider Your Neighbors.
Consider your neighbors, then, both in design and type of house, and the manner in which it stands on the building lot. Often you must compromise, for even though you might prefer to have the house jutting right on the sidewalk, with your yard in the back (after the European fashion) perhaps your neighbor who preceded you in constructing his home has set his house far back or in the center of the lot.

Various types of houses have been found to be more suitable for different sections of the country, and designers of houses have classified the plans to meet the needs of the builder in his locality.

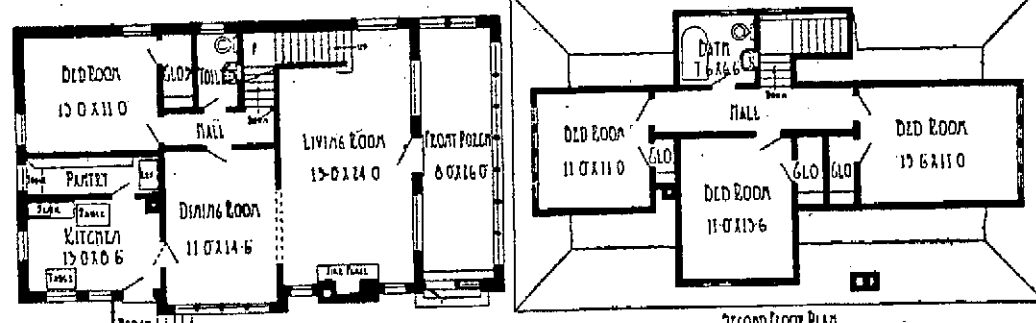

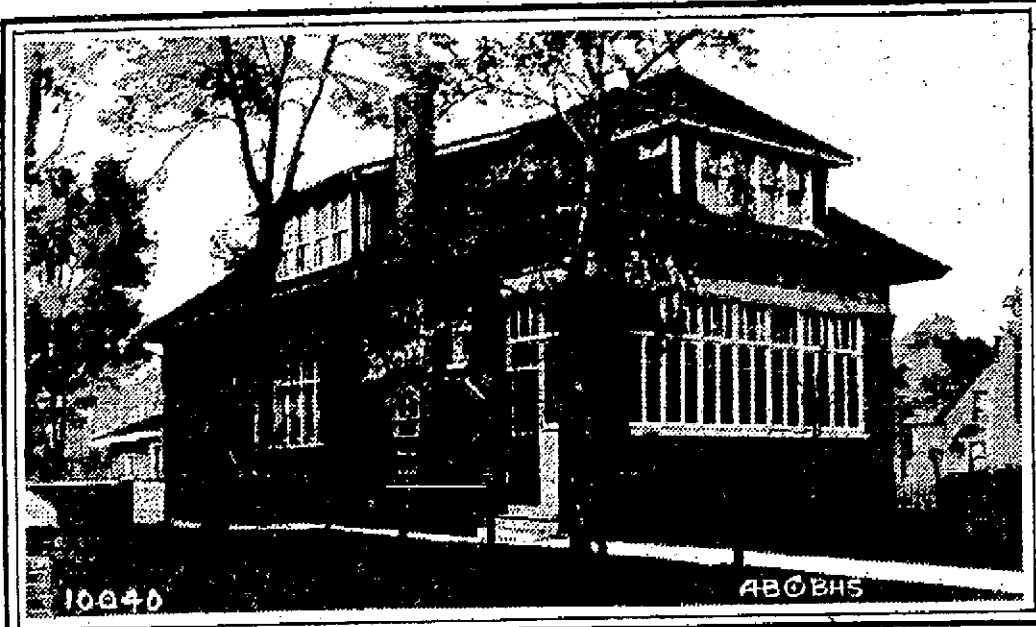

If you are building in the south, you must look to the ventilation of the house, and the heating plant is of a very minor interest. The ceilings should be high, and the windows tall, that a maximum of air will be admitted to the rooms.

An overhanging roof, which will effectively shade the walls from the rays of the sun, will aid in keeping the home cool. A large porch will also be considered among the essential things.

A cellar will not be necessary, for all the space that will be needed for the storing of fuel will be one room, excavated underneath the house.

The builder of a home in the north, on the other hand, will have other problems, including the one of heating. The house will necessarily be more compact, preferably with two stories and a basement, for the furnace and the boiler of a small house, the most popular type of heating plant is probably the warm air furnace, pipeless or piped. Steam heat, hot-water heat and oil-burning plants all have their advantages, although some are much more expensive than others. The selection of the heating plant is one point to which it will give very careful consideration.

A City Type of Bungalow

What is commonly termed the "city type bungalow" is built of so-called fireproof materials. These materials are brick, tile and concrete blocks, covered with either a veneer of face brick, such as the bungalow shown in the accompanying illustration, or with stucco. Building restrictions in the larger cities make this type of construction obligatory, but nevertheless bungalows of this sort are equally adapted to suburbs and smaller cities and towns.

While the bungalow is associated in the minds of most people with a one-story house, architects have noted a second floor to many homes of this style of architecture. The bungalow shown is of the latter type. It will be seen by the floor plan that there are eight rooms, including one bedroom on the first floor and three bedrooms and bath on the second floor. The exterior of the house is pleasing, although rather plain, but not severe. The entrance is at the side and leads into the enclosed porch. This is exceptionally large, being 26 feet wide and 8 feet deep, making a pleasant and comfortable sitting room in either summer or winter. The living room, which is reached through a door at the center of the porch, also is large, being 24 feet long and 13 feet wide. At one end there is an open fireplace, while at the other there is an open stair leading to the second floor. The dining room is connected with the living room through a double-cased opening. This room is 11 by 14 feet, 6 inches.

At the rear of the dining room is the kitchen, 8 feet 6 inches by 13 feet, while at the corner is a bedroom, 11 by 13 feet, with a toilet adjoining it. On the second floor there are three good-sized bedrooms and the bathroom. A basement extends under the whole house, where in is located the heating plant, laundry, storage rooms, etc.

The dimensions of this house are 26 by 48 feet, the width making it suitable for erection on the narrow lots that are common in the cities.

This house may be constructed of brick with the brick veneer, or of frame or tile with the brick exterior. It is a good substantial structure, of pleasing exterior and a comfortably arranged interior.

HOME OWNERSHIP PROMOTES HEALTH

Improved Living Conditions Material Benefit to the Family That Owns Its Home.

By CHARLES B. Ball, Chief Sanitary Inspector, Department of Health, Chicago.

The customary arguments that the ownership of a home inculcates thrift, stabilizes the family and stimulates citizenship, should be supplemented by a further statement that a distinct advantage results to the family who owns its home by an improvement in health conditions. Let us see how this conclusion can be supported by a comparison in detail of the owned home with the rented one.

The single family house, which constitutes by far the greatest number of owned dwellings, stands on a lot of its own and in general, for that reason, provides greater light and ventilation for its rooms than does any form of multiple dwelling. It also furnishes, almost invariably, open space in front and rear, and often on the sides, which spaces are available for play yard for the children and, to some extent at least, open-air exercise for the grown-ups.

A street of such houses provides as well, green grass and trees and a cheerful outlook from within the dwelling, all of which has its health stimulus upon those who occupy the premises, be they young or old.

The Pride of Possession.

With respect to the upkeep of the house and its cleanliness within, a house owned by the family which occupies it almost invariably shows a marked contrast with rented houses in the same block. The housewife, knowing that the property is her own, is much more willing to spend labor in keeping it in a thoroughly clean condition than if such energy is expended on premises likely to be vacated for another occupant. As a result of the family interest, both interior and exterior repair is maintained to an extent not usual in rented premises. While it is sometimes true that leaky roofs, damp walls, broken gutters and defective plumbing are found in houses in which the owner lives, the interest which he takes in his property usually results in the curing of these defects promptly on their occurrence. In respect to exterior repairs, there is generally so marked a contrast in this regard between the owned and the rented houses in a neighborhood that even the casual observer can readily determine in which group to classify any particular premises.

All the conditions referred to above have a more or less marked effect upon the health of the occupants of a dwelling and in addition the well-kept owned house produces a reaction of contentment upon those who dwell therein.

Contentment is a tender plant which does not thrive in rented flats subject to the exigencies of janitor service. It takes deep root and expands only in the fertile soil of ownership and undisputed control.

FIREPLACE IS RESTFUL INFLUENCE IN THE HOME

Colonial Environment Helps Make Living Room the Unit of the Home, Brings Solace, Enjoyment.

The living room fireplace weaves a spell of social contentment and homey ease. Its restful influence is one of the reasons why this room is the real unit of the home. Before the fireplace friends and guests sit and enjoy the dancing firelight while renewing old friendships or enjoying a social hour. The fireplace creates an environment of comfort and relaxation. Around it gathers the family after a day of business activity.

Lavish arrangement dispels the real purpose of a fireplace. While seated before the hearth, one's mind is wooed to peaceful thoughts by the everchanging forms of the flames. Mental ease subtly creeps upon the mind and quiet repose lull one away from the busy day's cares.

The scene changes when youth and spirit enjoy the fireplace. It may be a marshmallow roast or a turkey. Yet the fireplace becomes the hub around which the activities turn.

Colonial environment around the fireplace has a pleasing appeal. It is possible to create this atmosphere in the modern home. An upholstered wing chair with side table, lamps and books and bookends placed at one side of the fireplace furnishes the nucleus for such a setting. At the opposite side of the fireplace may be an easy chair, preferably upholstered to balance the setting and correspond with the

REASONS WHY TO USE BRICK

Many Advantages Given for More Solid Construction.

CHEAPER IN LONG RUN

Cost of Brick Buildings Now Little More Than Others, While Lower Upkeep Offers Great Saving.

"It isn't the original cost—it's the upkeep."

The phrase has often served its purpose when some one wished to refer to father's golf clubs or sister's birthday gift riding habit which necessitated the purchase of a horse, but nowhere does it have more significance than in the purchase of a home.

There is an inherent stability about the word home. The man who defined it as the place where he hung his hat showed that he was never at ease, for he said nothing about his coat, and not a word about his slippers. He was always ready to go at any moment.

When a man makes up his mind to proceed about the important business of shaking himself loose from his landlord and acquiring a home for himself, one of the first questions he encounters is the problem of the material from which he shall build his home.

From some vague portion of his mind there comes to him the memory of the banker in his old home town. He had a brick house, a wonderful brick house, and with childish simplicity, he reasons as he did years ago, that therefore it must be expensive. Other folks had wooden houses.

Price of Brick Lower.
That may have been more true a quarter of a century ago, but one can do a lot of forgetting in those years. While the cost of lumber has been climbing—all unknown to our prospective builder—the cost of brick has been declining, until now the two have almost met.

Therefore it is that the builder who investigates will discover, somewhat to the astonishment of his pre-conceived ideas, perhaps, that the use of brick is an actual economy. It actually saves dollars and cents.

"It isn't the first cost so much," the builder argues with reason. "It's the upkeep."

And with this in mind, brick is the only building material. Its advantages are manifold, but none is more cogent than the fact that brick walls are permanently beautiful.

Expert engineers after careful studies have conservatively pronounced the brick home to be capable of lasting three times as long as a frame house. This in itself should dictate the use of brick, though its cost were more than twice as great.

What is the difference in cost? Surprisingly little, for inquiries in various parts of the country—based on actual estimates obtained from builders—show that an ordinary brick house of six or seven rooms can be built for a sum ranging from $400 to $500 more than the same one constructed of wood.

Little Depreciation.
It is a matter of common knowledge among those who have had occasion to observe the relative wearing qualities of brick and frame houses, that brick does not depreciate at all the first five years. After that it is very slow, about one per cent a year.

On the other hand, frame buildings begin to depreciate at the rate of about 3 per cent per year, commencing as quickly as built. Within a few years the slight extra cost of the brick is wiped out entirely by the more rapid depreciation of the frame house, and for more than one-half of its life time, after the frame structure has crumbled away the brick one still stands, defiant to the elements.

Again, it isn't the original cost—but oh, the upkeep! With a wooden house, you must paint. You must—everyone admits it—save the surface to save all! And the only application that will do the work is paint. This cost will vary, but many authorities are agreed that for a six-roomed house over a period of years, it will be at least $100 a year. The cost of painting the slight amount of exposed wood in a brick house is about one-tenth the sum.

Another element of saving to the brick house owner is in the matter of fuel. An air space or air current can not get in the solid brick wall of the house, and the brick is a perfect insulating material. An ordinary frame house that requires less than one-half as much fuel as a brick house, will be more comfortably heated. Likewise, the house will be cooler in the summer.

Greater Loan Value.
Bankers are much more willing to lend money on a brick house. They know of its permanency, and fire-resisting qualities. If a brick house is safer for their purposes of investment, then surely it must likewise be more desirable for the owner. Brick houses also get the most favorable fire insurance rates—a means whereby the extra original cost of the structure can easily be regained within a period of time that is only a portion of the life of the house.

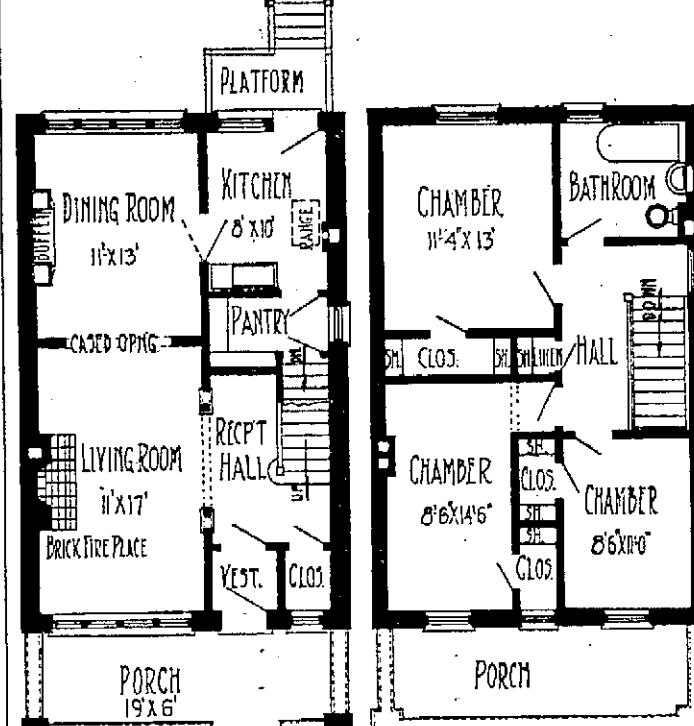

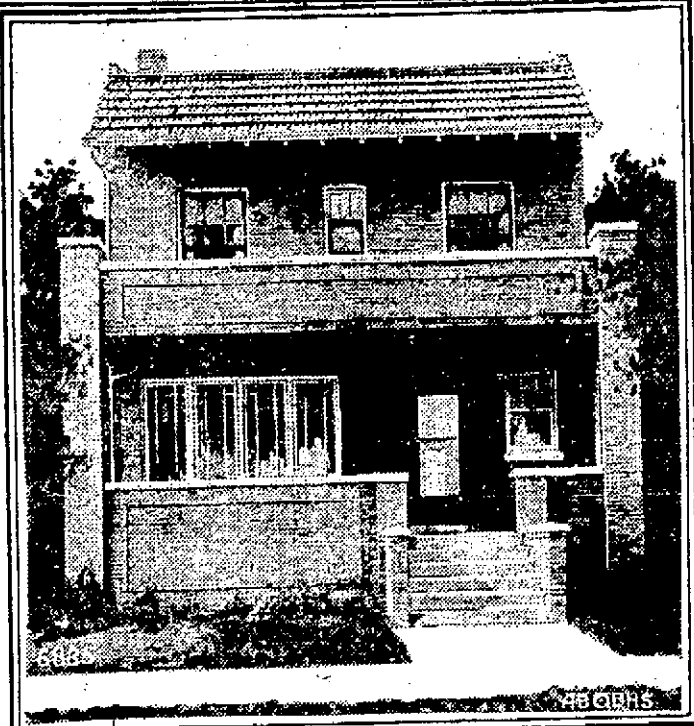

Years ago it was thought that only the rich man could afford to build a brick house. Now it is only the rich man—the man who is perfectly willing to throw away money for unnecessary upkeep, extra coal, and higher priced insurance—who can afford to build a house made of wood. The ordinary, conservative man who looks to his bank balance and his budgets cannot afford anything but a brick house.

In addition to having a home of the highest beauty and utility, he can also be assured that he is aiding in the conservation of the forests of the country, a measure that will very materially lessen the cost of all houses in the future.

Some wood, however, is necessary to build even a brick house.

For the Narrow Lot

The house contains, as will be seen from the floor plans, six rooms and bath. The entrance from the porch leads through a small vestibule to the reception hall. At the left, through a cased opening, is the living room, 11 feet wide and 17 feet deep. Another cased opening connects the living and dining rooms. The latter also being 11 feet wide and 3 feet deep. To the right of the dining room is the kitchen, 8 by 10 feet in size. At the head of the stairs on the corner of the second floor is the bathroom, while three bedrooms, all corner rooms, open off a hall. One feature that is good in this home is the number of closets, both upstairs and down. There is a full basement for the heating plant and fuel and other storage.

From this brief description and by consulting the floor plans it will be seen that a comfortable, convenient home has been achieved in a rather limited space.

CLEAN CHIMNEYS FOR GOOD FIRES

IS A CONSTANT MENACE

Dirty or Faulty Chimneys Waste Coal and Are Serious Danger to Life and Property.

The Department of Agriculture gives the following advice upon the care and maintenance of chimney flues:

As is the case with all masonry work, it is sometimes necessary to rake out disintegrated mortar joints and to repoint them and, at times, to replace worn or weathered material. In chimneys this is most likely to occur around the top, because of the action of the fine gases. The method of making such repairs is, obvious and need not be discussed here.

Leaking flues are a source of danger and affect the efficiency of the stove, heater or fireplace. Leaks may be located by means of the smoke test described in the bulletin referred to above.

In new work the chimney should be tested with smoke before any of the masonry is enclosed by other construction, as any leaks that may be found can be more easily repaired than when surrounding work renders parts of the chimney inaccessible. If the leaking joints are accessible the mortar may be taken out and the joint repointed or the entire masonry surface may be given a plaster coat of cement mortar. The only safe method of repairing a leaking flue that is without a lining, and which cannot be plastered on the outside, is to take it down and rebuild it properly.

To Improve Leaky Flues.
Flues that leak through the joints of the lining may sometimes be improved in the following manner: Using a tightly-woven cloth, such as is used in cement bags, make a pad about one and one-half inches thick, and of a size which will fit the flue tightly. Excelsior or hoghair may be used to fill the pad. On each side of the pad place an inch board, cut to the shape of the flue, but two inches less in dimension. The boards should be well nailed together through and around the center of the pad. Attach light ropes or wires to each of the corners of each board and bring them together at the center, but at least twelve inches away from the board, and attach ropes long enough to permit drawing the pad up and down the flue. The short ropes or wires to the corners of the pad will tend to keep it horizontal. Place the pad in the flue at the top and draw it up and down until the flue is cleaned of soot.

With the pad drawn down to a point just above the smoke-pipe entrance, pour a cement mixture of one part cement and two parts sand down the flue from the top, using a few quarts at a time. The pad should then be pulled up and down by means of the ropes and bottom rope until the entire length of the flue has been traversed several times and the open joints have been completely closed.

Causes of Soot.
The cause of smoke and soot is imperfect combustion. It is usually due to one or all of the following conditions: (1) lack of sufficient air to the fire; (2) lack of proper mixture of air with furnace gases; (3) low furnace temperature; (4) too small combustion space, so that the gases reach the comparatively cool furnace surface before they are completely burned, resulting in condensation of soot or tarry matter, which then passes up the chimney in the form of smoke.

Creosote is the result of condensation in the chimney. It is more likely to occur when wood is used for fuel than when coal is burned, and its formation in chimneys is more likely in cold climates than in sections where the weather is moderate. The percentage of water in green wood may be as high as 30 to 40 per cent, and in dry wood 15 to 20 per cent. When wood is slowly burned it gives off acetic and pyrogenous acid. This, in combination with water or moisture, forms creosote. When the draft is strong and an active fire is maintained much of the creosote that forms will be carried off into the atmosphere. The trouble is aggravated when the fire does not burn brightly and when the flue is subjected to chilling drafts when placed in an outside wall. The walls of the chimney, being comparatively cool, cause condensation of the vapors contained in the smoke. Thus the creosote condenses and runs down the flue, finding its way out of any joints that are not perfectly tight. The formation of creosote is unusual in chimneys that are surrounded by warm rooms. An outside wall should be at least two bricks thick and it should be lined with a good flue lining. It is permissible to place the inner side of the flue against the brickwork, but it is good practice to provide an air space in the brickwork on the other three sides.

Simple Method of Cleaning.
A simple and efficient method of cleaning a chimney and smokepipe connections of soot is to apply common salt to the fire. The sodium and chloride forming the salt are disassociated and combine with the carbon of the soot to form a substance which then passes off as a gas or drops off.

The salt should be applied to the fire after it has been put into good condition with a substantial body of hot fuel on the top.

Music Makes Better Homes

Better Homes mean more tasteful homes—homes of simplicity, dignity and character. Homes where the furniture, the hangings, the decoration—yes, even the piano are chosen to harmonize into a haven that brings pleasure to the eye, comfort to the body and pride in its ownership. Can anyone picture such a home with any other piano than a grand—a charming, dainty, entrancing little Sohmer, Chickering, Estey Conover, Brambach & Premier. Priced from $625 up.

Whether the home be a mansion, a cottage, or a dainty little apartment, the Baby Grand is equally appropriate for it is a grand of unusual quality that fits in the space and costs no more than a high-grade upright piano.

FULLY 500 NEW HOMES UNDER CONSTRUCTION IN PORTSMOUTH

It is conservatively estimated that at present there are 500 new homes going up in Portsmouth and immediate environs.

Scarcely of workmen, contractors and real estate men ever, has some what retarded the extensive home-building plan, outlined for Portsmouth, but this prosperous, rapidly growing city today ranks right in front with Ohio cities that are keeping abreast with the home-building trend.

On almost every street in the city and in the suburbs you will see new homes in course of construction. And most of these are being built for homes and not for speculative purposes. Portsmouth is essentially a home-owning city and has always pointed to this fact with pride.

At present it is estimated that there are 35 subdivisions being platted in or near the city and within the next two or three years they will be dotted with new homes if not built up solidly. Proof of this is shown in the fact that when a new addition was recently thrown open for sale on the Scotch Trail 18 lots were sold in a single day. Perhaps it is true that some were purchased for speculative purposes, but in the main they were bought as sites for new homes; protection in case that the owner either has to build or move.

Real estate men with their ears close to the ground contend that despite the steady advance being made in the cost of all classes of material the building boom will continue its merry way. "People must have some place to live and they are going to build so long as we are not able to furnish them a desirable home," a leading real estate dealer said yesterday. "There has always been a big demand for homes in and around Portsmouth but that demand today is more pronounced than ever. I look for the boom to continue well into the winter months before it will show signs of slackening up. And by this time, so many more people will have moved into the city that the supply will still be far from the demand."

A gratifying feature of the home building as it is carried on today is that each owner vies with the other in the putting up the most attractive home with the result that within the past two or three years some really exquisitely designed homes have gone up here to further beautify the residential sections. There is no other city where money invested in a home is safer than in Portsmouth and this assurance means for a continuation of the present building boom. With the rapid strides the Peerless City is making many assert that the boom will gain impetus as it gets into full swing and 1923 will set a new mark in the number of splendidly built homes that have gone up here and in contiguous territory.

And of course the more homes that will go up the more furnishings will be needed and this is one of the essential reasons why Better Homes Week will be observed next week—to give the prospective home builder a correct idea, an idea right before him as to how to furnish his home when ready for occupancy.

Home Exhibition Week then is an assured success. Portsmouth home owners are going to make it a success because they take pride in building their homes and a commendable pride in furnishing them along proper lines.

Steinkamp Company Have Fine Record Of Third Of Century In The Furniture Business

The A. Steinkamp company entered the furniture business 35 years ago at No. 221-223-225 W. 5th street, Cincinnati, O. Rapid growth made it necessary to remodel and enlarge their building which is now numbered among the largest in that city.

The Portsmouth branch was organized in 1906, at 524-526 and 528 Second street.

Expansion made it necessary to enlarge and during the past year they have purchased the large four-story building at No. 530 Second street.

Mr. G. W. Sheets, the present manager, has had twenty-seven years experience; six of which were with the home store at Cincinnati.

Carrying at all times a complete line of furniture and other household equipment, rugs, stoves, etc., the Steinkamp Company by its uniformly fair dealing with the public has gained a high position in the local business world.

Mr. Steinkamp by his long and successful experience in the business, his wide knowledge of the furniture trade, and his keen foresight as to business conditions has seen his stores advance to the forefront in their line.

The local manager, Mr. Sheets, with years of training in the big home store, his wide local acquaintance, and his unfailing courtesy has proven to be the right man in the right place. Constantly before the employees is the motto: "Once a customer, always a customer," and there are few indeed who buy at Steinkamp's who do not come again.

SCIENCE DOES THE HARD WORK

Electrical Equipment is Modern Kitchen Maid.

DRUDGERY IS ELIMINATED

Unpleasant Work of Household Kitchen Now Made Easy and Clean by Electric Appliances at Moderate Cost.

Changes effected recently in kitchen procedure are almost as surprising as that which followed the coming of a wand over Cinderella and her sooty cooking pots; science with its adaptation of electricity to human needs supplying the wand of transformation.

Kitchens electrically equipped have done much to wipe out the monotony and hard work of housekeeping. Servants having through a variety of causes become rare and extremely expensive—statistics show that 80 per cent of the homes of the country have all the housework done by members of the family—it became necessary that something revolutionary be done to make that housework possible to women in the home without too much cost in time and personal energy.

As human needs seem always to be met with new discoveries and inventions as soon as they are formulated, so this one has been taken care of, and it seems likely that within comparatively few years kitchen work will become more a matter of direction than of hard work.

No More Dark Corners.

First in the things that have been made as different "as day from night" is the matter of kitchen lighting. In place of former dim or flickering lamps or flame-illuminated fixtures that provided high spots of bright light while cabinets, sink, range, and shelves were dim and shadowy, there are now installed in really electrically equipped kitchens a few lighting devices so skillfully constructed that every part of the room is given light. There is usually a center light, enclosed in diffusing glass which takes hold of the light rays as they leave the lamp and breaks them up into light glow, then spreads this glow evenly through the room. Over sink and range are supplementary lights, directing concentrated illumination on tasks done in these spots. This type of illumination is not expensive, either in fixture or in current consumed; it simply represents the efficiency of modern illuminating science. Under it, headaches, eye strain, nerve fatigue are appreciably lessened, and there are left no dark corners to encourage unclean accumulations.

Then there are a number of labor-saving devices which are helping to make life safer, pleasanter, happier, to make labor lighter, easier, cleaner, more wholesome. The electric range is one of the most perfect of these.

A Cook Stove de Luxe.

It is frequently asked: Is the electric range practical?

In any city where a special cooking rate is offered by the power company, the answer will be found to be affirmative.

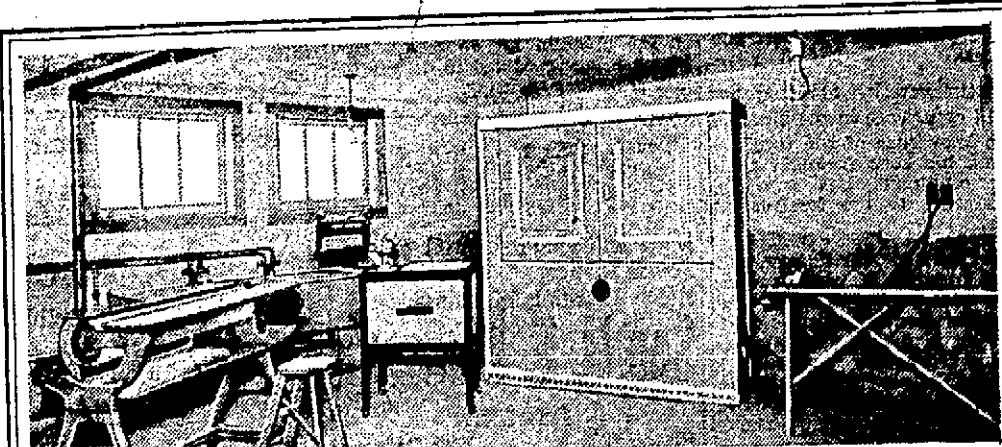

In actual cost this range may exceed those of other types. Its economy, however, seems insured by the advantages electric cooking offers over cooking with other fuels. The first of these advantages is that of cleanliness. Electricity heats without any smoke, fumes, flames, smoke, soot, or odor. This point means no discoloration of cooking utensils; no greasy film of cooking residue spread over the walls and windows and furnishings of the kitchen; consequently very little scouring of pots or scrubbing of surfaces.

The second advantage is that of economy of time and food.

There is available in electric range cooking a uniformity of heat which is not given by any other fuel. There are in each burner, both those inside and outside the oven, three degrees of heat: low, medium, high. These three degrees each represent an accurate, unvarying amount of heat. This does not run up or down. Much of the time occupied in cooking, much of its uncertainty of results, much of the burnt or improperly-cooked food, is due to this very uncertainty. Therefore it becomes apparent that when a cook has learned to use the electric range, cooking will be a matter of following rules rather than of personal effort and attention. This promises economy of time. The economy of food is concerned partly with this heat regulation, which means no wasted food from burning or undercooking. Then in oven-cooked food, particularly roasts, there is a saving due to the fact that these ovens need no ventilation as do most other ovens; this results in the moisture being retained in food instead of being cooked away in steam. In meats, tests have proved that when the same cooking was carried on with other fuels.

Still another advantage is in the insulated oven, which acts as a fireless cooker to a certain degree; taking possible cooking by stored heat. As a final luxury of service, some ranges are equipped with a time clock and thermostat control, so that food can be placed in the heat turned on in accordance with pre-determined arrangement, kept on for the required time, then turned off, and heat retained a long time; so that one may really cook dinner while absent from the

Electricity Saves Labor

Fully Equipped Electric Laundry.

Electric refrigeration runs the range a close second in convenience. This turns out-of-doors the dripping, muddy-footed iceman with his piece of congealed water, and his well-known irregularity of supply. Electric refrigeration cools by the use of dry, chemically-chilled air which regulates itself by means of automatic equipment. Temperatures unattainable with ice are maintained in the icebox; food stays fresh, the icebox stays clean, and there is no slimy pan or connection with sewer pipes with their always questionable sanitation. There is a small amount of water frozen into pleasing cubes for table use; otherwise, ice is unknown, but refrigeration is perfect. One may buy many kinds of food in large quantities, always an economy; and the small danger of food, spoilage affects pleasingly many housekeeping tasks.

Keeping Out of Hot Water.

The dishwasher is probably the "piece-de-resistance" of the electrified kitchen. Most of the disagreeable hours spent in kitchen work are those which housewives put in slopping in and out of dishpans. This machine, even if there be no other electric equipment, is enough to work an appreciable change in kitchen routine; it will wash dishes better, cleaner, in a safer manner than can human hands.

Utility motors to perform the innumerable bending, whipping, kneading, chopping operations of preparing food make up the rest of the hand of kitchen mechanics given housekeepers by science. These are made in several different types. One and all, they manage to accomplish an enormous amount of time and labor saving; keeping also the hands of the cook away from injury and stains.

Kitchens equipped with these labor savers are so clean, so free from the confinement necessary when work must be done by hand, power, and so really beautiful in their communities. But with their efficiency, those which exist in homes today are show places in rapid adoption of labor-saving machinery, they promise to be among the commonplaces of tomorrow.

To let the electricity in. Special electric wiring is necessary for this allowance of machinery. A general plan of wiring and outlets is suggested, which will be found useful by builders or homeowners.

Modern Breakfast Table

Housewife Sits With Family While Preparing Delicious Breakfast.

Fresh as the morning, cool and calm, the young wife who has learned the new art of table cooking sits with her husband at the breakfast hour in the pleasant intimacy whose influence will brighten his day, while she prepares for him a satisfying breakfast cooked to just the degree at which he likes it, and served piping hot the moment he is ready for each individual egg, slice of toast or cup of coffee.

"Kitchen-minded," is a word frequently applied to women who are absorbed in their housekeeping cares as they overlook other outlooks in life. Probably at breakfast more than at any other time of day this kitchen-mindedness is apparent in average homes, where the wife-mother-housekeeper-cook is compelled to fly from table to kitchen stove so frequently while she is serving her family and helping them to get away to business or school that she hasn't time or energy for a thought of any but their material needs. Usually, too, her own breakfast becomes a movable feast, to be eaten when all others are out of the way; when the food cooked earlier is stale and unpalatable, and when she sighs and eats it that way rather than trouble to cook a fresh breakfast for herself.

Table Cooking Devices.

Electric table cooking devices have created a new atmosphere in homes where they are used and understood. Though there are other times when these clean and convenient little stoves and cook-pots are invaluable, as at luncheon, tea-time or at the hour when evening suppers are served, their bright particular charm is in preparing breakfast.

A grill, a percolator and a toaster are the three devices most liked. Close second to these, an electric waffle iron completes a quartette that is hard to beat in the pleasure and comfort they reflect from their

Even Steaks May Be Served. The woman who uses a grill for table cooking will learn many combinations which may be prepared. Creamed potatoes in the lower compartment and thin boiled ham, grilled delicately on the upper wires, are delectable and appetizing. Baked bananas may be prepared in the potatoes; while even thin Indian "minute steaks" chops or thin cakes of chopped raw meat may be grilled instead of the ham. It is quite possible, if one has no separate toaster, to toast bread on this grill after the meat is cooked. Or, if toast is liked very crisp, it may be placed in the lower compartment and toasted slowly while something else is cooked above. This results in dry, brittle toast like our British cousins eat each morning as a religious rite.

In the grill, one may cook eggs, in any style; fried, scrambled, omelette. (Or, if the family is strange to fried eggs, there is a special electrical egg boiler which can be plugged into the circuit of service at any moment, the eggs boiled under one's comfortable watchfulness for just the minutes required, and service assured without running to and from table to kitchen stove.) The grill has several fitted cooking pans, permitting bacon, potatoes, ham, sausages, creamed chicken, fish or chicken to be prepared and served to each individual as he wants it. This grill is made either round or oblong; and is a most efficient little breakfast cook.

OPERATING THE HOME ON A BUSINESS BASIS

Labor-Saving Devices as Essential to Efficient House-keeping as to Business Life.

Just as efficiency is the purpose toward which business and industrial organizations are working in their plans of organization and management, so is the housekeeper who holds in one pair of hands all the threads from which are woven the fabric of home comfort, desirous of learning her lesson of right procedure.

It is only in comparatively few homes, says the mistress of home economics, where management is at all comparable with that known home is attempting to do all the hard, sordid labor with her own hands and her own nerve and muscle energy; setting herself up in competition, as it were, with her grandmother's menage of three, sometimes four, strong, active women.

"This cannot be done. No method of efficiency even devised can make a woman able to perform miracles of service month after month without breaking down; no matter how strong her spirit."

Mechanical Aids Are Solution. The solution, in the opinion of the speaker and many other women present who have made a success of housekeeping, lies in introducing labor-saving machinery which places the home on a basis of efficiency somewhat comparable with the establishments in which men are carrying out their half of the contract.

Washing machines are fairly familiar; so are electric cleaners and vacuums. Cleaners, however, are not always so placed or so used that their real helpfulness is brought out.

In homes where one woman must do all the housework, if there be two or more floors there is necessarily much running up and down stairs, which helps greatly to being on the fatigue against which efficiency fights. Therefore some women have installed on each floor of their homes a cleaner. This, if it can be placed in a closet where there is an electrical outlet, can be kept permanently attached and simply wheeled out to do duty in the daily cleaning and dusting, which will then be but the work of a few minutes.

"A man and his wife," said a brilliant speaker who was delivering a talk to a meeting of the Middle West-ern club recently, "have entered into a contract of partnership. The fact that this partnership is founded primarily upon the intangible bonds of love and affection is no reason why it should not also be carried out in a businesslike spirit of co-operation."

"Women expect of their husbands that all the material results of the man's labor shall be provided to the home cheerfully and willingly. A wife feels she has a right to money and material comforts, both for her own happiness and for the welfare of her children."

Women contribute service. "Women are also convinced that husbands have a right to expect in return that the woman's share of the labor of life shall be provided just as successfully and just as cheerfully. So the average woman throws herself heart and soul into the labor of managing, buying, cooking, cleaning, and washing and ironing in the home she is making for her husband and their children present or to come."

"If she breaks down, she blames herself and thinks herself a failure. But how many women think of this phase of the matter?"

"No husband carries on his part of the contract by his own unaided efforts. If he is in business, he is surrounded with the personal service of the most perfect mechanical devices. If he works in another man's business, he is but a part of an intricate system of human and mechanical energies, functioning in co-ordinating harmony."

"In former times practically every home had something similar to this in the way of service. Cheap and plentiful maids, cooks, laundresses, and nurses were available to all women in moderate circumstances. But today the woman in the house is attempting to do all the hard, sordid labor with her own hands and her own nerve and muscle energy; setting herself up in competition, as it were, with her grandmother's menage of three, sometimes four, strong, active women.

"This cannot be done. No method of efficiency even devised can make a woman able to perform miracles of service month after month without breaking down; no matter how strong her spirit."

This, if it can be placed in a closet where there is an electrical outlet, can be kept permanently attached and simply wheeled out to do duty in the daily cleaning and dusting, which will then be but the work of a few minutes.

Proper Use of Cleaner. If the cleaner is not used for all the small tasks of which it is capable, it is looking on its job and should be set right about face. It must be made to eat up the dust from pictures and moldings, tops of windows and door frames, and shelves and cupboards. It must be made to keep draperies fresh and bookcases free from dust. It must be made to poke its nose into tufted upholstery and padded cushions. It must be sent scurrying through bed-springs and across mattresses and pillows. It must be sent prying into the corners of drawers and around loose baseboards and other crevices where dust rolls up. It can be made to help prodigiously when paint or varnish is drying by reversing the current and the breeze thus directed to the wet surfaces. It can do splendid service in the same reverse if it be used, before other dusting is done, to carry the dirt out from around the wires of a piano. It can swallow the dust from walls themselves, making these look several shades cleaner than before. All this is labor that takes but a short time, and means much better work saved which would otherwise have to be done by hard personal brushing or scrubbing.

Any man, much less wise than Solomon, might have discovered that vanity is a part of every person's make-up. And vanity, like many other characteristics, serves a useful purpose. That vanity, which may be better termed self-respect or reasonable pride, is a quality which spurs all of us on to better effort and better accomplishment.

Who can question the perfectly natural feeling that the home owner has in being proud of his home? If it were not for that sense of pride he might never have a home of his own. And who can wonder that a woman wants her company to carry away pleasant recollections of her entertainment of them?

The central event of every occasion when company comes is the dinner or the luncheon. And the importance of the dining room in making that "big" event successful can scarcely be overlooked.

The use of the electric percolator, the chafing dish, the toaster and like utensils permits the hostess to sit at the table and visit with her friends while some of the cooking duties are being discharged. They also permit the serving of food in a hot and wholly fresh condition. Then, too, there are some dishes which can best be prepared by these devices.

It is this situation which has given rise to the wide use of wired furniture. An old table which has been wired or a new table bought as a wired table accommodates a larger number of cooking devices than is possible when lighting fixtures are used. Such furniture also permits a more practical use of the devices.

EVEN FURNITURE IS ELECTRIFIED

Demand for Luxury Brings Novel Innovation.

WONDERFUL EFFICIENCY

Wired Places for Living and Bedrooms Are Latest Step Towards Perfection of Service and Comfort.

Mysterious allusions to electrified furniture have been heard by home-makers lately, many of whom have asked the keepers of shops they are wont to patronize just what it means.

"Is it furniture that shines itself up electrically, without need of oiled cloth and chamols?" asked one inquirer humorously. "If it is, I want some right away!"

Electrified furniture does "shine itself up," but this refers to the shine of lights that may be plugged into its numerous electric outlets, not to any quality of self-cleaning. Housekeepers have become so accustomed to being told of the labor-eliminating powers of electricity it seems they are prepared for anything.

The advantages of electrified furniture lie in the convenience it permits in making use of the varied labor-saving or lighting electrical devices used throughout homes generally. It is really wired furniture, being supplied with inconspicuous electric wires which are plugged into the main supply circuits and which end, somewhere about the furniture itself, with convenience outlets where any corded electric appliance may be attached for service.

Many Dining Tables Wired. Dining-room tables have been wired for some years. This means that from an outlet—usually in the middle of the dining-room floor—a wire cord is run through the pedestal or inside one leg of the table, to a series of outlets on the apron of the table or wherever its owner decides is the most convenient place for attaching the table cooking devices or portable lamp used. There are usually three of these table outlets; sometimes more. One particularly pleasing arrangement leaves a wire for each table appliance available for the user at the end of a short cord, which may be brought out from under the tablecloth and attached to appliances as used.

The idea of wiring beds, dressers, dressing tables, china cupboards and other pieces is a newer one; these have been shown recently at electrical shows, and have been the center of attraction because of their unusual features.

In wiring the buffet, wires are usually led to one end, where two or more outlets are installed. Here may be plugged in a pair of electric candles, a decorative illuminated basket of fruits or flowers, or the percolator or chafing dish.

The tea wagon provided with convenience outlets is so obviously useful in homes where entertaining is right that it seems almost endowed with personality. Tea is brewed and served in any room most convenient to the moment; toast to accompany it, or waffles for Sunday night supper, or coffee and perhaps a rabbit after an exciting game of cards—it will become almost ubiquitous.

Introducing "Electric Susan." There is a small serving table called Electric Susan, which is one of the most useful of the tribe of wired furniture. This is light and portable, and containing three business-sized convenience outlets and a master cord heavily wired to be plugged directly into the concealed wiring of the circuit, it gives electricity for practically any cooking or motor-driven device or combination one is likely to use at the same time. It can be carried to the veranda and used for attaching a sewing machine at the bedside for a lamp, fan and heating pad; at the breakfast table to energize percolator or toaster, and a fan as well; or in many other uses which will suggest themselves. Susan becomes a serving maid for many offices.

The china cupboard has no further use for wiring than to provide its individual light. But this, shining on the china and glass within, makes a touch of beauty not otherwise obtainable.

In bedroom furniture outlets are given bed, dresser or dressing table so that the lamps and toilet articles which are so much used now may be attached comfortably and easily. Reading lights on the head of each bed are thus available at any moment wanted. Lights for beauty's face so that the beauty be not applied too carelessly are ready attached to the dressing table; this may then be moved to different places in the room, instead of being anchored permanently beside its illuminating wall fixtures.

Other outlets are in dressing table or dresser for using curling irons, hair dryers or massage appliances. Fans, electrical warming pads or blankets, portable heaters, milk warmers for baby's night-time bottle or for a cup of hot water in hot nights are among the applicants for these outlets.

Wired kitchen tables speak their own advantages; as do wired kitchen cabinets. These give energy, conveniently and without continuous changing, to the numerous heating and power devices used in helping the cook with her varied occupations.

SOCIETY

Mrs. Harry Pressler and Mrs. Paul Harsba were joint hostesses of a charming linen shower and bridge party on Tuesday afternoon complimenting Miss Florence Nunemaker, whose marriage to Mr. Lynn Padan will be an attractive event of June 13th in the First Presbyterian church. These two gracious hostesses were assisted by their dainty little daughters, Janet Pressler and Mary Jane Harsba, who presented each guest with a lovely little corsage of pink and white sweet peas. To Miss Nunemaker they presented a larger corsage and also a handsomely decorated hat box filled with many beautiful and useful pieces of linen for her new home. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in playing bridge with prizes for high and low being awarded to Mrs. Franklin Page and Miss Miriam Neudorfer. Later a delicious salad course was served at the small tables to the following guests:

Misses Florence Nunemaker, Alice and Georgia Padan, Ethel Lakeman, Miriam Neudorfer, Mrs. Phillip Brooks, Mrs. Clyde Fitch, Mrs. Robert Padan, Mrs. Richard Kendall, Mrs. Charles Ahrend, Mrs. Earl Watkins, Mrs. Norman McGuire, Mrs. Harold Flood, Mrs. Angelen Skelton, Mrs. Franklin Page, Mrs. Howard L. Gehres, Mrs. Roy Jewett, Mrs. Paul Dupuy, Mrs. Paul Harsba and Mrs. Harry Pressler.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Bigelow church will give one of their delicious suppers on next Thursday evening in the dining-room of the church. An unusually appetizing menu, which includes all the good things of the season, has been prepared, such as boiled ham, creamed new potatoes, new peas, creamed combination salad, brown and white bread, butter, strawberries, ice cream, home-made cake and coffee, all for sixty cents. These suppers are open to the public and an unusually large crowd is expected. Serving will begin at five o'clock and continue until 7:30.

Baseball Pools Are Chased

Like the evanescent fog, baseball pools disappeared from Portsmouth last night when Mayor Gableman issued an order banning all forms of baseball pools in the city. This action was taken when the Mayor received a letter from Governor Donahay instructing him to stop all forms of baseball pools in Portsmouth, if any were being operated. A similar letter, the Governor said, had been sent to every mayor and common pleas judge in Ohio.

This drastic action on the part of the Governor is a sequel to one of his sons having admitted he played baseball pools in his home, New Philadelphia.

At the Smoke House and Play House it was stated today that the Mayor's request had been obeyed and the pools failed to make their daily appearance today. They had been operated in this city for a number of years and were played by a large number of people, it is said.

Question Proposal To Consolidate Several Big Railroad Properties

WASHINGTON, May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Plans of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad holders to consolidate that property with the Toledo, St. Louis and Western, Lake Erie and Western and other railroad companies, were questioned today by Interstate Commerce Commission examiners assigned to make preliminary investigation, who suggested the proposal might be out of harmony with the provisions of the transportation act and with the general problem of railroad consolidation.

The commission, however, declared the report was not "to be interpreted as reflecting tentative conclusions" and sets the questions for hearing and argument before the full commission on June 9.

The question of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis consolidation has arisen since the Van Sweringen group at Cleveland, after acquiring control of several railroad corporations, proposed to put their ownership entirely into the hands of a single corporation.

While all of the state commissions concerned approved the consolidation and while the summary presentation today to the commerce commission declared that no violation of anti-trust laws appeared in the project, the Nickel Plate owners were required under the transportation act to procure federal authority for increasing that company's capital stock to a total par value of $105,000,000.

At the same time it has appeared that the consolidation proposed might complicate the general plan of railroad consolidation which the commission has in preparation. As a result the commission's examiners after preliminary consideration of the Nickel Plate consolidation suggested that no consolidation of railroads could be considered legal in view of the transportation act unless and until the commission had worked out a plan that would result in general consolidation.

Judge Thomas 53 Today

Judge James Sheridan Thomas reached his fifty-third milestone in life's journey Thursday and following a custom of many years he took the day off from official cares to celebrate the event quietly with relatives at his old home near Peedles.

The day also marked the twenty-eighth anniversary of his admittance to the practice of law and his residence in the city. The genial jurist, who is enjoying splendid health, received the congratulations and well wishes of many friends during the day.

All kinds of good things will be on sale at the bake sale to be held on Saturday, beginning at ten o'clock, at Moeller's Meat Market on Gallia street. The sale will be held under the auspices of the Woman's City Club and members are asked to leave their donations at the meat shop before ten o'clock on the morning of the sale. The proceeds will be added to the fund being raised for beautifying the yard of the Portsmouth High School and the various other school yards in the city.

Tommy Milton Wins Auto Classic

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May 31.—(By the Associated Press)—Tommy Milton's spectacular victory in yesterday's 500 mile auto race, the first time any driver has ever won the event the second time, was the subject of much comment among automobile experts today. They point out the fact that eight of ten cars finishing in the money, including the first seven in order, were of American make, as proof that the United States still maintains the superiority in mechanical designs gained during the war. It is more remarkable, they say, in that while the quest of European designers, after the best possible small light car of low gasoline consumption is prompted by the direct necessity, the interest of American designers is purely a theoretical one. No real necessity of the building of small cars confronts the United States for years to come.

That the tiny 122 cubic inch piston displacement racers proved themselves capable of all asked of them, also was the consensus of automobile. The fact that the numerous cars were forced out early in the race through mechanical and engine trouble, means little for these defects may promptly be remedied, the experts say. That the tiny racers could stand the grind of the 500 mile derby and come through in such excellent condition, was a matter of astonishment to automobile men. Drivers of the foreign made speed creations, had no comment to make regarding the relatively poor showing of their cars.

Whether Indianapolis will stage another race was uncertain. Rumors have been current that the Speedway officials, alarmed at the anti-sport Memorial Day bill passed by the Indiana legislature, but vetoed by Governor McCray, have been seeking a site to which they might move the track. Cleveland is said to have made bids for the next race.

The death of Hubert Shoop, 16-year-old LaPorte, Indiana school boy, who sustained fatal injuries when Tom Alley's car plunged through a fence during the race, is the first fatality at the Speedway since 1919, when three drivers and mechanics were killed or fatally injured. Alley was reported today as resting easily.

Ideal racing weather prevailed yesterday and a record-breaking crowd turned out to witness the event. The official attendance was announced as more than 150,000 persons.

Milton was exuberant over the outcome in which he shattered the track "jinx" of winning the event twice.

"We broke tradition and won twice," was his greeting to the crowd of admirers which surrounded him when he pulled up to the pits winner.

Billy Evans Says

PITCHING is one feature of the game that has gone back lamentably in the opinion of Frank Chance, manager of the Boston Red Sox. Chance, who has been out of baseball for about eight years, sees a decided change for the worse in the pitching end of the game.

"When I was managing the Cubs," says Chance, "I had a half dozen pitchers all so nearly equal in ability that it was hard to choose between them. The Cubs were always reasonably sure of good pitching in every ball game.

"Such a condition no longer exists. In the old days a club looked over good pitching almost every day. In these days a club sees high-class pitching about every third or fourth day.

"Few staffs have more than two star pitchers and a number can boast of only one really great twirler. Many clubs are using mediocre pitchers in the role of regulars who 10 or 15 years ago would have been lucky to hang on as relief pitchers or mere substitutes.

"Lack of control seems to be the worst fault of a majority of big league pitchers. Many who seem to have enough stuff to get along can't get anywhere because of lack of control. In the old days a majority of pitchers could get the fast one over almost at will, but it seems those times are past.

"A manager with a staff like that of the New York Americans is indeed fortunate. I wish I had one."

Wilhelm Wins Golf Trophy

The Decoration Day Golf Tournament staged by members of the Portsmouth Golf Club Wednesday on the East Portsmouth links was won by John P. Wilhelm. His reward being an all-steel shaft. Eric Ferguson was the runner up and some splendid early season scores were made.

Picking up the shaft Mr. Wilhelm remarked: "So this is the prize for the best player. Well, I'll play with it and win it." And there was more truth than prophecy in his words.

May Mean Outdoor Boxing In Lima, O.

LIMA, O., May 31.—Allen County commissioners will be asked this week to stop routing memorial hall to boxing show promoters.

Veterans of the Grand Army and other patriotic societies will make the request. "The Grand Army men plan to present a resolution to the commissioners Saturday.

W. D. Heitner, Civil War veteran declares the veterans feel that the hall was erected as a memorial and should be conducted as such.

Charles M. Maxwell, boxing show promoter, said shows for the balance of the summer would be held in outdoor arenas and should the commissioners decide to close the memorial hall to exhibitions, they would be held in one of the city's theatres next winter.

Griffith Admits Cobb Got Best Of Recent Deal

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Clarke Griffith has finally lost an argument. The president of the Washington American League club is willing to admit that Ty Cobb put one over on him last winter.

Griffith has reference to the trade whereby he gave up pitcher Ray Francis to Detroit for shortstop Gagnon. Francis has been going great for Cobb, while Gagnon has passed out of the American League.

Gagnon, who came to Detroit from Holy Cross last June and was sent to Rochester for a year of experience, had a good season in the International League. Seeking an understudy for Roger Peckinpaugh, who seemed to be slipping last season, Griffith gave up Francis for Gagnon.

Shortly after Gagnon reported in the spring it was discovered that he had a football knee, injured in a game with Harvard. From an understudy to Peckinpaugh, Gagnon in a short time slipped so badly that he was waived out of the league, while others not nearly so highly touted continue to stick.

Griffith frankly admits that he had one put over on him.

Kinks & the Kinks

If your opponent drives his ball into long grass and while you are assisting him in hunting for the ball by brushing the grass aside, is there any penalty if you touch or move your opponent's ball while so doing?

In looking for a ball that has been lost in long grass, it is customary to push aside only so much of the grass that will enable the player to find the ball, yet in no way improve the lie. If in looking for your opponent's ball you touch or move it, you are not subject to the usual penalty of the loss of the hole. When you move the ball of your opponent under such circumstances, he must replace it as near as possible in its original position.

Player drives his ball into the spring. On reaching said hazard he finds that his ball lies in some casual water that has accumulated in the hazard. How should he play his next shot?

If player's ball, after going into the hazard, finds a resting place in casual water, the player may drop the ball behind the casual water, taking a penalty of one stroke for so doing. In dropping the ball the player should keep the spot where it entered the water between him and the hole.

FEATURES OF YESTERDAY'S GAMES

NEW YORK, May 31.—With the American league eastern teams returning to their home lots and the National easterners starting the western invasion today, the Yankees still well at the top of their list, returned home with the best record ever hung by a Yankee team on an out of town assignment. They start their home tenure against the cellar-dwelling Boston Reds today.

The American league champions captured 17 of the 20 contests played against four western and two eastern teams. They lost only one series during the trip, that to Philadelphia, winning one of three games. The Yanks made a clean sweep of the other series with the exception of Detroit, the Tigers taking one game of four. The Yankees widened the gap between themselves and the second place Philadelphia Athletics by winning both of yesterday's double headers at Washington 6 to 4 and 6 to 5. The Athletics lost their stride when the lowly Bostonians whipped them twice 6 to 5 and 6 to 2. Babe Ruth aided the Yankee victories with home runs in each game. Cleveland narrowed the gap between the Indians and the Athletics by dividing its double header with Chicago, which took the afternoon game 7 to 2 and lost the morning 7 to 6. The fighting Tigers broke even on the day by defeating St. Louis in the second game 4 to 3.

St. Louis won in the morning 10 to 2.

In the National league the champion New York Giants batted the pelling Brooklyn Dodgers, well up in third place, by taking the second game of the day 9 to 6. Brooklyn won the first, 5 to 2. Jimmy O'Connell whose sale by San Francisco cost the Giants 175,000 helped himself to his third home run in as many days in the afternoon game.

The Pittsburgh Pirates drew closer to the Giants by taking both contests from Chicago 6 to 3 and 10 to 2. Cincinnati beat St. Louis two times, 4 to 2 and 5 to 0, and Philadelphia did the same for the Boston Braves 5 to 3 and 6 to 1.

SISLER MAY NEVER PLAY AGAIN

Jack Ryder in the Cincinnati Enquirer, says:

Two of the greatest ball players in the world are lying crippled here in St. Louis. Rogers Hornsby was at the game yesterday with his left leg in a plaster cast and hobbling along on crutches. He will not be able to play for three weeks, but Toporcer is a pretty good substitute.

George Sisler has not improved since the Reds were here a month ago. It was said in this column at that time that the chances are that he will never play ball again, and it looks more and more like it. His eyes are so bad that he cannot even drive his car, and there is no apparent sign of improvement. It is a tough break for one of the greatest of ball players and finest of fellows.

Most Golf Failures Are Chiefly Mental

If there is anything that "gets a golfer's goat," to use a bit of slang, it is to come to a pond hole, or a big hollow, or a wide and deep bunker, knowing he has plenty of distance to carry any of them and, time after time, fail to do it.

Such failure is absolutely mental. You are afraid of driving into the pond, for example, so what follows?

As you tee the ball you probably are keyed up to a high tension and the most logical result is that in your anxiety to get over, you look up before the clubhouse has come down on the ball. If you don't do that, you probably are so determined to get across that you attempt to press and either top or slice or do something else equally disastrous.

Again, you may keep your eye on the ball, but are so afraid that you won't get it in the air for enough carry to clear the obstacle that you involuntarily drop the right shoulder, endeavoring to get under the ball, and only succeed in hitting back of the ball, catching it on the up-stroke and topping it into trouble.

Again, you hurry the stroke or forget to pivot, or do something else contrary to what you do on your strokes where no trouble looms. What you should try to do is to relax even more where the trouble looms than you do normally.

Try to make the whole stroke as smooth as possible and if you succeed in mastering yourself and clear such obstacles a few times, you will thereafter laugh at your own previous fears.

IT'S CHOW TIME AROUND JACK'S PLACE

"Matty," cook at Dempsey's training quarters, just outside Great Falls, Mont., has a man's sized job on his hands. Feeding a world's champion and a gang of hungry sparring partners isn't an easy job by a long shot, "Matty" says.

Dundee Loses Crown; Bernstein New Champ

NEW YORK, May 31.—New York's boxing experts are in disagreement today over the judges' decision last night which removed the junior lightweight crown from the hand of John Dundee and placed it on the brow of Jack Bernstein of Yonkers, after a slashing 15 round contest in the Vendome.

Half the experts think Dundee should either have retained his 130 pound championship or been awarded nothing less than a draw while the others agree with the judges that Bernstein had 7 rounds, Dundee 3 and five were even.

Be that as it may, Bernstein is the champion. It was the affirmation of the old maxim that youth will be served. Bernstein, 25, had too much speed and stamina to be overcome by the veteran of 32 years and scores of professional ring contests. Bernstein had less than twenty professional bouts.

The meeting was a snappy affair, fast and furious, with both men ever willing to give and take. The referee, Duke, called the challenge down for the count of nine in the third round but the youngster came back strong.

Police had to surround the ring at the bout's end to keep Bernstein's admirers from storming it but their vigilance was thwarted by a well-dressed and personable young woman who climbed through the ropes, rushed across the ring and kissed the new champion squarely on the lips. Later she said she was from Baltimore but refused to give her name.

Dogwood Ridge Juniors Beat Wellston

The Dogwood Ridge Juniors defeated the Wellston Catholic school team at Dogwood Ridge yesterday, 6 to 4. The contest was close and exciting throughout, the Ridge boys putting over the winning markers by a rally in the closing rounds. A feature of the combat was the masterful pitching of Hook for the winners. He struck out 15 of the enemy batters and was strong in the pinch.

The Juniors will have as opponents at Pontiac park next Sunday Sherman's Specials of Wheelersburg. For games call the Junior manager, 7002 Scototville exchange.

ST. LOUIS, May 31.—Cincinnati took both games from St. Louis yesterday, winning the afternoon game 5 to 0 and the morning game 4 to 2 in ten innings.

Jaines allowed ten hits in eight innings in the second game and gave way to Barfoot in the ninth. Donk threw away his only contest in the forenoon contest when he tossed a wild ball to third in the tenth, allowing Burns to score.

40,000 SEE GIANTS WIN

NEW YORK, May 31.—Before a crowd of 40,000, a new record for National League attendance, the New York Giants Wednesday broke their losing streak and defeated Brooklyn 9 to 6 after losing the morning game of the Memorial Day bill to the Dodgers 5 to 2.

Vance pitched a brilliant ball for the Dodgers in the morning, striking out eight of the champions, but in the second game, Dickerson, who had won five previously, was knocked out of the box by the Giants in the fourth inning of a see-saw contest. O'Connell, outfielder for whom the Giants paid $75,000, hit his third home run of the week in the afternoon game.

ELECTRICITY!

Always at Your Service

Let Electricity do Your Housework

Electricity is the Most Essential Factor in the Home Beautiful

When your home is electrically equipped, you keep yourself happy and wear a care free smile as you greet him at the front door when he comes home.

How To Stay Young

Are you growing old from the cares and troubles of housekeeping? There's no need to worry when you can have electricity do your work for you every day in the year---and especially at this season when high temperatures are trying on vigor. Stay young---have your home wired---and you'll be happy ever afterwards.

An Electric Fan!

Why be hot and uncomfortable when you have the breezes of a cooler climate at your beck and call? Just turn the switch and the torrid temperature of the kitchen is transformed into a California Sea breeze. Or the close, stuffy bedroom becomes a modern Wisconsin lake country.

Is your bedroom comfortable after a sizzling day? It is a simple matter when your home is equipped with an electric fan.

Call in---let's talk about electricity---the greatest boon in all the world. When it comes to furnishing electrical appliance, we believe we have the finest showing in this part of the state.

The Space Saving Kitchen

ON SELECTING THE GAS RANGE

Largest Possible for Available Space Is Best.

REGULATED HEAT SUPPLY

Ovens Equipped With Thermostat Cooks Meal While Housewife Attends to Other Matters.

Never will I forget moving into a rented house in the suburbs of New York, where gas was not used, and trying to get the household functioning to a degree of smoothness. In my twenty odd years of house-keeping experience it was the first time that I could not cook with gas if I so desired, and with the "moving-in" and the settling to attend to, I wondered if the cook would simply go on a strike and say she could not and, what might be more to the point, would not cook with a stove in which a fire had to be made and kept going. But, fortunately for me, she had been born South and had, "until her Northern advent, cooked only on a stove stoked with wood, so the workings of the household went smoothly on and we were all happy.

But, while things went lovely by the accident of having a woman at hand who knew how to operate a wood or coal stove, it might have been most terribly wrong if the cook in charge of the kitchen had known as little about the operation of a coal range as most housekeepers and kitchen workers of today are apt to know.

Until there is trouble with the kitchen stove one rarely ever realizes the importance of the range and how necessary it is to have it in good working order.

Saving Cook's Temper.

I know nothing which will ruin the temper of the cook so readily, even if that cook happens at the time to be myself, and I will not admit that I am any more liable to have such things affect me than any other housekeeper.

Having this thing in mind, let us select a range which will be as nearly perfect as we are capable of choosing, a range which will meet the requirements of our own family and its needs, large enough to allow the dexterous preparation of the meals without taxing the ingenuity of the cook.

If we are living in a two-room and kitchenette apartment, we cannot expect to work on a range with five or six burners, but even a stove made for kitchenette use may be as large as the space allows, and I would suggest that the largest stove possible be placed in the kitchenette instead of the smallest it will hold.

If a hostess has ever tried to get a meal on a tiny stove for even a guest or two, she will agree with me that the larger the stove the better it is, if she is working in a kitchenette.

For the kitchen of ordinary size, ten by twelve feet or so, there should be a range which will have a generous cooking surface, whether it is a gas range, a coal range or a combination range.

The gas range having four burners on the cooking surface and a simmerer will be found in most cases large enough for the small family and the small kitchen; such a range, having a baking oven and a broiler, is usually sufficiently large enough.

There are cooks who much prefer a coal range, for where soups and stews are used a great deal, slow cooking is more easily done. While I can see the stand taken by these cooks, I personally prefer to cook with gas. If the kitchen is not heated for winter comfort, then a coal range is almost a necessity. In such an event what could be more desirable than the remarkable combination ranges which are now procurable, using gas for the summer months and coal when the weather makes a coal fire necessary?

Clean Enamel Ranges.

The manufacturers have recognized the need for ranges which do not need "blackening" and are putting on the market stoves and ranges of enamel, black, gray, blue and white. One can almost carry out any desired color scheme by using one of these satisfactory ranges.

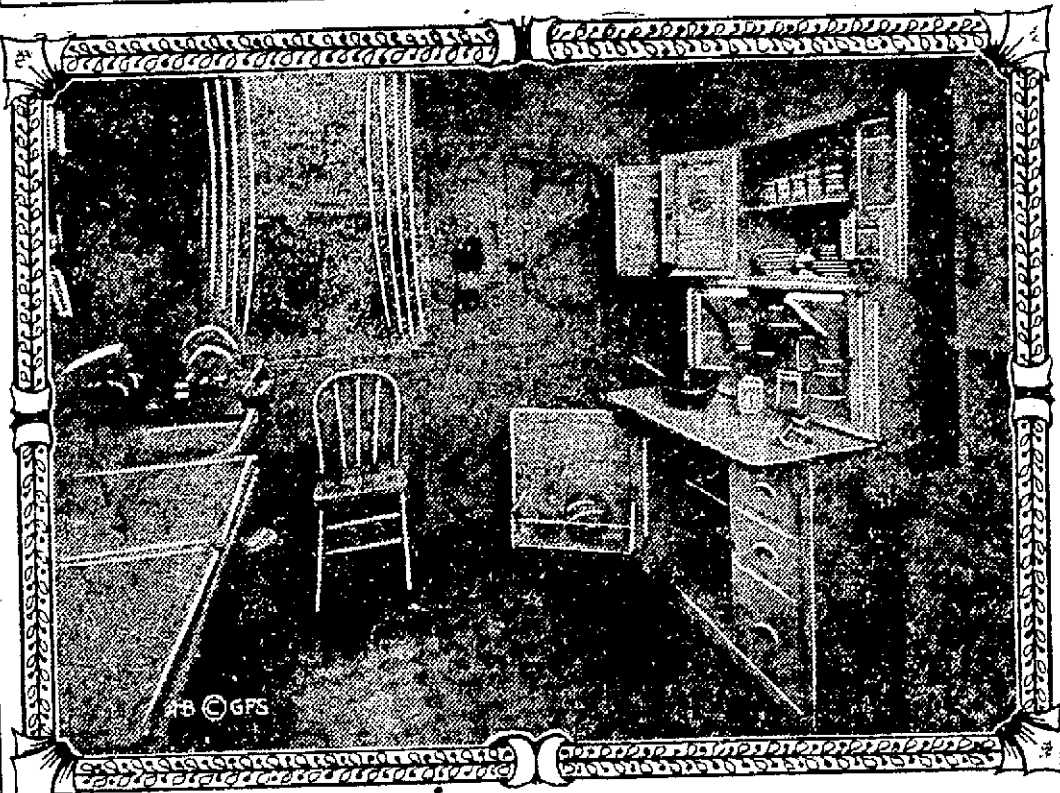

No one who has ever had a clean enamel range to work with will ever be satisfied with one which soils the dress or apron if touched in working about it, to say nothing about the saving of labor and the attractive appearance of such a stove.

After we have decided upon the perfect range from our standpoint, let us be sure that there is at least an oven thermometer installed in it. There are a number of ranges which are equipped with a thermostat, and what could be of greater convenience and comfort? If the range has such an installation, the ready-to-be-cooked food may be placed in the desired temperature, and the housekeeper go to the meeting or the club, make calls, take the children to a walk, or any other thing she may want to do, and the cooking of the dinner goes merrily on.

Do I hear some reader saying, "Well, what's the use of that? I do not have to do the cooking or the watching of it, while the cook is doing it?" To that I would say, that the housekeeper is the best friend of the cook in successful housekeeping. Why not allow the cook the extra time to sew or read while the regulated range is doing the dinner cooking?

Moreover, if the range is supplied with a regulator one has only to set

SAVE THE GAS BILL

The following "Do's and Don'ts" for gas users are suggested by the United States bureau of standards, a government department at Washington:

Cooking burners should be in correct position. They should be about 1 1/4 inches below the bottom of the cooking vessel.

Rusting of ovens can almost be eliminated by opening the oven door slightly for a few minutes after burners are lighted, permitting escape of a greater part of the moisture, preventing too rapid condensation.

Remember gas is no hotter ten minutes after burner is lighted than the instant it is lighted.

Turn out gas and relight it again in event there is an interval when same is not needed. Matches are cheaper than gas.

Keep burners of gas range clean.

by washing them in boiling water and soda at least once a month and have them dry before using. This will save gas.

Don't bake a pie or biscuits alone in a gas oven. Use gas oven to its fullest capacity on baking days. Plan to have a baked dinner when you bake.

Use triple saucepans, set over one burner. You can cook three vegetables for the cost of cooking one. Ordinary saucepans will cook one vegetable at a time.

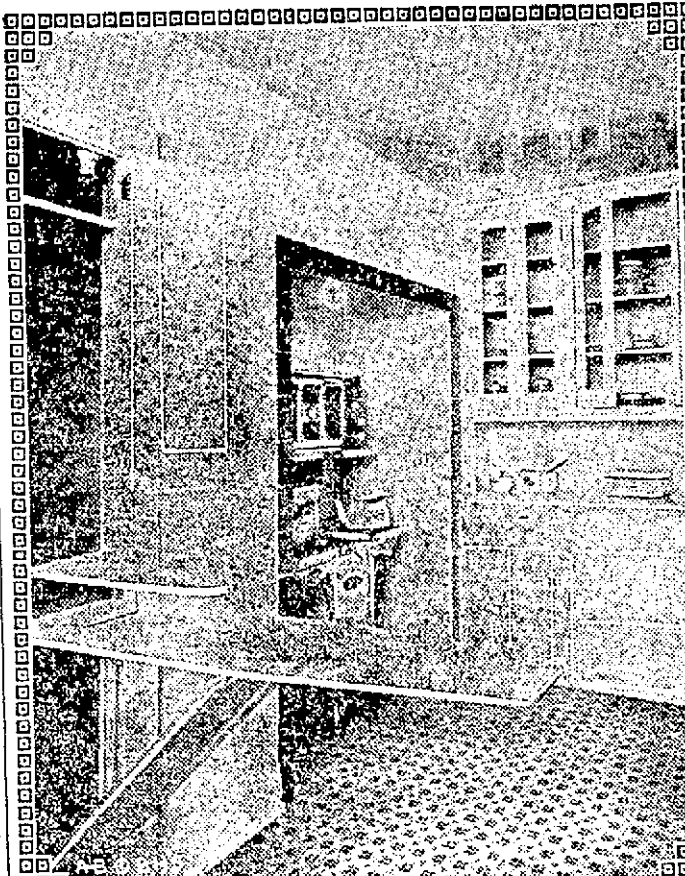

Don't use the giant burner on your gas range until you have food ready to go on fire. Don't allow a burner to remain lighted without being in use.

Don't heat a kettle full of water when you only want a quart.

Don't keep a full flame under container when water has reached boiling point. Turn down the flame or set utensil over small simmer burner.

Kitchen Convenience

Built-In Ironing Board and Cabinet, and Electric Range Are Among the Conveniences of This Comfort Kitchen.

OVER TWO THOUSAND STEPS TO COOK THREE MEALS

Women in charge of the home service department of gas companies at a recent convention of the American Gas Association in Atlantic City, N. J., announced that the average American housewife takes 2,112 steps to cook three meals a day.

Computing that each step would average a distance of two feet the distance traveled in preparing these three meals would be 4,224 feet or nearly three-quarters of a mile.

Three-fourths of these steps, the same women said, would be saved by modern equipment being used in the home and arranging it properly in the kitchen.

The opinion was expressed that one of the best ways to stop the trend toward cafeterias and dining rooms is to make the home kitchen so convenient that it will be the place for that particular thing which is being cooked, and that thing will be cooked to perfection. Think of the saving of money in this if there was nothing else to be said in its favor.

In this day when we are giving much more thought to our kitchen, what could be more satisfying than an enamel range, an enamel top for the kitchen table and the top for the kitchen sink?

A most desirable, workable and cleanable kitchen would be evolved by installing these things in the room which is the workshop of the home.

WOOD FINISHES ON METAL

In connection with the waning of certain regimens in furniture, a New York specialist in metal finishes and floor coverings, says that the brass bed unless lacquered to represent severe wood finish, is far from a popular seller.

"We have sold quite a few metal beds," he reports, "but mostly in wood finish. There is very little call for brass beds."

HUGE ECONOMIC LOSS THROUGH IRON RUST

Could Be Reduced to Minimum by More General Use of Brass.

Twenty-nine million tons of iron metal wasted itself away as rust during the year 1920, according to an estimate made by Sir Robert Hadfield, who reported to the Institute of Civil Engineers of the Great Britain that year on the rusting of ferrous metals. This represented, he said, a total economic loss of nearly $3,500,000,000, counting labor, metal and the other elements necessary to replace it.

Rust, the great enemy of iron, holds no terrors for brass, and that is why increasing numbers of builders, architects, engineers and plumbers are recommending the use of brass in pipe, pipe-fittings and plumbing installations.

Brass is a mixture of copper and zinc, with the copper greatly predominating. From a practical point of view it does not rust, although chemically there comes about a slight change through oxidation after years of exposure.

While rust is slaying its tens in the brasses, it is annihilating its millions in the irons, a fact demonstrated daily when old plumbing is removed from a building.

Pipes Often Choked.

As the water pours through the iron piping, the gases that are released join with the oxygen in its delectable action, until often pipes become so choked with iron oxide that the water flows through with the greatest difficulty. Often complaint is made that the pressure is low, whereas the fault really lies in the rust within the pipes themselves.

The remedy lies in using brass, which, as compared with iron and steel, is everlasting. Contrary to general opinion, its cost is not excessive, considering its superior efficiency, endurance and minimum maintenance cost. Prices will vary with localities, but the cost of brass piping over iron in many homes has been proven to be less than $100 additional.

Brass pipe is more economical in the labor cost entailed in its installation. It is more readily cut, threaded and bent than iron and steel. At the joints there is never any corrosion, which so often is the cause of leaks in the ordinary pipes. Finally, while iron has no resale value, brass plumbing even though removed from an old building, can be used again or sold at a high scrap price.

There is nothing more annoying in the average home than constant trouble with drains, pipes and plumbing that leaks and fails to give continued and highly efficient service. More than one householder has suffered from damaged ceilings, walls, furniture and clothes because an iron pipe rusted through at an inopportune time. The answer is brass, and an increasing number of builders are learning it each year.

ROMAN LUXURY NOW OUTDONE

Modern American Bathroom Surpasses Ancient Ideals.

BATHING BECOMES A JOY

Up-to-Date Equipment Now Renders Service Not Dreamed of by Slaves of Olden Days.

Ancient Romans built in their homes marvelous baths, equipped with luxuries to add every conceivable enjoyment to the cleansing processes of the day. Along with the delights of marble pools, fragrant ointments, and pleasing tempered waters provided in these baths, there were dozens of slaves to relieve men and women from trouble or exertion in the management of their ablutions.

Modern Americans have in their homes in place of the enormous marble-floored rooms devoted to the arts of the toilet, but one or two tiny rooms where cleanliness reigns. But so efficiently are these small bathrooms equipped, every process carried on in Roman days, and many others of which those luxury-loving people never dreamed, may be enjoyed by rich and poor alike, in this commonwealth.

Electric devices supply the service formerly rendered by slaves. There is no jug or urn of hot water carried in to be poured into a cup and used for softening the beards of men preparing to shave; there is a small unobtrusive-looking cup, fitted with a cord that carries to that cup instant heat to bring the water to the temperature required in two or three minutes. There is, of course, running water for the bath, and invisible heat, each piped from a central heating plant. But in the event of temperatures being too low for comfort at any time, or for use between seasons when furnaces are not running, there are small portable electric heaters which glow hot and brilliant at the touch of a switch. Or there may be a permanent electric radiator sunk into the bathroom wall and protected by metal bars so that no one can possibly brush too close to its heated coils.

Vibrators that stir up sluggish blood are really as good, and certainly more comfortable to the modest man, than the human slaves that performed this service beforetimes. Violent ray machines for similar purposes are pleasing to the fastidious. There are electric hair driers with which the thickest and longest crown of glory may be dried in something like a jiff and a half when one has washed it in the favored soap and water combination. There are also electric curling irons and marcel wavers which will prepare milady for a coiffure as elaborate as any ever built up by the personal attendants of the wealthiest Roman ladies known to society; and she can do it all herself, comfortably and quickly.

For the skin that does not throw off impurities as freely as might be induced if modern people indulged in athletics now as they did in the old times, there is an electric sweat-blanket which brings results in short order. This is simply a large wired pad, the size of one's bed, which is wrapped around the bather and a gentle heat turned on until every pore is open and flushing out accumulated poisons from the system. From this to the bathtub, where abundant warmth of air enables one to finish the process with a smart cold shower or plunge without discomfort, is but a step or two; and the glow that follows the process brings a fresh understanding of the services available in the small, concealed copper wire which runs from power houses into practically every modern home in the country.

Bathrooms electrified are just one phase of modern progressive home-building. Builders and manufacturers seem to be banded together in a plan to make every man, woman, and child in these United States happy and comfortable in a home where culture and beauty and material comfort are each possible to all. Comfort is no longer, says the builder and the architect, the prerogative of the home of wealth; it is found possible by means of the right equipment to give comfort along with economy in home administration. Electricity performs the same services that in earlier times required the labor of many maids and man servants.

60,000 PARISIANS, 40 BATHTUBS

The ratio of 40 bathtubs to 60,000 persons is the condition responsible for a spirited debate in the council chambers of Paris, according to a dispatch in a recent issue of the Kansas City Star.

Mr. Brunet, municipal councillor, stated that "in the Epinettes quarter of Paris there are but 40 bathtubs to 60,000 inhabitants!" His remarks called forth a lively article in Le Petit Parisien, a popular Parisian newspaper, part of which follows:

"Landlords have considered bathtubs as foolish, Babylonian luxuries, but the only running water in most of our apartments and dwellings is in the kitchen. It is impossible in most of our homes to make anything like a decent toilet. A bathtub may be used by several persons, but surely one is not sufficient for 1,500 persons!"

"Skilled physicians are busy protecting us from every illness and are discovering wonderful remedies. Soap, however, is surely man's first and most essential remedy, and water, without which soap is useless, is an essential and sovereign 'serum'! Cleanliness is the basis for prophylaxis, and one must bathe in order to be clean. And if one would bathe, one must have bathtubs!"

BUILDING LOAN ASSOCIATION

Great Growth Reflects Practical Aid to Thrift.

GOVERNMENT ENCOURAGES

Assistance Given to Prospective Home Owners Is Generally Recognized.

By MARK D. RIDER, Former President of the Illinois and United States Leagues of Local Building and Loan Associations.

Let us define: A building and loan association is a mutual co-operative money-saving and money-lending institution, loaning only on first-mortgage real estate security of the members; chartered, controlled and supervised by the state government.

These associations were here and functioning before the war, many had been in business from 25 to 35 years previous to the war, and they functioned at no advance of interest rates during the war period since, and are increasing in assets and membership very materially. They are prepared and willing to assist in the great task of educating people how to acquire and own their homes in the old-fashioned way of "saving and thrift."

Building and loan associations are not only the object of state favor and encouragement, but the congress of the United States has appreciated so highly the great good they confer upon society, that in every revenue measure passed in congress in the last quarter century there have been exemptions from taxes imposed on other forms of corporations, in order to encourage their growth and development, and to stimulate through their auspices the building of homes. As a further evidence of the high regard in which they are held, at the last session of congress the revenue act was further amended to exempt from income tax the dividends or interest received by an individual, from domestic building and loan associations loaning to members only, which does not exceed $300.

Association Work Justified.

Let us analyze briefly the work performed by them in order to explain and justify these exceptional favors from both state and federal governments:

In the United States there are between 8,000 and 9,000 associations, having a membership of more than 5,000,000 members, with accumulated savings of over $250,000,000. More than 1,000,000 homes have been financed through them.

Associations Teach Thrift.

The functions of building and loan associations are two-fold: They teach thrift and systematic saving of money; they encourage their members to own their homes. The whole object of interest comes upon the principle of co-operation. The saving members receive their fair proportion of the interest their money has earned, generally from 5 to 7 per cent per annum, depending upon the terms of deposit and local loaning rates. Interest is compounded so that the saving members have a safe, convenient and continuing place in which to deposit savings monthly, or weekly, at the highest rate of interest consistent with absolute safety. The saving and borrowing member becomes a saving member to repay, his loan.

Are Co-Operative Banks.

How do these associations differ from banks, and are they competitors?

Frankly, they are a type of co-operative bank. Herbert Hoover, called them "true people's banks." They do compete with the banks in seeking the systematic savings of the people. But the money is immediately deposited by the association in some bank and as quickly as possible is loaned, largely for building purposes. Hence the money deposited with building and loan associations is immediately passed out to lumber dealers, bricklayers, carpenters and building supply houses, and therefore soon finds its way back to the bank, having contributed most generously to the best interests of the community.

There is also a great difference in the methods of loaning. Bank loans are usually made on a one, two or three-year term—the short mortgage business. The building and loan association generally on six, eight or ten-year terms. Theirs is peculiarly the long mortgage business. The bank collects interest quarterly or semi-annually, and the principal when the debt matures. The building and loan association receives interest and a small percentage of the principal each month. This monthly method of repayment creates a constant revolving fund for community building and the borrower is more certain to pay off his loan. There are distinct fields of activity for both banks and building and loan associations, and there should be a general recognition of this fact by all.

Charming Tiled Effect

This Inviting Tiled Bath Room Gives a Delightful Impression of Cleanliness and Brightness.

IN DEFENSE OF THE PLUMBER

Why does a plumber "have to go back for tools?" Why doesn't he have enough tools and equipment with him when he comes to your home? An interested public asks these questions.

There's the answer, as given by the National Trade Extension Bureau of the Plumbing and Heating Industries:

In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred you and the plumber and heating dealer are both at a disadvantage, because you cannot tell him what is really the matter.

You cannot take the plumbing to the repair shop as you would your shoes or your watch. The plumbing and heating dealer cannot bring his entire shop to your home—nor unless he loads it on to several trucks; yet any one of scores of tools or thousands of articles may be required.

Unless you accurately describe what is wrong, the plumber must actually see the job before he can be certain what must be done. Not being fitted with clairvoyant powers, the plumber tries—and tries hard—to guess at what he needs to bring with him. In view of the many abuses that plumbing is put to, it is a real wonder that he ever succeeds right.

SHORTAGE OF BATHROOMS

According to the best information available there are only about 5,000,000 dwellings in the United States which have modern, sanitary bathrooms. This leaves in excess of 17,000,000 which are without proper means of modern sanitation and comfort.

Moreover, a survey made by the United States government bureau of infant mortality, resulted in a finding which proves that modern building and sanitary facilities would prevent four-fifths, or 80 per cent, of the deaths directly traced to the lack of it. Startling and undisputable.

LAMPLIGHT SAVES EYESIGHT

The increasing favor of more lamps in the home is backed by purely practical reasons for the soft lights of shaded lamps. The old glory lamps that so severely direct the eyes, are rapidly disappearing and in their place now are those that are pleasant to see and use.

We Are Builders Of Homes

For better than thirty years we have been building homes. We have builded hundreds, yes thousands of them, and we were never busier at this splendid work than now.

Our Sole Mission Is To Enable Others To Own Homes; If Not To Build Them To Buy Them

Thereat we have achieved results that are unrivaled by any other similar agency.

WE TEACH PEOPLE TO SAVE AND WE KEEP THEM TO SAVE

We accept the smallest sums as a beginning at saving and we allow thereon dividends of 6 per cent interest twice a year.

We have patrons who have by persistently placing their modest savings with us, who have not only been able to acquire homes, but who have accumulated a competence.

This Institution Was Founded More Than 28 Years Ago

That is a long time, and our transactions in the lapsing years have run into millions. Yet, we have never lost a dollar and have never failed to declare dividends regularly.

For the Odd Corners

ODD PIECES FOR VACANT PLACES

Some Things Every Home Has Need For.

CONVENIENT ACCESSORIES

By BERTHA E. L. STOCKBRIDGE
The home which is completely furnished and "finished" is not as fascinating as the home which may be added to, for what is greater joy than buying a new and greatly desired piece of furniture? One which just fits some corner or fills some need?

Is the house a bit crowded? Is closet and storage room for linens scarce? What could be more desirable than a highboy? A highboy with its eight or nine drawers, some deep and some shallow, some long and some narrow, but each drawer roomy, and the whole capable of holding an amazing amount of table linen and towels, is a joy which each housekeeper will revel in.

There was hardly a home in our grandfather's day which did not have at least one of these roomy pieces of furniture.

If one's home is in an apartment, I know of nothing which would be of greater service than a highboy, for the space used is not much greater than that needed for a chiffonier, but the storage space is almost, if not quite, double.

Mirrors Always Good

When considering mirrors we usually think of the very utilitarian side, that of reflecting the image of some members of the family when seeing if the collar is right, or if "the hat is on straight" or if the nose is sufficiently powdered, but the use of mirrors is wider than that. I know of nothing which adds so materially to the decoration of a room as a good mirror, well placed. A room which has few windows will borrow light from some unknown source if a mirror is placed in the side farthest from the light. The pictures hanging in a mirror can only be found by placing the mirror where some particularly charming setting will be reflected, the reflection taking on beauty that the original has not.

No housekeeper ever had all the tables she really wanted; she may have all she likes for, but she always long for one more. And I am wondering if, unless she lives in a two rooms and bath, there isn't room for one more, even though the room seems cramped? A tipable or, as they are sometimes called, a tripod table, takes up no room at all when not in use, but when wanted as a tea table, it holds all the tea things, and that without crowding or clutter. That same tipable will serve as a reading table if there is room to use it. It tipped down it may be moved about with little effort from one place to another.

End Tables Fill Need.
End tables and davenport tables, the smaller to be used at the arm of the davenport or sofa, and the long one at the back of the davenport, both are useful and desirable. Lamps placed at the ends of the davenport table make reading a joy at night, for the light falls just where it ought and the depth and coziness of the davenport makes for real comfort.

A nest of tables matching the style of furniture already used in a room will add beauty to the other furnishings, and be found useful beyond belief. When needed these tables may be pushed back out of the way, and with the least amount of effort be placed in front of a guest to hold a cup of tea, or placed at the arm of a chair to hold ash tray and cigarettes.

Desk for Every Room.
It may be an overstuffed chair which is just needed to make a comfortable corner, a corner which has been bare and inhospitable. If it is a corner that father is to use, see to it that the chair is a deep and loungey one.

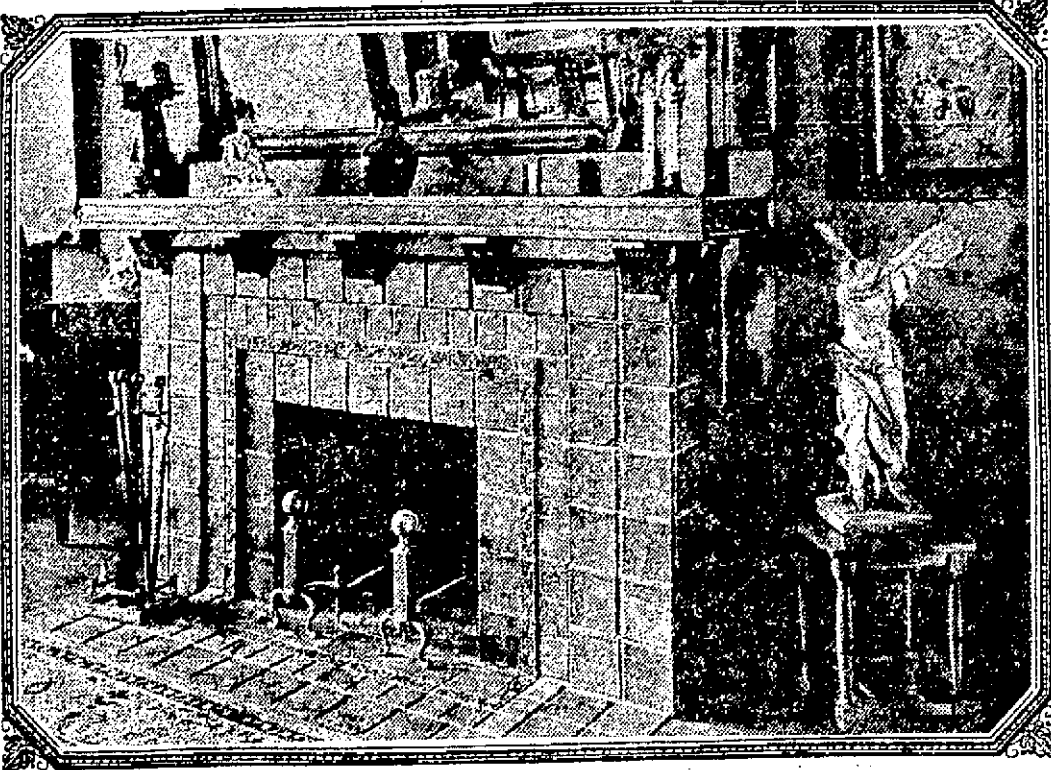

There is not a room in the house, excepting perhaps the dining room, where a desk is not needed. The living room, the library, each bedroom, these all need desks, and there is a desk for each of these rooms. A desk for the daughter's room may be as light and as sprightly as she likes, and one for the boy's room may be as mannish as he could possibly crave, while for mother's room, what could be better than a desk of many drawers, with or without a cabinet top? For father's room, a desk-table would be the correct and happy selection, one large enough to hold books, and a desk lamp, and still leave room enough for the wide-spreading of letters and papers.

If there are no servants, a tea cart will save innumerable steps, for on it two or three services may be brought into the dining room at one time, and the dishes from as many courses be removed to the kitchen. At tea time, of course, they are almost indispensable.

Red cum wood is very popular as a finishing wood in hospitals, because it is entirely odorless, and the grain is very close, making the wood very aseptic. A minimum of restlessness substance in the wood likewise makes it particularly well adapted to take paint. There is never any danger of the resin or sap coming through to spoil the decorated surface when finished.

Furnishing the Tiled Mantel

Many Odd Pieces Can Be Used to Advantage by the Fireplace, Especially When Its Projection Forms Corners as in Above Illustration.

GOOD TASTE IS RESULT OF PAINSTAKING STUDY

Beautiful Home Decoration Only Achieved Through Careful Thought and Application.

Why is it that one homemaker can furnish and fix up her house so that it is all beautiful, restful and attractive, while another will spend just as much money and care on hers and make a nervous wreck of it? It is difficult sometimes to tell just what the trouble is with the house, but it is reasonably safe to say (behind her back) that the woman with the nervous house lacks taste.

Now taste is a quality that is difficult to define. Webster says that it is "the faculty of discerning beauty, order, congruity, proportion, symmetry or whatever constitutes excellence." The intelligent use of the eye is what makes a beautiful home possible. It is not the rest of what goes into that home, but the ability to discern the beauty, order, etc., (as per Mr. Webster) that are essential to its proper selection and arrangement.

I know a simple little home in an inexpensive neighborhood that is an artistic delight. The woman who manages that home does it on a very small income. She does her own housework and her purchases have to be carefully considered. When she furnished this house, she studied her problems carefully, and worked them out with certain definite principles in mind. The rooms were small, so her first care was to secure decorative effects that would apparently increase their size. She reasoned that the stronger the color and larger the pattern in her wallpaper, the more the walls will seem to close in, while with neutral color and small pattern they will not be noticeable and the room will seem larger.

Blending Odd Pieces.

Much of the furniture was not in good design, but she could not discard it, so as far as possible she had the pieces in each room stained to a uniform color, and by covering the upholstery with materials that were closely harmonious, she attracted the eye from poor design by the charm of good color. She had an oversupply of small pictures of which she was fond, but resolute to banish to the attic all but a few of the best and these were hung so that each counted for the almost and had plenty of blank wall to keep it from undesirable conflict with others.

Being a lover of color, she was not content to have her rooms monotonous, so having established a simple low-toned scheme of gray walls throughout the house, she added touches of rich color by means of curtains, lamp shades, pillow covers, vases and furniture coverings, all selected with an eye to their harmony with the pictures and the rug colorings. Although the walls were nearly uniform in tone, she established a distinct color scheme in each room, choosing the pictures and other accessories in each with definite effect in mind. In the dining room she had one picture with considerable blue in it. She chose a rug with a blue field to go with it, curtains that had blue in the pattern and their covers in tones of blue; the living room was carried out in tan and brown, and each bedroom had an individual scheme worked out in cretonnes or in wallpaper borders.

Increasing the Size.

She increased the apparent size of the rooms by placing the larger pieces of furniture so as to keep the middle of the floors clear, and provide open passageways and vistas from room to room. Moreover, she studied these vistas and arranged an attractive grouping of furniture or pictures at the end of each to attract and gratify the eye as it traveled to the far wall, so that which ever way one might look through her rooms a beautiful room-picture was to be seen.

Her furniture and furnishings were all inexpensive and some were frankly used, but she made the best of what was good in each, covered as much of the bad as possible and made you forget what could not be hidden by the general harmony of good color and arrangement.

Her friends complimented her "knack for doing things artistically." She did not contradict them, but she alone knew of the careful, painstaking study she had given every piece of furniture and material and paper in order to secure this perfectly simple and artistic result, a result so good as to suggest, not study, but a "knack."

USE OF ORIENTAL RUGS

If you think that Orientals are "the thing" and have squandered your money to buy the imitations, you deceive no one, except, perhaps, or dye them, unless you are able to use them as color suggestions and by a careful assembling of colors in the room harmonize the room with the rugs—or attract attention from them. They probably do most of the clashing.

Good decorators care little for Orientals. Their design hampers the use of hangings which decorators like to accent, prevents the free use of design and limits one in color. The plain rugs give the plain background needed for contrast. Oriental rugs in living rooms make people aware of their feet, either because of the sloping of small rugs or the attracting of the design. The small ones are so hard to harmonize and so inadequate for covering, for instance, a living room.

If you must have design, use genuine Orientals in room-size rugs in dining rooms, where there is little furniture and preferably no pictures. The floors may then be decorative, provided walls are plain.

CARPETED FLOORS ARE RETURNING TO FAVOR

Vacuum Cleaner Eliminates Housewife's Former Prejudice.

There is a tendency noted to return to the entirely carpeted floor in the home of today. Rugs laid directly on a wood floor have held almost complete sway for a decade or more with the housewife who is decorating her home. Several of the leading New York decorators are now recommending carpets to their clients.

Investigation shows several reasons for the tendency, but before enumerating them it should be noted that the carpeted floor is being used almost exclusively in the permanent home and not in the apartment where the tenant may move at a few days' notice and wants a rug that can be easily rolled up and carried with him. It is felt that the prime reason for the popularity of the entirely carpeted floor is the growing realization that such a floor covering of the proper tone and design, if any, the plain rugs give the plain background needed for contrast. Oriental rugs in living rooms make people aware of their feet, either because of the sloping of small rugs or the attracting of the design. The small ones are so hard to harmonize and so inadequate for covering, for instance, a living room.

If you must have design, use genuine Orientals in room-size rugs in dining rooms, where there is little furniture and preferably no pictures. The floors may then be decorative, provided walls are plain.

Not all genuine Orientals are good in design or in color, though the Kermanshahs and the Chibchas, especially the latter, are likely to be among the most beautiful rugs in the world.

If the floor is light in finish and you have a vacuum cleaner, carpeted floors, entirely with plain Axminsters, Wiltons or chenilles, though rugs in quiet designs are more practical, as they do not show dust or footmarks. If you have no vacuum cleaner have room-size rugs made of the chenille, preferably Scotch wool or flax.

with a carpet lends the impression of a larger room or wider hall than could be attained with a number of scattered rugs. In larger areas, very pleasing effects are being obtained by placing rugs over the carpet.

In older houses where the wood floors have lost their original beauty of color and grain, carpeted floors are the solution.

As regards cost, the floor can today be carpeted with a good quality of fabric for a lower figure than could be "fuzzed" with the oriental, and the expense of a highly finished floor is, of course, saved.

SIMPLE MODERN DINING ROOM

Quiet Tones and Balanced Dignity Give Best Effect.

AVOID ALL VULGAR DISPLAY

Furnishings and Accessories Should Be Confined to Necessities Selected for Their Utility and Beauty.

By WALTER MURRAY

Nothing is more beautiful than the formal dining room with its dignified set of furniture, its heavy silver, its wall tapestry and all accessories expressing the finest effect. But for one such dining room there are thousands in which very little money can be expended, and where adverse conditions must be impatiently remedied. Therefore, we are here to consider the dining room in the little two-story home, which may be Dutch Colonial, or Mission, or merely American. This is an average dining room, about 12 by 14 feet in size. One enters through French doors, which separate it from the living room. A second single glass door opens upon a sun parlor, and a third door leads into the pantry way, adjoining the kitchen.

There are two full-sized and one casement window. The room is light, as it faces east. The floor is hardwood, so light that it must be deepened to the tone of walnut or oak. Until our floor is quiet in tone nothing effective can be accomplished. In cases where it is impossible to change the tone of the floor it is advisable to cover this border with a strip of linoleum or plain carpet, deeper in tone than wood-work and body of the rug.

The rug for the dining room may be figured, and our walls should preferably be plain. One of the most excellent finishes for walls is a mottled effect showing variation of light and dark tones. Or, in a buff or dark ivory, a stippled effect is delightful. These effects may be attained in paper as well as plaster finishes. Let us avoid using figured wallpaper in a dining room. Like the plate rail in a dining room, it is an evil. If we feel the need of a definite finish to the wall, paint stripes, two of varying degrees of the prevailing tone in the room, and a third of a contrasting color, just below the ceiling. Or if the wall is extremely high and we feel it advisable to remedy this, bring the ceiling tone (always lighter) down into the side wall about fourteen inches, and then introduce the suggested line and picture mold as deep in value as the deepest tone of the woodwork in the room. Nothing is more desirable for a dining room than wooden paneling, applied to the plaster surface and creating the effect of panels. The paneled area should be deeper in value than the surrounding wall. In certain types of dining room the panel may be featured by using figured paper, either of very dignified, classical design (if the room is to be quite formal) or an effect of gaiety and color may be produced by using paper suggestive of clintz and cretonne.

The Rugs and Drapes.
Such rooms approach the breakfast room in their final effect and are not dignified nor quiet enough in character to please the popular taste. But low lighting is preferable. They are to be furnished with the tan madras curtains, or the red dining room with its gloriolous (?) golden oak furniture! For the well lighted dining room, the Japanese grass cloth of blue gold, changeable in effect, with deep-toned woodwork and plain blue sun-faded curtains at the windows, finished with valance of printed linen, virile in design and in which are found tones of blue, red, rose or petunia, would be effective. The reverse may be desired, plain valance and figured curtains, though, if the rug is decidedly patterned, it is well to have plain side curtains. The curtains against the glass may be of the sheerest silk or scrim if the woodwork and furniture is painted or mahogany, though if walnut or oak predominates, these curtains should be of net, as it is more in keeping with the texture of the wood. Mahogany, the aristocrat of woods, demands silver, line linen, silk, velvet, white oak or walnut, undoubtedly more appropriate for the average home, are more democratic and harmonize better with coarser linens, materials rougher in texture, such as net, rep, printed linen, and hand-blocked clintz or goods of peasant weave.

The choice of dining room furniture is always a great problem. Too often we unthinkingly choose our furniture to this particular room, selecting a set that pleases us as a particular set of furniture, in and because of itself, but that may be entirely unsuited for the type of room in which it is to be placed or the home life of which it is to become a part. Let us always consider these points in choosing dining room furniture:

(1) "Is the set I am choosing in scale with the proportions of my room, or may there not be a possibility that the dining room will appear crowded?"

(2) "Are the individual pieces long or high enough for the particular space where they must be placed? (For generally, in the dining room, one's furniture arrangement is limited by the scarcity of wall space.)"

(3) "Will my dining room set appear too rich, or too large, or too heavy for the other types of furniture in my home?"

(4) "Are my dining room draperies, my rug, my linen, silver and decorative accessories rich enough to form a suitable background for a formal set of mahogany in the Queen Anne or the Chippendale period, or is there not a more appropriate choice?" If you are desirous of a mahogany set, and your dining room merely a pleasant, comfortable room, then undoubtedly a mahogany gateleg table, with rush-bottom chairs of Colonial lines, and a simple side table will be most appropriate. It may be advisable to choose a valuet suite, simple in line, light in scale and an artistic expression of a period style, rather than an expensive reproduction. In that case, one has a wide range of selection.

The Spanish-American Style.
Since your dining room is simple, do not choose the Italian as your guiding motif, though, if you have a penchant for the charming style of sunny Italy, you may find a set which, suggested by the Italian Renaissance, has been simplified until it bears a resemblance to the best expression of the once popular Mission. The type of furnishing known as the Spanish-American is, as the name indicates, a careful amalgamation of Spanish elements with characteristics typical of indigenous to and particularly appropriate for the American people. This type of furnishing is especially suitable for the west, southwest and southern states, where Spain has so heavily left her impress, not only in architecture and articles of furniture, but in the very customs of the people.

In New England and the north-east, however, a dining room set created along Georgian lines, or the American expression of the Directoire as exemplified by the delightfully light and suitable-for-the-American-home type of furniture, the Duncan Phyfe.

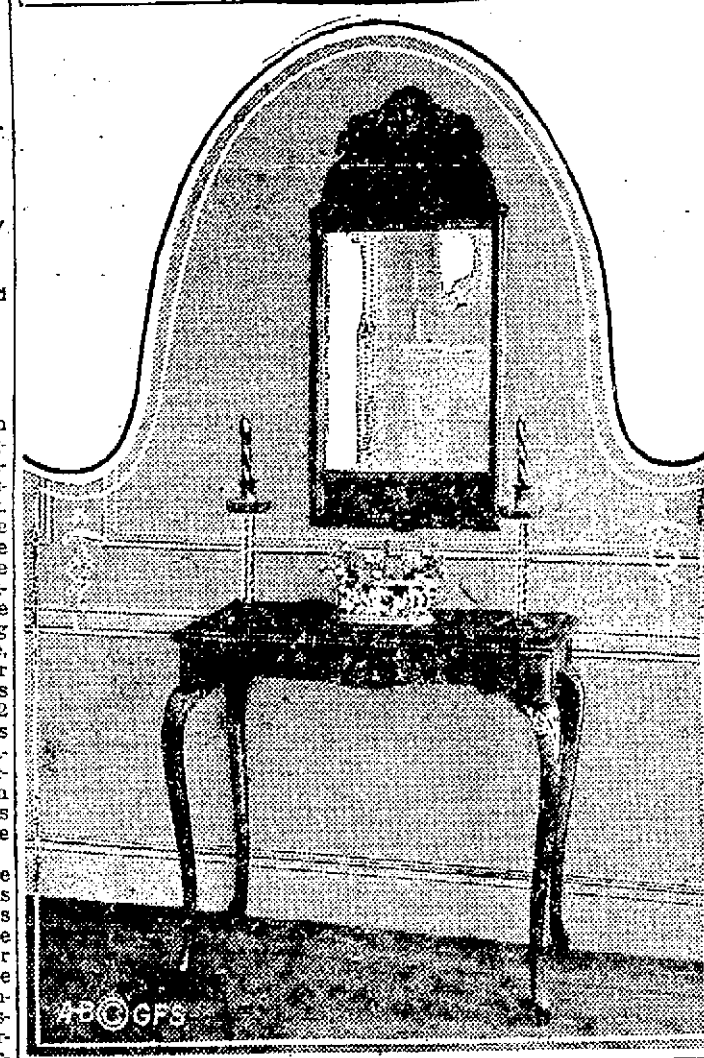

In this simple dining room we are creating let us be careful not to introduce more furniture than is actually used. Buffet and china cabinet.

table, with its complement of chairs, is all that is absolutely essential and all that we should use unless in our dining room there is place for a serving table. Where economy of space is a prime consideration, the gateleg tables are indispensable, for they can always be closed and placed against the wall when not in use. A unique linen which has been given us by one manufacturer is a set of dining room furniture in which the dining room table consists of three distinct and independent parts—a rectangular table with a semi-circular console table at each end. When less space is needed at the table these consoles may be placed against the wall and used as serving tables, or placed together in a corner forming a circular table.

Few Accessories Needed.

The decorative accessories which we place in our dining room often completely mar the effect produced by the furniture and beautiful linens and wall coverings. There is not much opportunity to use accessories in this room. On the top of our serving table, or buffet, there may be a touch of color in linen runner, simply hemstitched at the ends, with perhaps a band of black or contrasting color for variety. If we prefer, a natural linen may be used in place of the colored. A few pieces of silver of distinction (not more than three) may be placed on the side tables. Rather than use ordinary silver, which will add nothing of interest to the room, it is preferable to use two candlesticks of colorful pottery, with a painted tray standing against the wall. The tapered candles, in contrasting tones to the pottery itself, are attractive.

A large flat brilliant bowl of flowers may be used, though care must be taken that it bears a distinct color or relation to the prevailing color note in the room. It must either be in absolute contrast or of the same tones, though lighter or darker in value.

Gleaming brass is very effective for the dining room and copper is so right in tone that it is always a decided addition to any color scheme. But, whatever else we do, or do not do, avoid a bar-room display of cut glass and silver. It makes absolutely no difference if it is the most expensive kind of cut glass. It is rarely beautiful and the same amount of money would purchase a charming bit of Tiffany or Bohemian glassware infinitely more attractive. Merely because we own these things does not excuse us for vulgarly displaying them all at once. It may seem unnecessary to suggest that, if we have once taken "china painting" lessons, we would certainly be wise and assuredly more artistic to keep the jars and vases and chocolate sets and individual bone-dishes out of sight. Above all, there must be simplicity in the dining room. Elimination will do more for most of our homes than any other remedy.

The Use of Pictures.

A mooted question is that concerning the use of pictures on the dining room wall. Generally speaking, it is not advisable to use them, though there are reproductions of old flower studies which are effective. Often these are placed in polychrome, octagonal frames, the picture itself being similar to oils in effect. Dull golds, and reds, as in zinnias, or the deep purple or golden yellow of grapes, with dull green leaves, and a clear touch of delphinium blue as a contrasting note, will create quite sufficient color for any dining room. Because flowers and fruit of this type are suggested, let us not for a moment consider using the ordinary dining room flower and fruit pictures. They are absolutely unlike in effect and in artistic worth. Instead of a picture, a hanging may be placed above a buffet or serving table. This need not be a tapestry, for unless a tapestry is of artistic value it should not be used, and if it is worthy its cost will be prohibitive for the average dining room. A piece of broadcloth material, good in design and color, will be attractive and suitable for the purpose. It should, of course, carefully harmonize with the color in window draperies, rugs and other color features in the room. Candles on either side, of contrasting note, will assist in creating an interesting unit. Not only does a hanging serve its purpose because of its color, but it is effective in creating that relationship of wall and flower furnishing which is so necessary.

Our dining room furniture must be placed in groups, carefully planned, and each related to the other in scale, purpose and general effect. In this way we create unity and dignity in our dining room. After our room has been furnished and the accessories chosen,

OAK AND FRIENDSHIP

"No home furnished with oak ever lacked good fellowship," says an eminent authority on good furniture. "It endows even a thrice-told tale with a spirit of homely entertainment, which, like old friends and well-thumbed books, never grows tiresome. I like to see it about the hearth in companionable arrangements, in patterns of hospitable invitation, but not so comfortable that they suggest lethargy."

the final touch must be added, and this can be done by our lights. In fact, a warm rich glow cast over the room completely transforms it. We must always avoid the unshaded central chandelier, though in its place we may use a chandelier holding electric candles, softly shaded. Candles on a table are always a light. Wall sconces, with shield shades, add a diffused light to the room and prevent the gloomy, far-thered-on corner of the sideboard, or serving table, with parchment or mica shades, will give a warm glow, and also assist in creating our floor groups.

Whether our candles are reflected in the mirror depths of polished mahogany, or dully gleam in the deep patina of oak and walnut, there is beauty in the simple dining room which has been furnished so forthrightly with the greatest reserve. In such a room we find dignity and the quiet repose that is the prevailing spirit of our living room. In this simple dining room, the foreground importance, but, to successfully fulfill its role, it must be intelligently chosen and augmented with artistic and simple accessories. ORIENTAL RUGS RECORD HISTORY

Genuine Orientals Laboriously Made on Hand Looms, Getting Their Brilliant Colors From Vegetable Dyes.

James F. Ballard of St. Louis has given to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York a collection of Oriental rugs said to be the most comprehensive in the world. Its value is placed at $500,000. The gift is significant as showing the estimate placed on Orientals and their commercial and artistic importance.

Naturally all floor coverings have both a practical and an artistic value in varying proportions. The first place of a rug is as a covering for a floor. Its value is in proportion to its durability, its size and its weight and fineness. In all of these qualities Orientals excel, in varying degrees. They are durable, lie well on the floor and come in sizes which adapt them to all floor areas.

On the decorative side Orientals offer so wide a range of design and colors that they fit into the scheme of almost any home, however modest or pretentious. Though Orientals are more costly than domestic rugs, their wearing and decorative qualities fully offset the difference in price. Oriental rugs are valued for their age as well as for their beauty and utility. Or it would be more nearly correct to say that their age makes Orientals more valuable as it enhances their beauty. Use gives their colorings a softness and a blending quality not possible to obtain in other ways. Since the war, when the supply of antiques ran short, attempts have been made to imitate the effects of time by giving Oriental rugs chemical baths, which lower their intensity, but at the same time give them a glossy appearance not desirable. These are known as "washed" rugs.

Oriental rugs fall into a number of different classifications, being known chiefly by names taken from the territories from which they come, as Persian, Bokhara, Kazak, Anatolian, Beluchistan and so on. In some of these, the patterns and colors are easily recognizable. In others the differences are so minute that an expert is required to recognize them. In fact, the naming of Orientals is confused. Some will be called by one expert by the name of a district, while another will give them the name of a town. The result is that rugs of practically the same kind go by different names in different places. An expert knowledge of Orientals is to be acquired only by years of study and much travel and observation.

Orientals Handmade

Oriental rugs are peculiar in not having become commercialized to a great extent in their manufacture, as they are still made, only by one, by hand, in each of the various native tribes. Often they are woven from the wool of native sheep, the yarns colored with vegetable dyes and woven laboriously by hand in looms of native manufacture. A single rug may be the labor of years. The so-called "antiques" are rugs which have been used for floor coverings in tents of the Orient for many years, and owing to the soft-soled footgear of the natives they are not subjected to the severe wear they would receive in American homes.

This does not imply that their wearing qualities are not of the very best.

The wonderfully intricate patterns of Orientals are in themselves a subject for years of study in order to be fully understood. Each pattern and each motif of decoration has a religious significance, or it stands for a custom or a social observance. It is claimed by scientific men that hints of movements of population too early to be recorded in history are given by the decorative patterns found in rugs, or in the patterns widely separated. In short, Oriental rugs are a fascinating subject for study, apart from their practical and artistic side.

The Cottage Bungalow

Old-Time Designs Incorporated in Useful Convertible Furniture.

All the Charm of Years Ago Re-created in Useful Pieces Each Adapted to Many Uses.

The enchantment of modern home living is being made more and more enjoyable by the artistry of furniture designers and craftsmen in producing furniture that is convertible to a variety of uses for the apartment or cottage. Like Aladdin's lamp, a living room can be quickly metamorphosed into a delightful dining room, possessing every necessary convenience and with many of the nice things that bring charm and good taste into such a room.

The demand of these progressive times, coupled with the housing conditions, have caused furniture manufacturers to meet the space requirements of the apartment or small home dwellers with adaptable furnishings without sacrificing any of the beauty, form or usefulness of any of the pieces while gaining that end.

Delightful combinations can be effected along suite lines that result in charming effects for the home, the unmatched pieces seeming to naturally adjust themselves into a pleasing ensemble although no two pieces of the furniture are alike in design. This seems to emphasize the cozy, homelike atmosphere which leaves a lasting impression.

The public has been quick to appreciate this effort on the part of the furniture manufacturers to make the small home more attractive and livable and better homes have been the result. This is probably on account of the design of the furniture, which is of the New England Colonial type that calls up the tender associations of the past and makes one's mind revert to the pleasant things in the days gone by.

Furniture Like Old Friend. There is a warmth of feeling about English Colonial furniture that is irresistible. It's like an old friend, whom after years of separation you are glad to welcome back.

When you enter a room furnished with this type of furniture you have a feeling of immediate relaxation, comfort and ease of mind.

Moved by the spell the pleasing forms of the chairs, the table and other pieces of furniture have cast, you become retrospective. Glance back in your memory, you recall one of the pictures taken from the book of life of your younger days. What fond recollections are brought back to view! The chairs, the fireplace, the old-fashioned curtains, the mirror and easy chair and cabinet, too.

Reminiscence of their earlier years, those of the older generation would find pleasure in associating nearly all of the pieces in the unmatched ensemble with those around which they long ago formed cherished memories.

Remember father's and mother's chairs at the old home table? One was a high-backed Windsor, the other a rush-bottomed seat for mother. It was comfortable to sit in and easy to get out of, when occasion required, during the meal hour. Father's chair was a Windsor style, with graceful arms supported by attractive spindles. How you envied sitting in that chair and let your fingers play along the curved arms or up and down the spindles. Just feeling of or sitting in the chairs used by father or mother brought great joy to you then. Now it is a golden, cherished memory.

Your Own Chair. Your own chair! How quickly you discovered when it had been put at the wrong place at the table. Not until it was returned to you did you feel comfortable to enjoy your repast. It was not selfishness, just a trained respect, through daily association, for that chair, your particular chair. And father or mother probably encouraged you in that respect.

In those days, you will recall, nearly all the chairs, in fact, all of the furniture was unmatched pieces, differing in lines, yet somehow so similar in motif as to blend into a harmonious grouping with such strong, subtle influence on your mind that you now take great pleasure in this room in a home. There comes a relaxation, there is an absence of stiffness and cold formality, there is a close-up feeling, a real heart throb of sincerity when you step into this room.

Then like now, you formed cherished associations with those comfortable pieces of furniture; bonds not unlike the ties that bind you today to your nearest, dearest friends.

But custom changed things and gradually it became the vogue to have suites, the pieces matched in detail throughout. The Windsor chair, the Colonial armchair, the rush-bottomed chair, the ancient cupboard, and even the old-style clock whose "tick-tock" was music to your ears, were relegated to the attic, sold or disposed of to make room for the newer and later things, matched on suite. Fashion and public demand decreed this new order of things.

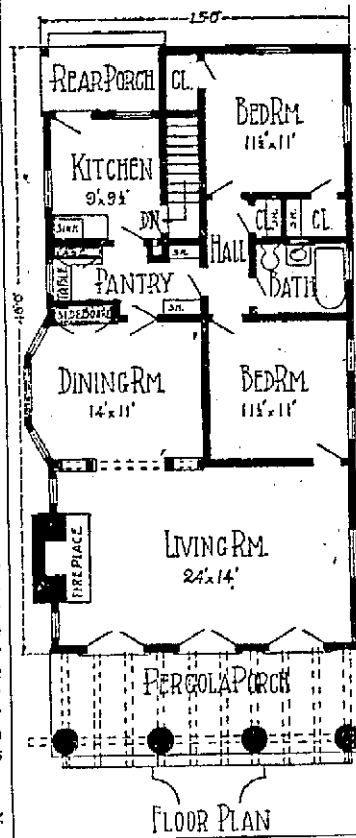

Time's Pendulum Swings Back. But time's pendulum is swinging back.

The old things, around which are woven so many fond and sacred memories, are returning. They are made of the same antique shape and form but made to meet present-day needs. They are of mahogany or walnut instead of hickory or maple; they are dull-finished, waxed or high-lighted, according to the owner's taste. They combine all the ease and comforts of the early-day furniture with modern requirements in meeting housing and living conditions.

Today, grandmother's cherished chair, closet or sideboard and table are reproduced so faithfully, and made so attractive, that early American furniture is rapidly regaining its old-time favor.

Simple Design from California

The climate of California is such that the sturdy construction required to make a home habitable year around in many other sections, is not required. As a consequence, there has been developed along the Pacific coast in the neighborhood of Los Angeles and south of that city, a type of home that has been designated the "California bungalow." A good example of this style of architecture is shown in the accompanying illustration.

Here is a white cottage of simple design made beautiful by the addition of a dormer in the roof and the pergola porch.

While an exact duplicate of the building shown would not be practicable in other than the warm sections of the country, the style may be followed, using of course the standard construction required to make a home comfortable in the climate in which it is located.

From its exterior appearance but, as shown by the floor plans, it contains five rooms, living and dining rooms and kitchen, and two bedrooms besides a bathroom. Three French doors lead off the pergola porch into the living room, which is 14 feet deep and 24 feet wide. At the left connected with the living room by a double-cased opening is the dining room, 11 by 14 feet. This is a light, attractive room, made so by the bay window in which are set three large windows, each having an exposure at an angle. Between the dining room and the kitchen is a large pantry. The kitchen is 9 by 9 feet, 6 inches.

The two bedrooms are located on the right side of the house. One is connected with the living room, while both open off a short hall that is reached through the dining room. The bathroom is between them.

A home such as this bungalow is suitable in almost any surroundings that have a touch of the natural.

DAVENPORT BED IN SPARE ROOM

Adapted to Modern Requirements—No Longer Make-shift.

MAKES EXTRA BEDROOM

Broad Inviting Couch by Day Shows No Sign of Being Comfortable Bed by Night.

With the prevailing tendency toward smaller houses, every square foot of space in the home is put to constant use. In the majority of homes, there is hardly a room to set apart for the occasional use of guests. The old-fashioned "spare room" has gone the way of the parlor and the haircloth sofa, and that makeshift, the folding bed, is no more. Providing suitable accommodation for the unexpected guest without sacrifice of space needed for everyday use in the home is a real problem confronting the family in an apartment or small house.

Fortunately for such families, the resourcefulness of American manufacturers has been equal to the emergency. In the evolution of "better homes" the emergency of the sudden guest may be accommodated to the daily routine of living without dislocating the domestic economy. Into this gap in the plan of living, the davenport bed fits with an exactness really surprising. By day a broad inviting davenport finished and upholstered to the requirements of the living room or library, it becomes at night with a single motion a bed equipped with springs, mattress, pillows and coverings.

The davenport bed is made in two sizes, long and short models, which fit it to larger or smaller rooms. In appearance it sacrifices nothing by virtue of its twofold purpose. It may be had in many authentic period designs, Queen Anne, William and Mary, renaissance or others. It may be overstuffed in tapestry, velvet, leather or other coverings. This remarkable piece of furniture conforms to the high standards of modern living rooms. Nothing of its adaptability for daytime use is sacrificed on account of its availability as a bed. To fit outward appearance, it is a broad luxurious couch in harmony with the finish of other furnishings, that conveys no suggestion of its having another use. It is made in conformity to established designs, so that no difficulty will be met in the selection of other pieces of furniture. It becomes a part of the furnishings of the room in which it finds its place, and by day it serves its purposes as a davenport, facing the fireplace or in any position to which it is best adapted. It is complete in itself as a dominating piece in the room.

During the afternoon a hostess entertains friends at a tea or a reception, who will comment on the beauty of the davenport, its comfort and in its perfect harmony with other furnishings. A sudden storm or other emergency makes it necessary for her to entertain one or two of her guests for the night. In a small apartment or house, such a happening might well cause her uneasiness. How should the visitors be given accommodation? Not so with the hostess whose furnishings include the modern davenport bed. She dismisses their protests with a smile. The family routine goes on undisturbed. The guests are entertained without incident till bedtime arrives. They disappear to make their preparations for the night, wondering perhaps where they are to sleep. To their surprise on their return they find where the davenport stood, a wide, inviting bed with soft mattress and buoyant springs. The mystery is solved! The marvelous davenport bed!

Or in case of the unexpected arrival of brother or sister, uncle or aunt, inability to entertain them in the small apartment or house may well cause embarrassment, in the absence of some provision for extra sleeping arrangements. Failure to offer entertainment might well be the cause of sincere regret. In occasion like this, the davenport bed proves its value beyond doubt.

With a single motion and no need for strength, the davenport is converted to a bed, full sized and comfortable for one or two. It is not a makeshift, as were old-time convertible beds. It is not cramped and uncomfortable. Mattress and springs are of the same high quality which distinguishes a luxurious permanent bed. Sleep is sound and refreshing and in the morning the occupants rise with admiration for the marvelous convenience of this 24-hour contribution to modern living. The bedding may be left to air briefly, then the bed is made up and it is converted back to its form of a davenport in a moment.

Taking into account the uses of the davenport bed as a couch or a day bed and its availability for sleeping accommodations at night, the davenport bed is to be regarded as a remarkable advance toward the making of better homes in the best sense of the word. What can be regarded as more important than a device which adds to the daily livableness of the home and as an aid to hospitality as well? Compare it with the old-fashioned "spare room," which was used occasionally and at other times remained closed!

Frankly, the davenport bed adds another available room to the capacity of the home at a comparatively small cost. Taking into account the furnishing, heating and maintenance of an extra room, the adding of a davenport bed becomes an instance of good management and economy. Eighty-three American manufacturers' resources enable them to furnish davenport beds in a variety of sizes, finishes and at prices which place them within reach of everybody who is building for better homes. And their products are so distributed that davenport beds are available almost everywhere.

Making Two Rooms of One

Here's a Room That Revives Fond Memories of Bygone Days on Account of Its Home Atmosphere, Its Colonial Feeling, Its Quaintness. Because of the Demand for Those Pretty and Useful Things for the Home, That Spell Comfort and Refinement, Early American Furniture Styles Are Again Popular and in Vogue.

many years with furniture which they respect and revere. No wonder then that care and thought should be given to the furnishing of this all-important room of the home.

Skilled furniture craftsmen have made it possible to produce Aladdin-like changes in this room. Friends or guests call or it is time for one of the meals of the day to be served.

Presto! Different Room. Presto! The changes are wrought. Hidden in the furniture are two fold uses instantly available when the occasion requires.

The table was quickly transformed into a dining table that will accommodate at least eight persons by merely adding the two extra leaves, which stow away in the table.

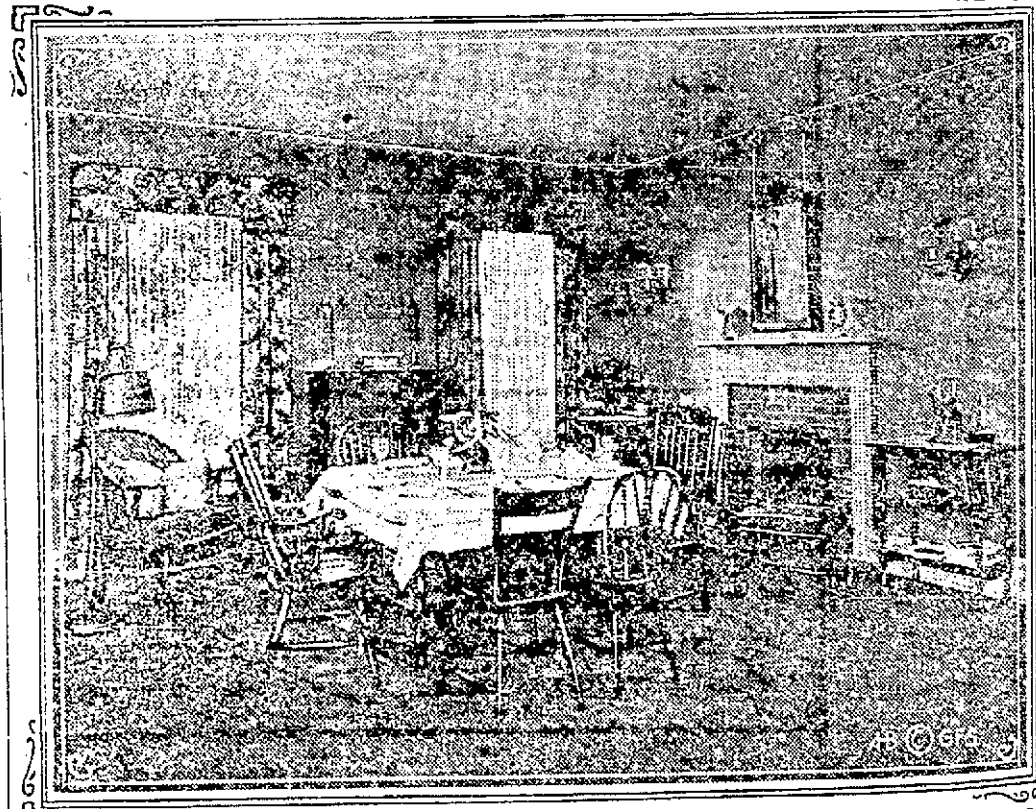

The china cabinet can be used for linen, china or silverware. The magazine or book rack becomes a serving table.

The living room metamorphosed into a dining room within a very few moments, can be as quickly changed back again.

Even further use of the room could be gained by placing a day-bed near the left-hand wall, furnishing sleeping accommodations for visitor or unexpected guest.

Another Surprise. There is another surprise in store for you. Do you remember those curtains in grandmother's home that you hoped, yes, mentally resolved, some day to reproduce in your own home? Their memory still lives with you and here they are and distinctly those of grandmother's time in the long ago. These curtains are quaintly figured creations in floral foliate design, the colors being water-melon pink, soft green and black on an oyster background, reproduced from old material found in an attic. The glass curtains of cream-colored net are trimmed at the bottom with fringe. The flat straight valance and side hangings are finished on the inside and bottom edges with a narrow cotton fringe.

The illustration shows the same room, living room or library pictured above, that has been quickly changed into a delightful dining room by merely Employing the Two-Fold Uses Concealed Within Furniture. Two Extra Leaves Stored Away in the Library Table Permit Its Use as a Dining Table to Accommodate Eight Persons. Thus Are After-Theater Lunch Parties, Week-End Guests or Suddenly Announced Visitors Easily Entertained.

The rich, brown finish of the walnut furniture, which is high-lighted, gives a completeness of tone to the room.

Harmonious Color Scheme. A harmonious color scheme suggested for making this a more pretentious living room is in millinery and fawn.

There are three kinds of wood-work which would harmonize with these colors; mahogany, not too red in tone; oak, stained medium brown; enamel finish a little lighter than the walls. The floor should be stained medium brown. A thin coat of red should be added if the trim is mahogany.

A large rug of deep-tan color, or a rug with a good deal of neutrality, would be a pleasing floor covering.

Heavy cream net, with square or round mesh, is recommended for easement curtains. Interesting over-curtains may be arranged in one of several ways. The side curtains could be made of the Essex rep-with lambrequins of the same or of velvet. A rich effect could be gained with overdraperies cut in velvet, edged with a heavy silk cord.

If rep is used at the windows the furniture could be with plain or striped velvet and the damask. But with velvet the davenport and portieres the damask.

There are three kinds of wood-work which would harmonize with these colors; mahogany, not too red in tone; oak, stained medium brown; enamel finish a little light-

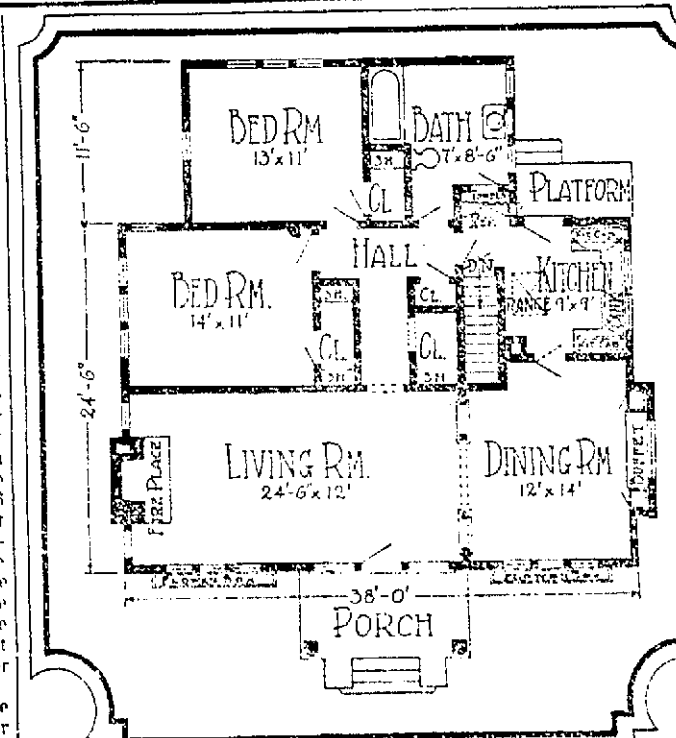

Charming but Inexpensive

Years ago the home shown in the accompanying illustration would have been described as a one-story cottage. However, had it been built at that time it would not have had the artistic porch, and probably the window boxes would have been missing. Also the first floor would have been on or little above the ground level. The progress in home architecture is forcibly demonstrated in this house. Here we have a most attractive small home; one that may be built for a comparatively small sum. However, it is good to look at and supplies all the conveniences that are demanded by the modern home owner.

Shown by the floor plan are the arrangement of the rooms and their sizes, and the conveniences that make American homes the finest in the world. The entrance leads into a living room that is 24 feet, 6 inches long and 12 feet wide. At the end is a fireplace, while connected with the living room at the front by a colonnade opening is the dining room, 12 by 14 feet. At the back of the dining room is the kitchen 9 feet square, a size that provides an efficient workroom for the housekeeper.

A short hall leading out of the living room connects with another short hall at the back. At the end of the hall is the bathroom, while opening off the hall are two good-sized bedrooms, one 11 by 14 feet and the other 11 by 13 feet. Each bedroom has a closet with drawers and shelves opening off it, while there is a third closet off the hall.

The dimensions of the house over all are only 28 by 24 feet, 6 inches, yet in this space there has been provided a roomy, comfortable and convenient home, one large enough for the average family.

It is in designing homes such as this that American architects excel. Here is a simple house, of the simplest construction made into a most attractive little home.

LEVI'S Truly - The Store of Beautiful Homes

Many things go into the making of a real home beside the affection of family ties. Comfort and beauty of the furnishings of your home also play their part.

A well-furnished living room—the davenport and wing chair covered with some durable fabric of pleasing color—a gate-leg table of neat design—mirrors—a reading lamp—a davenport table—an odd chair or two, and a rug of soft colors that blends well with all the furnishings—this living room, where you greet your friends, plays a great part in the making of a home.

And so it is with the other rooms of your home. And the knowledge that the furnishings of each room are well made and of good design makes you proud of their possession. We have gained a thorough knowledge of these facts during our years of experience, and it is this experience that has taught us that the furnishings of a home are permanent investments—that they must be well made, so as to give the service expected of them. Our salesmen have been schooled in the "Home Beautiful" idea. Come to our store and consult with them—give them the opportunity of offering suggestions which may prove very valuable.

The Ever Popular Bungalow

Is Result of Growing Desire for Practical.

Housing Shortage and High Rents Among Contributing Factors in Rapid Development of Their Double Utility.

The people of the United States from one coast to the other, have been laboring for the last two or three years under a shortage of homes that for a time was very critical. The situation has been met with characteristic vigor by a period of building activity, probably unprecedented in history. The scope of the activity differs with localities, yet in spite of it the housing shortage is not over and perhaps will not be over for some little time to come. Just what the contributing causes are need not be gone into here. The truth is, that the housing shortage is still with us.

With the conditions that brought on the shortage of houses there was disclosed a new frame of mind on the part of the average American. Perhaps high rents have had a part in realizing that the eight or ten-room house of bygone days is not merely a burden, but a needless one. Perhaps the development of the apartment house has helped many to look upon extra rooms as needless expense. Whatever the reasons may be, the average American has turned very noticeably to the small home, whether it be apartment or house. The small home is not a passing fancy. It is a disclosure of the trend of the American mind toward the practical. While it is not altogether promoted by the idea of thrift, it does express thrift, and that in one sense is the trend of American thought today. There is, of course, the eagerness of the small home to be considered, the greater intimacy with one's friends and one's bookshelf. On the other hand, the American mind is practical. Floor space costs money and people know it. The use of floor space, therefore, has become a matter of concern to a man in his business. This idea has been carried beyond the mere number or dimension of rooms. Tempered with taste, this thought goes even into the furnishing of the home. People want fine furniture, but not wasteful. It is an underlying thought with most people today, even those who can indulge themselves in the luxury of a pretentious home.

Useful Day and Night.

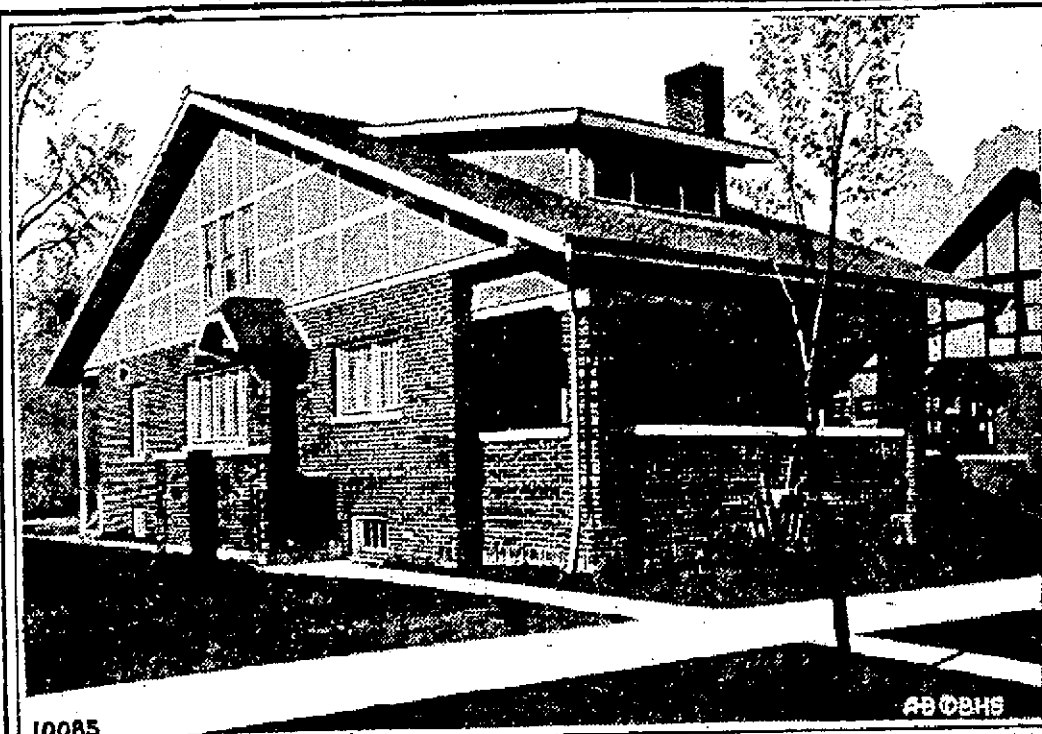

It is a combination of many experiences that has brought the davenport bed into wide popularity among all classes of people. Its place in the living room has been established by years of use; its charming combination of beauty and utility have earned for it a place in the esteem of millions of people. Considering for a moment the practical side of it, the davenport bed utilizes floor space to better advantage than any piece of furniture in the home, and simply because the davenport bed serves by day and by night. Twenty-four hours use of the same floor space is indeed a record that can be approached by no other piece of furniture in the home. Harmony with the finest furnishings makes the davenport bed a desirable piece by day, something to which the housewife points with pride. The beauty in the workmanship of the woodwork and in the luxuriousness of its upholstery, to say nothing of the elegance of the coverings in which it is to be had, gives the davenport bed a place in the most tastefully appointed home. There is something of art in the upholstery that makes it possible for such a fine piece of furniture to enclose and entirely conceal by day the full size comfortable bed that serves so well by night.

The modern davenport bed is indeed an excellent example of art, to which science has added utility without the sacrifice of art. The recognition of this fact has become nation-wide—in the California bungalow on the Pacific coast, in the village home throughout the great West, in the apartment house of the large city, in the country home that nestles in the hills or dots the shores of thousands of lakes and rivers, in the grand estates of those who have "arrived," the davenport bed has a well deserved place.

Made in Many Styles. Substantial, of ample proportions and molded to the minutest requirements of genuine comfort, the davenport bed is unquestionably admired and accepted for the service it gives. Designed to please a thousand tastes, the davenport bed harmonizes with every home. The period styles in which it is made, embrace Queen Anne, The Brothers Adam, Renaissance, Early English, Louis XVI, Chippendale, William and Mary, Colonial, Tudor, Pompeian—the whole gamut of periods notable for the accomplishment of great artists, is run in the selection of davenport beds.

Such fine handcraft as is suggested by the names just mentioned, is done full justice in the addition of the bed concealed within this remarkable piece of furniture. The bed itself is everything that comfort requires—ample width, ample length, with a full resilient spring that insures restfulness. The bed is simple; that is one of its chief claims to the consideration of the American housewife. There is no complicated

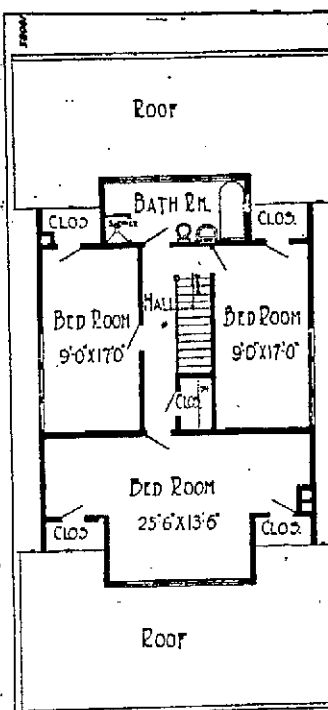

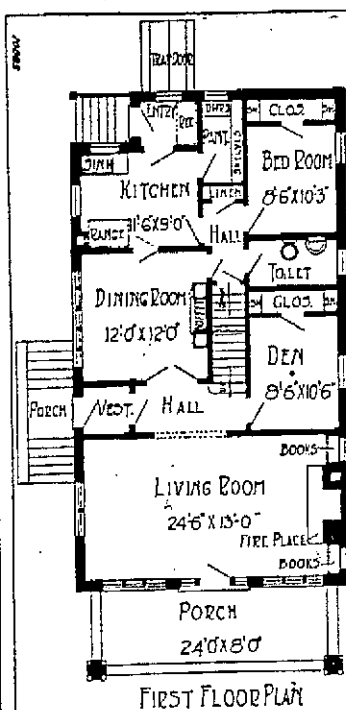

Artistic Use of Brick and Stucco

An unusually pleasing effect by combining brick with stucco has been obtained by the architect who designed the story-and-a-half bungalow shown in the accompanying illustration. Here is a home that will appeal to everyone who contemplates building. The wide, deep porch, the straight sweep of roof, broken by a dormer window and the canopy over the entrance at the side all combine to give the exterior of this home an attractive appearance.

An unusual feature of this home is the location of the entrance door at the side. This permits the use of the whole front of the house for a living room, which is 24 feet 6 inches long, and 13 feet deep. An open fireplace at one end, with bookcases on either side and small windows above the cases, the double windows at the other end of the room, and the series of windows and French doors at the front make this a light, cheerful room.

The entrance door leads into a hall, which connects with the living room by a double-casual opening. At the end of the hall is a den, or small sitting room, 8 feet 6 inches, by 10 feet 6 inches. To the left as one enters is the dining room, also of good size, 12 by 13 feet. At the rear is the kitchen, while at the rear corner is a bedroom. The dormer, which breaks the roof line at the front, permits a good-sized bedroom, 13 feet 6 inches, by 25 feet 6 inches. The dormer makes an alcove that may be utilized as a sitting or sewing space. At either side of the hall upstairs is a bedroom, while in the rear of the floor is a bathroom much larger than is usually found in a home of this size.

DON'T BE LED INTO OVERBUYING

Home and its Furnishings Can Be Beautiful and Convenient Without Great Outlay.

Many people now living in apartments and complaining of high rents could well afford to buy small homes if they did not insist upon having all of the luxuries which we like to include in our homes. It would seem apparent to every one that the comfort, convenience and security of a home of your own is surely worth more than all of the marble and elaborate decorations that can be secured in an apartment. Of course, we all like nice homes and we should have them if we can afford them, but many of us cannot afford everything we like and it is much better to get the nearest approach to our ideal that we can reasonably afford and get it now. Magazines and newspapers are filled with pictures of ideal homes planned on elaborate and expensive scales which can readily be afforded only by well-to-do people. Why not try to get a little house with a pleasing exterior and as much beauty and convenience inside as you can afford to own, then proceed to pay for it while you live in it and later, when you can afford greater luxury and convenience, many of these things that will contribute to your pleasure and comfort can be added.

We should not make the mistake of putting a nice little house on too small a lot because we cannot change that and sunshine and fresh air are so valuable that nothing else can take their place. Some people are now getting such houses with finished rooms on the first floor and a large unfinished space above, which can be divided into rooms later. Clever advertisers have placed the advantages of hot water heating so forcefully before the public that a large percentage of the people now seem to think it necessary for their homes. It is desirable in many cases, but a good hot-air furnace will heat a small house just as well—it costs much less to install it and the wall space need not be used for radiators which never add anything to the appearance of a room.

These things are mentioned merely as a few ideas which should be taken into consideration. The selection of a home site should also be considered with some idea of economy. Presently a good sized lot in a desirable built-up neighborhood close to good transportation is found to be quite expensive. Don't forget that your city is growing all the time and outlying districts which now seem to be a long way from the business district will in the near future become much more attractive and more readily accessible. In many such spots ground can be purchased at low prices.

If you continue to be a tenant you must pay rent as long as you live, but if you purchase or build a small home within your means the amount of your monthly rental will pay for it. Don't wait too long for the unattainable ideal. Get your home as soon as possible. Copyright, American Homes Bureau.

mechanism to get out of order, no protruding parts that spell danger. It has been thought out with great care and represents a scientific achievement as formidable as were the artistic achievements of the periods mentioned above. So simple indeed is the operation that brings the davenport bed from day to night use that a child can manage it. Such simplicity is not a part of all convertible furniture, but the development of the davenport bed is the result of years of experiment and research and progress. Indeed, the davenport bed is unlike convertible furniture in this important respect.

By day the mattress and bedding are as completely concealed as the bed feature itself. There is no hint of the daytime caller of the double utility of the davenport bed. There is no disclosure of the fact that the same floor space is serving the full twenty-four hours; but the fact that the davenport bed does so, in spite of its complete concealment, is in reality a tribute to its masterful conception and, in fact, to the desirability of this fine piece of furniture in the American home. Contrary to what one might expect of so efficient a contrivance, the davenport bed is inexpensive. Its very simplicity has helped to make it so. The cost varies, of course, with the size and style selected. Copyright, American Homes Bureau.

HOW TO FINANCE YOUR NEW HOME

Business Concerns Now Encourage Home Ownership.

LOANS MADE TO BUYERS

Many Ways Are Open to Prospective Home Owner Who Is Willing and Able to Do His Share.

There are no magic methods by which a home can be created out of nothing.

When a man decides that he needs a home, for instance, some two or three months after his wife has decided the same thing, he realizes that he must finance the home, usually to the extent of a payment down of 100 per cent of its cost or payment in full on the first of the month if he is using his credit.

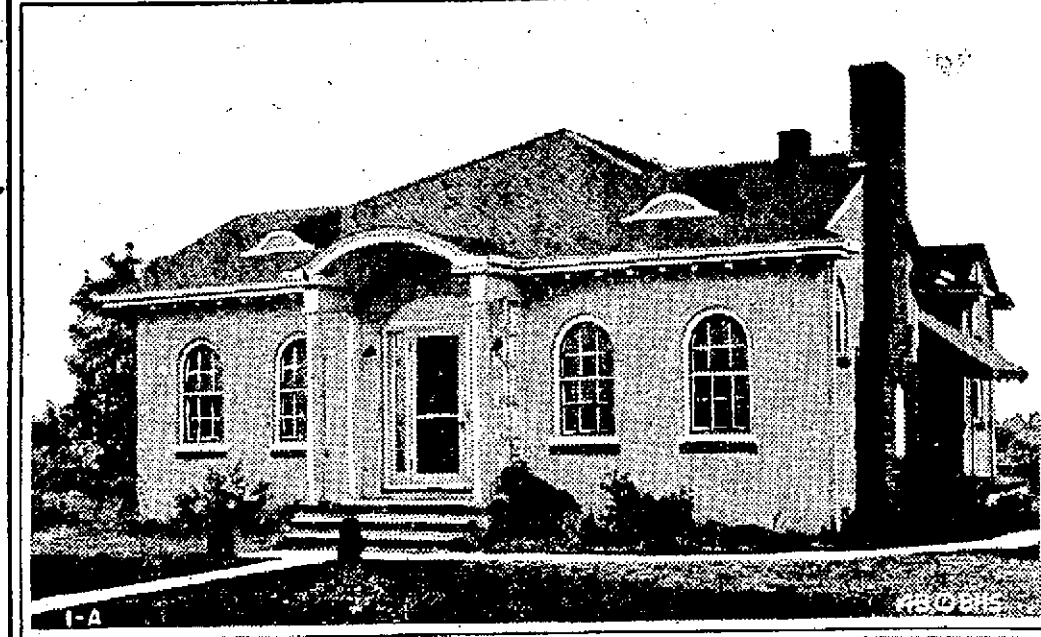

Still, there are some people who seem to have the idea that there are ways of securing a home with no money at all. There are some people, even, who seem to think that a good job is all that is necessary and that no preliminary saving or accumulation of funds is essential on their part.

However, buying a home is just like buying anything else. Sooner or later it is to be paid for, and if a bank or firm is induced to pay for the house in place of the prospective owner, they must be paid for their services and for the use of their money. Thus there have grown up several different methods of aiding prospective home owners to finance their homes. The following are simply outlines of a few of the methods which have proved to be most practicable and most helpful.

There is a widespread and keen desire on the part of practically every large bank, real estate organization and other institutions, to give every possible aid to the man or woman who wishes to secure his own home. It is a matter of common knowledge that home owners are, in general, the kind of people we like to have as neighbors, and the type of people who are Uncle Sam's best citizens.

Building and loan associations have long been rendering splendid and increasing service to builders. Their plan is usually very fair and efficient, the amount of money which they have at their disposal depends, of course, on supply and demand. Their supply is, in the main, dependent on people who use the associations as savings banks. This money supply is

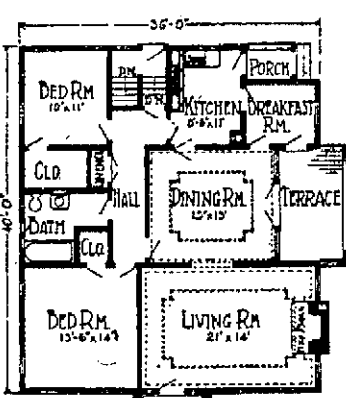

A Dignified Bungalow

Here is a stucco bungalow of unusual charm. The walls are constructed of interlocking hollow tile, covered on the outside with buff-colored stucco. The roof is of red composition shingles, while all of the outside woodwork is painted white, making a pleasing contrast of color. The steps and floor leading to the front entrance are of brick, while the walks to and around the house are of cement.

The house contains a living room, dining room, kitchen, breakfast room, two bedrooms, bath and sleeping porch. How these rooms are arranged is shown on the floor plan.

The living room is 14 by 21 feet, with a fireplace set at the end. Back of the living room and connected with it by a cased opening is the dining room, 13 by 13 feet. An unusual feature of this home is the terrace off the dining room. This is wide and deep and roofed over and is connected with the dining room by double, French doors, which are two bedrooms, with the bathroom between. Both bedrooms are on the corner, and are of good size. The dimensions of the house are 36 by 40 feet.

Stucco lends itself to almost any surroundings it may be desirable in which to set the home. It may be tinted a number of shades; also the so-called "dash" may be used, by which particles of marble, granite and other stones of various colors and hues are thrown forcibly against the wet cement mixture and, as it hardens, become rigidly fixed in the walls. In this manner an exterior of unusual beauty may be obtained by the home builder.

In this manner the color scheme of the exterior of the home shown was secured. The tint was added to the stucco before it was applied and, with the red roof, the brick floor of the porch and the outside chimney, a striking combination was secured.

Insurance Company Funds. Home building throughout the country, has been greatly stimulated by the large fund which has been set aside by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company to relieve the shortage of homes caused by the war. They have set aside a fund of $75,000,000 to be put into modest homes and apartments throughout the country. More than 3,000 new homes have already been power to receive more aid than is given him in the first mortgage loan. In such cases this loan can usually be supplemented by a second mortgage loan for an additional 25 per cent of the cost of his house, plus the value of the land. In many cases this 25 per cent is increased until it is almost equal, when added to the first mortgage loan, to the cost of the building.

Second mortgages are, of course, expensive because the security is not so good, in view of the fact that holders of second mort-furnish 80 per cent of the money necessary to complete the building. For instance—a home site costing $1,500 and the cost of the building at $7,000, total $8,500, the 20 per cent cash necessary is about $1,700, balance payable 1 per cent per month including interest at 7 per cent per annum payable monthly on deferred payments. If the home site is all paid for, then $200.00 cash in addition is required, at which time construction of the home is started, and as fast as working conditions permit, we complete it and deliver it.

"On a two-apartment house the required payment is 25 per cent cash. We furnish 75 per cent of the money necessary to complete the building, as the following example will explain.—If the home site costs $2,000 and a two-apartment building $12,000, total $14,000, the required 25 per cent cash is $3,500, balance payable 1 per cent per month including interest at 7 per cent per annum payable monthly on deferred payments. If the home site is paid for, then the required cash is only $2,000.

"The building cost of bungalows thus financed is limited to $8,000, and two apartment buildings to $12,000.

"A home site with all necessary street improvements such as sewer, water, cement sidewalks, gas, electricity and paving, may be purchased from us on terms of 15 per cent cash and 1 per cent per month and interest 6 per cent per annum payable monthly."

The above is merely cited as one example of how an individual firm is handling the financing of homes in Chicago. Many firms have other variations of the above. In all events, the best way to finance your home is to select a realtor, go to him, tell him just what you can afford to do, what you want, and he will supply some such simple method as the above suggestion.

The suggestion of going to a realtor is especially applicable in the event you want to buy a home that is already constructed. Wonderful bargains can be had in homes already constructed and the payments can be adjusted pretty much to suit your pocketbook.

Don't put off your efforts at owning your home, without consulting a realtor and see if he can suggest some way in which you can, with his help, finance yourself, because every day you do so is wasted.

ARRANGING THE FURNITURE

The arrangement of your furniture depends upon conditions of room size, wall spaces, built-in features, your particular use for the piece and its intended position. For instance, cabinets, bookcases, large consoles, and commodes are wall pieces and so either corner arrangement is wrong. Similarly, davenports, tables, desks must be against a right proportioned wall space or at right angles to it. These pieces, limited in placing, one should arrange first. Chairs one may generally arrange informally though related to a group, but there are some wall chairs which must be placed against the wall. One should group furniture for conversation, reading, writing, depending upon one's habits. Light must come over the left shoulder for reading or writing, from the side or slant when dressing, and not in the eyes when sleeping. Something high must balance with something high.

The Davenport By Night

thus very sensitive to general business conditions. Right now, owing to both a diminishing influx of money and excessive demands from builders, some building loan associations are temporarily unable to meet all their demands for building money. Many of them are placing their applications on a waiting list, which means more delay in getting the money.

What Is a Building and Loan Association?

It is a mutual, co-operative financial institution chartered by the state and composed of persons who associate themselves together for their mutual financial advantage. The members save money together.

They lend their money to each other.

They divide their profits with each other.

They work together to help each other acquire homes and to build up the community in which they live.

They provide for saving money usually squandered; an easy way to secure a home, funds for the children's education, capital to use in business, and a reserve fund for old age or adversity.

Unfortunately, these funds are, at the present time, very limited, created in this way. In the district surrounding Chicago more than $2,000,000 has been put into 500 new homes and apartments, and right now new housing construction is being financed in this territory at the rate of about 300 new homes per month. Anyone who wishes to build and whose security meets the requirements, can borrow money from this fund on the following plan:

A Fifteen-Year Loan.

1. LOAN—Up to one-half of combined value of land and net cost of building.

2. PAYMENTS—3 per cent of principal, plus interest, semi-annually.

3. INTEREST—6 1/2 per cent.

4. TERM OF LOAN—15 years. (May be prepaid after three years if borrower desires.)

5. SECURITY—First mortgage on the property.

EXAMPLE: Value of lot $1,500.00 Cost of house $5,000.00

Loan — (50% for 15 years) $5,000.00

Second Mortgage Loans.

In many cases it is necessary in addition to the above, for the borrower to receive more aid than is given him in the first mortgage loan.

In such cases this loan can usually be supplemented by a second mortgage loan for an additional 25 per cent of the cost of his house, plus the value of the land. In many cases this 25 per cent is increased until it is almost equal, when added to the first mortgage loan, to the cost of the building.

Second mortgages are, of course, expensive because the security is not so good, in view of the fact that holders of second mortgages are obliged to take a back seat for the holders of the first mortgage. This means that the home builder is required to pay a higher interest rate on the second mortgage loan and a higher rate of commission. The average second mortgage interest rate at present is approximately 7 per cent.

Art and Comfort in the Home

LIGHTING THE HOME OF TODAY

Modern Electrical Equipment Designed for Beauty and

ADDS ARTISTIC EFFECT

Adapted to Every Need, Present-Day Fixtures Complete the Charm of the Perfect
Home.

From the rushlight and the Roman lamp to the artistic effects produced by lighting today, intervenes a period of many centuries. For many hundreds of years man stumbled in darkness. Not till the invention of the electric light was a really satisfactory illumination produced, and the electric light in its early years was perfected more to the end of efficient lighting than with an eye to its decorative possibilities. Within a few years only has the decorative value of light and lamps been studied and applied. In that time progress in the manufacture of artistic lamps has been rapid.

Early efforts were for quantity rather than quality of light in the production, till it began to be understood that too much light was almost as bad as not enough. With a recognition of the artistic side came a study of the subject by technical experts and designers, till now we have electric fixtures, lamps and accessories which make possible the distribution of light in such a way as to give it an artistic effect.

Lights Should Be Scattered

Proper distribution in the rooms of the home is recognized as of equal importance to its brilliancy. In order that some objects may not be thrown into a glare and others shadowed, it is necessary to scatter light about the room at several well-chosen points, rather than to center it in a dazzling spot in the middle of the ceiling. This may be accomplished with side brackets and floor or base outlets, which make it possible to have light available on the walls, by the mantel, at the piano, on tables, by the side of a chair, or at the end of a davenport, as desired—in fact, the manufacture of lamps and fixtures has been co-related with house architecture, and the result is a more artistic and harmonious lighting.

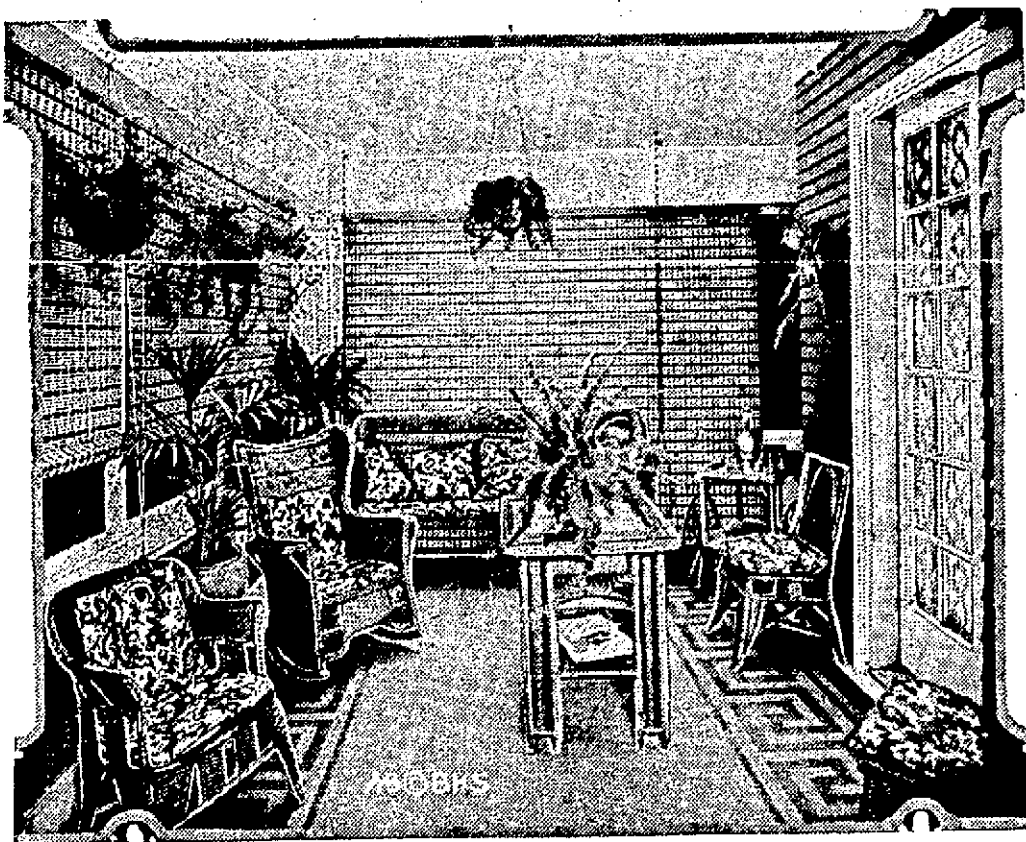

Lamps of Every Kind.
And in the realizing harmonious results lamps play a most important part. They are to be had in shape and size to adapt them to every imaginable need and in every conceivable material. From the tall, imposing piano lamp to the tiny boudoir light, lamps for the living room, the library, the dining room, and the bedroom have been designed, till apparently nothing is left to be desired. Wood and iron, brass and glass, silk and parchment, wire, tassels and fringe all play their part in the construction of modern lamps. In the big department stores of the cities whole sections are devoted to the sale of lamps alone, and hardly a store which sells household equipment fails to make a feature of lamps in many designs. One lamp manufacturing company in Chicago has over 600 people employed, of whom 200 are girls engaged in the decorative work of shades alone.

Lamps for Every Need.
In the cozy, intimate living room a bridge lamp well placed beside a deep, upholstered armchair, with the light falling at just the right angle on book or magazine, suggests the full realization of comfort. On the gateleg table or davenport table two low, softly shaded lamps give just sufficient illumination to accent the position of the table and its books or ornaments. On the mantel, tall candelabra serve to give the soft glow of the fireplace, the light which is the heart of the room, the ensemble of the room demands. The tall, shaded lamp by the side of the piano, the dainty, decorative lamp in the window with its hospitable hint of color, all these have their function in holding together the groups of furniture, while giving a sense of accent and balance. Naturally the eye is drawn to light, and by its judicious use decorative features of the room are set apart and sufficiently accented without giving them too much prominence.

In the hall the tall torchere, with height and restrained illumination, give the atmosphere of dignity which makes a first favorable impression on the guest. In the dining room light may be adapted to formal or informal purposes. In the library well-distributed light illuminates the interior or is concentrated by the reading chair as it is required. The bedroom has its distinctive manner of lighting—lamps for illuminating the room as a whole, small portable lamps for the dressing table and a reading lamp for the bedside table. And these may be had in colors and shades which harmonize with the decorations of the room.

Lamps Point Home Aspiration.
One has only to pass along a street in a good residence district of any American city in the evening to come to a realization of the place that artistic lamps have made for themselves in the homes of the people. In the window of nearly every house or apartment the dainty colors of table lamps will be seen, giving a hint of the comfort and happiness within. The lamp in a way has become the visible sign of prosperity. Just as the tree in the window during holiday week proclaims the Christmas spirit within, does the shaded lamp serve the remainder of the year as a token of aspiration toward the better home.

Lighting the Screened Porch

And in the development of the outdoor life of Americans, lamps have taken no inconspicuous part. The furnished porch and the sun-parlor are as dependent on appropriately designed lamps for completeness as they are on wicker chairs or tables. What picture of the American family at home to friends on the broad porch is complete without the shaded lamp which merges itself into the decorative plan of the outdoor room?

Modern Lamps Well Made

And the lamps which have made for themselves a place in American homes have points of sound construction to recommend them, as well as artistic merits. The standards of wood or metal have weight and bases which make them stand firmly. They are substantially attached and the frames are made of heavy wire brazed at the joints. Shades are fashioned of parchment or of layers of fabric which soften the rays of light as well as illumination, giving the decorative effect desired. And in the daytime the well-chosen colors of the lamps blend harmoniously into the decorative plan of the rooms.

In homes where the mother or daughters have the time and artistic ability to make their own lamp shades, the decorative effects of the room can be improved at little cost. All department stores carry the wire frames for lamp shades.

Parchment shades have lost some of their popularity to those made of georgette or similar material, but many still are made of parchment, and they can be decorated with stenciled designs by the use of oil paints.

In the making of the georgette shade, one first requirement to be remembered is that of obscuring the direct glare of the bulb within by means of enough layers of some fabric beneath the georgette.

BEAUTY IN GLASS SHADES

New beauty has been given to glass by the makers of glass shades and reflectors for electric lights.

Light has become so flexible in its applications, and is used for so many other purposes than illumination, that color and decorative designs have grown to be a large phase of lamp and fixture making—especially in the shading.

Still, illuminating experts have kept a careful watch on what is being done, and have endeavored to fit the picture-creating qualities of light to physical needs as well. This means that shades, although they are wanted colorful and graceful, must also be suited to the purpose of diffusing and reflecting light, and must not take away from the light shaded too much of its powers of illumination.

Thus glass has been bent and decorated into forms and colors not hitherto known in this transparent material. There are to be had now glass shades for lamps, wall fixtures and chandeliers whose beauty is equal to that of hand-painted parchment or silk and whose light-straining qualities are much superior.

Lovely Glass Shades

Glass shades to cover the bare globes so popular of late years in the candlestick-type fixtures used as replicas of the light-brackets of Colonial times have been adapted as a part of this move to correct faults in the installation of lighting. The bare globe was injurious to the eyes, but such delicate and really lovely glass shades are now to be found for covering these globes, one may have the kind of fixtures that harmonize with the prevailing styles of furnishings and still have good illumination that is kindly and efficient. These shades are made to rest on the globes, filtering and tempering the light to a soft glow.

One of the greatest advantages of glass shades that will appeal to the housewife is that, by being easily washed, they outlast all other kinds.

Other beautiful shades are to be had for pendant fixtures, covering the lamps and creating a spot of color. These are like as dining-table lights, or as lights to illuminate dressing table or desk, and are equally desirable in halls and living rooms.

QUALITY IN HOME FURNISHINGS

Quality, which has a charm all its own, is desired by all, claimed by many and realized by few. Quality is always comparative, therefore, varies according to our standards. It rarely results from accident and is achieved only through understanding, and by persistent efforts applied with unwavering fidelity to details. Especially is this true in the manufacture of furniture and home furnishings.

Quality, like virtue, is frequently its own reward, which accounts for much that we see about us.

Quality is not found on the bargain counter, because the demand for it exceeds the supply.

Those who appreciate quality, search for it. They seek to buy, they do not have to be sold.

FAMOUS COUNTRY LIFE TAPESTRIES

Record the Lives, Love and Death of Shepherd Gombaut and His Wife Mace.

Most famous of all the Country Life tapestries is the series of eight picturing the joys and sorrows of the shepherd Gombaut and his wife, the shepherdess Mace. The series starts the pair and their companions at the age of ten years and conducts them through the many and various vicissitudes of existence, to the end. The tapestries were made in France and Flanders in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

In the French Bibliotheque Nationale there is a set of wood block prints illustrating the entire series complete, with the seven or eight stanzas of verse (the last stanza always of five lines, the others of three lines) belonging to each.

The subjects are: "Chasing Butterflies," "Playing Bowls," "Dancing," "Picnicking," "Engagement," "Marriage," "The Wolf," and "Death."

The last print of the series is signed Jean LeClerc, an engraver of Paris, who flourished at the end of the sixteenth century. Apparently the tapestry story of Gombaut and Mace was so popular as to call for a version in wood block illustrations, to satisfy those who could not afford tapestries.

At the Museum of St. Lo, fifty miles south of Cherbourg, there is a set of eight Gombaut and Mace tapestries resembling the LeClerc prints. This is the set mentioned by Achille Jubinal in 1838. It was then in Arch-Chancelier Le Lion's Chateau de Launce, in Normandy. Two years later the set was presented to the newly founded museum at St. Lo.

While the St. Lo tapestries are not signed, it seems probable that they were woven in Tours. At any rate, the inventory of the Duke de la Meilleraye, deceased in 1604, shows a similar set, of similar dimensions, appraised by the tapissiers Francois Henry and Jean Poquequin as "made at Tours." Oddly enough, Jean Poquequin was the father of Moliere, who in his play "L'Avare," listed a set of "Amours de Gombaut et de Mace" as among the possessions of the miser Harpagon, and thus started a literary interest in these tapestries that has never died.

DEVELOPMENT IN FABRIC MAKING

Both fabric manufacturers and wholesalers are constantly on the lookout for clever ideas in new fabrics. Perhaps the most interesting latest development might be termed a ready-made fabric scheme.

Taking as a foundation a really fine Italian design in the manner of bygone centuries, a whole series of fabrics has been developed, entirely related in color scheme and material, and so planned that a stripe and a figure may be selected, any single fabric used alone, or to avoid monotony in furnishing and curtaining a large room, four entirely related but different materials employed.

The striped damask, which is the basis of the whole scheme, has for a background a rose, cream and green stripe with accents in a dark tone, and the very pleasing pattern woven over these stripes. The same pattern is also worked out on a plain rose ground, matching the original stripe, and in the same way a green combination of the striped background made without any pattern, completes this unusual and very practical series.

By no means the least important feature of this set of fabrics is the sunfast guarantee that goes with them. It is safe to say that the idea will be further developed in all sorts of interesting ways, to the great benefit of the ultimate consumer.

ARTISTIC USE OF WALL PAPER

Success of Every Room Depends on Its Selection.

FORMS HOME BACKGROUND

Wall Coverings Are Foundation for All Furnishings—Immense Variety Permits Any Desired Effect.

One of the first rules about wallpaper is that it is background, and mustn't be so blatant that you can't see anything else. If it is for a room without many pictures, however—a hall or dining room—it may be ever so striking and bold of pattern.

And it is background for people, too. Don't forget that, and make your friends appear against solid, bright orange, or some other color that will kill their gowns and make them look like ghosts. That was what the Empress Josephine did once, so they say. She learned that her rival was to wear a blue gown, so she hung her walls with a vivid green that killed it, while she herself appeared in white satin, admirably set off. But it wasn't exactly hospitable, was it?

Because a wallpaper should be background, it should not be ornamented with realistic pictures of animal life, real dogs, real women drinking tea, real lovers embracing and so on.

Yet all rules have exceptions, you know. So real dogs are adorable on nursery papers—while some reproductions of Colonial papers have "scenes" on them, which are allowable because they are historical. And so, sometimes, dainty and brilliant effects in color and design gain entry to good taste.

What Color Does to Us.
Color has a definite effect on people. We all know that. But we must realize under certain conditions the same color has different effects and different reactions.

Green is more of a relief in the city than in the country. Red on a blustery winter night is cozy and sociable. In the daytime it contracts the size of a room; in summer it is hot and oppressive. Red is called an "advancing color" because it makes the room seem small. Blue, on the other hand, is a "receding color" and increases its apparent size. Red excites, yellow cheers and stimulates, and blue quiets. Intense colors, bright reds, orange, purple, brilliant green should be used only in small doses. A large area covered with them height, Tapestry effects give width. Or there are devices that emphasize the horizontal lines by dividing the height into three parts, with a dado below and a cornice above the paper. Where the ceiling is dropped, a room usually appears wider. Warm colors decrease; cool ones enlarge the apparent size of the room. Those are invariable physical laws.

Secrets of Texture.
The texture is the roughness or smoothness, the fineness or coarseness; in other words, the "feel."

type we call Adam. These are all formal and rich, demanding elegant wallpapers, small figured brocades in light tones, pastel satin stripes, and the correct period papers—silk, florets and damasks are also available. Finally, perhaps the favorite of all painted furniture is the Colonial type of our forefathers—Windsor chairs, dressers and tip tables, corner cabinets. For these all over floral patterns, chintzes, landscapes and scenic papers, especially if set in panels, and quaint Dutch tile effects that suggest early times. Whatever the type of painted furniture, the paper must be in keeping with a free gay spirit. Anything solemn or staid would be out of tune.

The Formal Rooms.
Formal rooms demand damask, grasscloth, richly embossed papers, that are too serious for more intimate occasions. Another formal paper is the flock. This is printed in a pattern formed of adhesive substance upon which fine shavings of wool reduced to a powder are dusted. The wool adheres, forming a cloth of velvetlike texture greatly admired for formal libraries and reception rooms. Silk florets are, of course, made of silk instead of wool. Their peculiar glistening effect is interesting and unusual.

Period papers must be used carefully. Adam paper may be used with Chippendale, Sheraton, Heppelwhite, or other Georgian furniture, unless the room has casement windows, a low-beamed ceiling, an inglenook or other cottage features. Never use it with Tudor, Jacobean or Flemish styles. An Adam paper or any paper of symmetrical construction and classical detail, should be used only in a rectangular room. Have your wallpaper suit your house as well as your furniture, or your walls will look as if they belonged somewhere else.

Tapestry Papers.
Tapestry papers suit furniture of almost any style, but Jacobean, Italian and heavy oak especially. With tapestry-upholstered furniture, however, another paper is often more contrasting and pleasant. Never use them with gilded furniture, or where a delicate or frolicsome effect is desired.

Tapestry paper, as a rule, cannot take pictures: it is itself pictorial. In the indefinite foliage patterns of light shades, it is possible to hang a fairly strong picture. No watercolor or etching should ever be placed on a tapestry background.

Wallpapers and Draperies.
Not only the color but the texture of neighboring papers and draperies must harmonize. Don't use thin silk curtains against burly walls. Velour does not go with chintz paper, nor madras with a leather.

The patterns of walls and hangings must be harmonious and not clashing. Too much pattern is bad. It is a safe generalization to have plain curtains with a figured wall, unless the figure be inconspicuous. Striped paper may often be used with figured curtains, however.

Above all, the hangings and paper do not need to match. Pleasing contrasts often take away the mechanical "store" look of the room too painstakingly matched.

About Pictures.
Sometimes we are advised not to hang pictures on patterned paper. Such a generalization is absurd. Many patterned papers are good backgrounds for pictures, better than plain walls where the picture would be offensive. The use of yellow in all its various tones is growing. This is well, for it is sunshiny and cheerful.

Light walls usually help make one forget that he is indoors, caged in. However, dark colors used in combination with light ones, often make wallpaper more interesting and give it "character." If a room is dimly lighted, it needs light paper, and vice versa.

Then there are tones of colors—you may have a "warm gray" or a "cool gray." Also the furnishings, especially curtains and rugs, must be considered as to their effect. Sometimes a north room is small,

Is there any moment so dismaying as the one when we first see the house our husband has rented, and find the woodwork "impossible"? But wallpaper can soften the crudity of the colors about it. Cherry wood may be modified by grayed tones of red in paper or draperies. Imitation oak may be softened by grayed tones of yellow. A bright blue or green tiling about a fireplace will be less insistent if the color is repeated in milder tones in the wallpaper or floor coverings.

Improve the Proportions.
If your room is awkward, too low, too high, too long, too short, wallpaper can make it right. Simple vertical stripes will increase nature look frail and inadequate; but damask, chintz, Venetian effects are possibilities. For elaborate rooms in ornate French styles, moire, satin, and silk finishes have adequate richness.

The Walls for Painted Furniture.
There is a growing popularity for painted furniture. But each style needs a definite rule. There is the delightful informal painted furniture that suggests the Austrian peasant and the Tyrol. This has bright, bold color, frank, sturdy lines, and a spontaneous, rough-and-ready, happy-go-lucky character. It needs wallpaper with strong surface color, and finished, plastered effects, stipples and ornaments. Then we have painted furniture of the Louis XV and XVI varieties and that other Eighteenth century so one uses a cool paper to give size.

MAKING A HOME OF AN APARTMENT

A Problem Confronting Many City Dwellers.

THE LIMITATIONS OF SIZE

Careful Judgment in Furnishing Will Make Attractive and Livable Dwelling Place Though Space May Be Limited.

Although to own one's home is the ideal of every one, we yet have with us the cities. Cities ever mean congestion of population and when an acre of ground must form the home site for scores of families, the apartment building is the only solution. They can't be ignored by furniture designers, for a great proportion of our city residents live in them, and as long as there are city new-laws, new furniture will be acquired to put into "three rooms and bath" homes. Thus the range of apartment furniture has become much greater within the last few years.

The chief objection to an apartment as a home is that it rarely has a homelike atmosphere. The home-maker has made the mistake of trying to furnish the apartment like a house, and it can't be done successfully. Two girls of totally different types cannot wear clothes of similar design and each look her best, yet each can dress to suit her particular type and be a beauty in her own fashion. This applies to houses and apartments.

Rugs, furniture and draperies must be assembled with a thought of their harmonious relation and the space they will occupy. Often times massive furniture is crowded into cramped quarters until it gives the impression of having been bought for a more pretentious establishment, and later brought to "reduced circumstances."

Subdued Tones for Walls.

The first consideration must be the walls. Whether painted, papered or plastered, they should be kept subdued in tone. Large conspicuous patterns in the paper, or warm colors, red, yellow or orange, have a tendency to bring the walls close, while cool grays and tans are receding colors, which give an impression of greater space. A small apartment with French doors or wide doorways may have the walls in the different rooms treated alike, which gives a further impression of space, or two of the rooms may give a harmonious contrast, with the bedroom papered with a narrow vertical stripe.

When selecting the furnishings for the apartment, the home-maker should begin with the living room. If this room properly reflects the home atmosphere, the rest of the apartment can take care of itself. It is not necessary that the furniture be of a specific style or period, or even matched, but the chairs should all be comfortable, and each piece in the room in key with the others and with the walls, rugs and hangings.

Room Influences Color Scheme.

The first consideration in choosing the color scheme should be to determine whether the room is "light" or "dark." Nine chances to one are that it is dark. Thus furnished with the knowledge of the limitations of the room, the home-maker has a good foundation to work from. The furniture should not be too heavy and cumbersome. Great overstuffed pieces that look well, and are delightfully comfortable in the spacious country house, are taboo in the city apartment. But there are innumerable upholstered sofas of davenport, rocker and easy chair, whose slender carved or tapered legs, cane inserts and other features, give them an air of being in their proper surroundings. A good reading table is a necessity, which may be larger or smaller, according to the presence or absence of a piano. A couple of extra chairs, possibly of the comfortable Windsor type, which blends happily with most upholstered furniture, are sufficient.

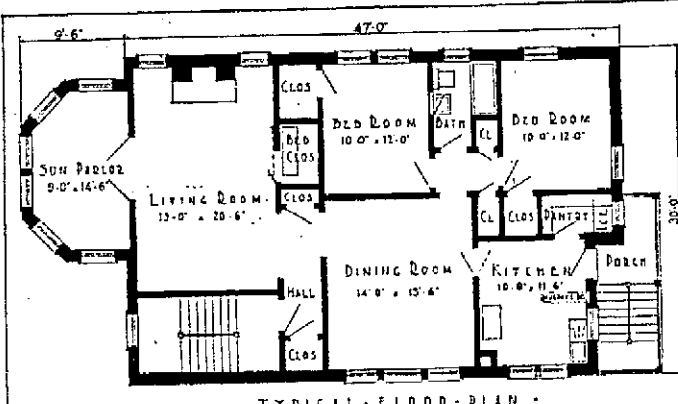

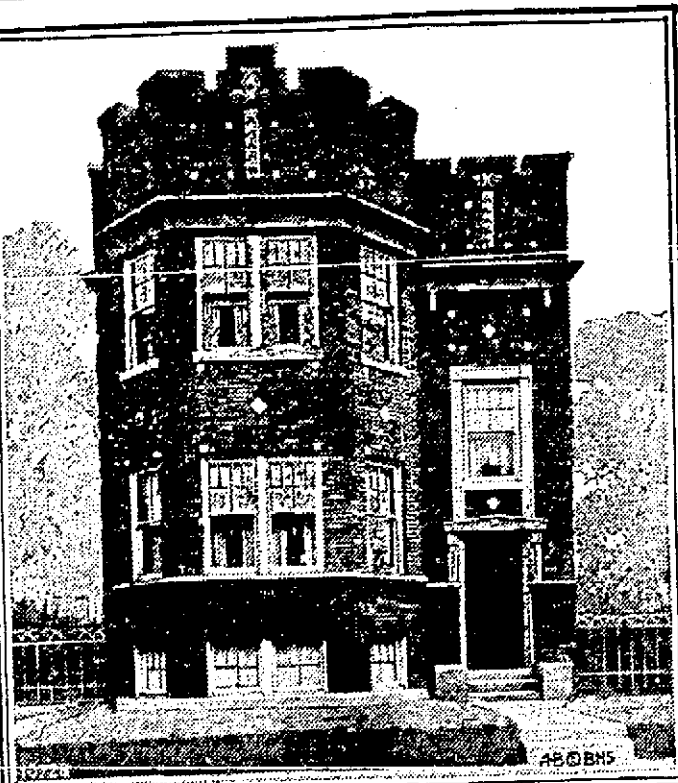

The rug should not be too dark, for it would have a tendency to lower the scheme of the entire room, but should be of a neutral shade darker than the walls. The windows should have cream or white glass curtains, preferably of net, and overdraperies of light-colored cloth which carries out the color scheme, or silk in a plain color or narrow stripe, according to the taste of the owner. For the over-drapes, if there is no fireplace, its glow may be simulated by shades of warm colors, red, orange and yellow, for the lamps. Reading lamps which stand on their own base are preferable to table lamps, for the limited lamp space may be utilized by books and a vase of flowers.

The Dining Room.

The dining room, which usually opens off the living room with French doors, may repeat the color scheme of the living room, and if not, should be decorated with a harmonious color scheme. The narrow dining table, with hush-bulbs, has no place in the small apartment dining room. But there are many small matched suites to choose from, and the home-maker can find a suitable type for the suites range from mahogany-paneled tables to the painted set in which the table, serving table and china cabinet may be nested between two men in a space some 18 inches wide.

The bedroom should likewise be equipped with furniture which does not give the impression of overcrowding. Day chintz does much

Home for Two Families

Many prospective home builders desire more than a home for themselves; they also want to make an investment that will bring them a steady, even though it is a small income. That is why the two-flat building has been and is, a most popular type of building, especially in the larger cities. The same foundation walls and the same roof support and cover two homes, the only added cost being the extra walls and the interior finish of the second apartment. Those who have made a study of home building will realize that an apartment building is in reality two or more bungalows, one placed on top of the other, usually with identical floor plans. The owner lives in one of the apartments and rents the other; the same heating plant provides for both.

to brighten the apartment bedroom, which is unusually lucky if it has more than one window, but one must take care to have it lighted properly, rather than have conventional figures of birds, beasts and flowers. Window drapes, dresser top and chair cushions will be a sufficient amount of chintz to brighten the room, even though the furniture is dark.

To demonstrate the homeliness and cheeriness with which an apartment may be decorated and furnished, the Queensborough corporation of New York recently employed an experienced interior decorator to furnish an exhibition apartment with furniture and materials suited to the style and size of the apartment and the probable means of occupant. The result was so satisfactory that the decorator has been retained to consult with the new tenants in selecting the scheme of furnishings to suit individual tastes.

TABLE SHOULD BE MAIN FEATURE OF DINING ROOM

Other Furnishings Planned to Bring Spirit of Good Cheer and Contentment.

A dining room is supposed to be a place where people eat. Not much chance there for argument, yet how often that idea seems to get mislaid in the minds of home makers and decorators. Now if a room is to be used for eating, the important feature of that room should be the table upon which the eatables are placed and around which the family gathers to dispose of them. It should be the high light of the room—picture with everything else in half-tone. Of course, one can bring up circumstances such as crowded quarters or poor cooking, which might make it desirable to divert one's mind into other channels, as did Bill Nye, who in time of financial stress, provided "mush and molasses" for the family, leading them in singing while they partook of conical mush.

Our thoughts at meal time should be personal ones, and everything about the room suggestive of happiness and cheer. The decorations, the pictures, the plants, the chairs, should be planned with the idea of contributing to the spirit of good cheer and contentment.

We have all come into dining rooms expecting to enjoy a good meal and found the surroundings so

FINANCING HOME BUYING NO LONGER HAS TERRORS

Furnishing of Funds for Home Building Now Organized Business Founded on Good Faith.

"Whenever I go into a bank I get rattled," Stephen Leacock confessed in beginning one of his inimitable sketches. The average man who has overcome his misgivings at the cages and bars of a bank can sympathize with him, for who among us has not turned cold at the thought of financing the building of a home?

And yet why should he? Is it the leech-like mortgage of the old melodrama—the rapacity of the money lenders as depicted in "The Merchant of Venice," or the thought of dispossession on a bitter night that has unjustly prejudiced many the uninitiated to this particular phase of modern-day business credit?

Fortunately for the would-be home builder, within the past decade there has come a systematizing of loans and credit with respect to the home-builder and his problems that has taken away much of the red tape and difficulties. There is no longer a reason—save an uncommendable timidity—that need prevent a man with a position, who is paying rent, from building his own home.

It is desirable, before any financial negotiations are entered into, to ascertain as nearly as possible, just what your proposed home is to cost. Plans and specifications, including such details as the furnace, electric light fixtures, and interior finish, should be submitted to various contractors for estimates. With these figures you are prepared to talk business.

Unless your home is to be built under the contract system under the direction of a home-building company, it is always advisable to have your lot paid for. This is a tangible evidence of good faith on your part that cannot fail making a good impression.

In addition to having the lot, a sum of money between 10 and 20 per cent of the total value of the house you propose to build is almost a necessity.

If you are paying from 20 to 25 per cent of your income for rent, you have that as the nucleus to make your regular payments, month by month. In addition to this, such sums as you would naturally save during the year, can be added to the payments, except the amount required to pay the interest on the deferred payments, and such necessary items as fuel, light, taxes, insurance and upkeep.

It is advisable that your home cost no more than the total sums you are prepared to pay over a period of ten or fifteen years. Even though that is only $40 per month—for instance—over a period of ten years it will amount to $4,800.

Briefly, there are three methods of home financing. One is paying on contract, another is borrowing on first and second mortgages, and the third is by membership in a building and loan association.

If you have a clear title to the lot, and are able to make a cash payment of from 10 to 20 per cent of the house value, there are a number of home building companies that will take over your lot and build the house under the contract system. The company will hold the title to the house until the monthly payments, usually one per cent of the total, amount to the total value.

Under this plan, however, you must look at your contract with the closest scrutiny. Also, consider the financial and business reputation of the company you are dealing with, and choose none but the best. With the contract system you have the advantage of dealing with one person throughout the entire transaction, but it has more stringent provisions in that dispossession may take place in 60 days, whereas in the case of a mortgage you are safeguarded for a much longer time.

Assuming that your lot is paid for, and you have the means to make an initial payment, then it will not be difficult to place a first mortgage of 50 to 60 per cent of the total house and lot value. The remainder will be taken care of by a second mortgage.

For instance, if your house is to cost $8,500, you will be able to get a first mortgage of at least $3,500. With a first payment of $1,500, then the second mortgage need only be arranged for $1,500. The same procedure would be in order, whether the cost of the house was more or less.

A state bank will nearly always take a first-class mortgage, but usually the second mortgage must be offered to other institutions or individuals. Contractors are often willing to take the second mortgage in part payment of their services.

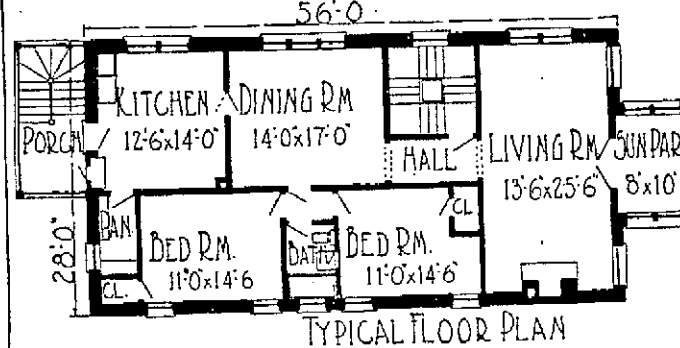

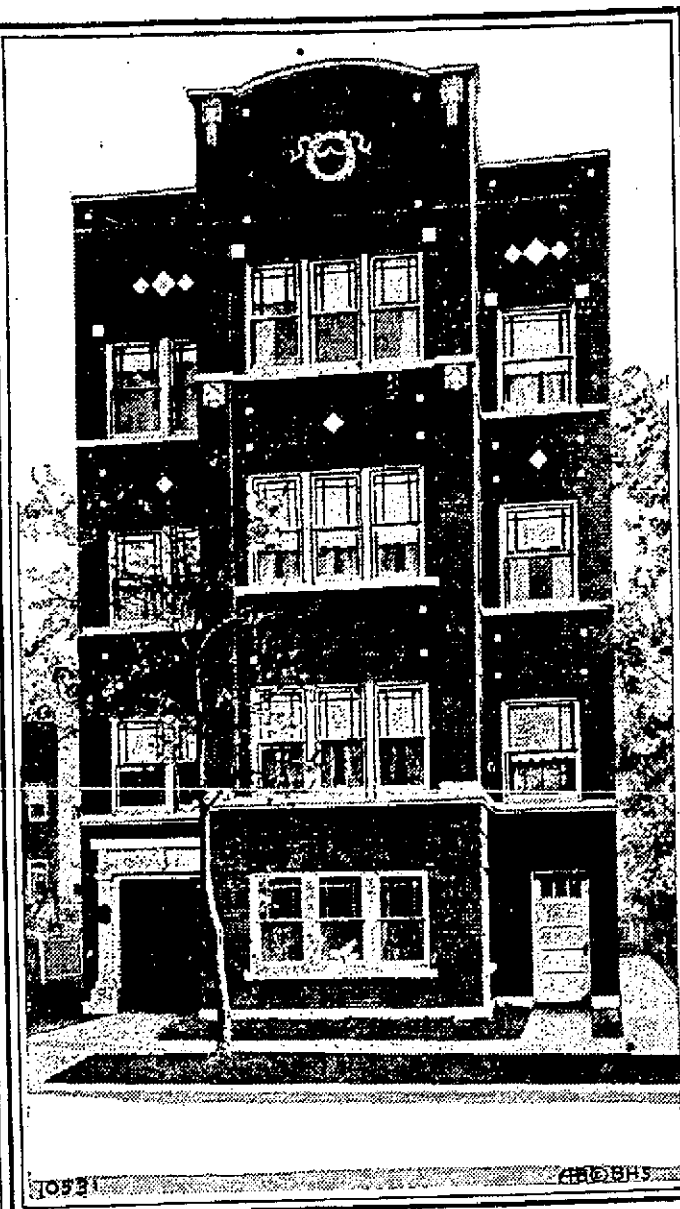

Membership in a building and loan association is one of the most practical and satisfactory ways in which to arrange for financing a home. There are many such associations, entirely reputable. You become a member by subscribing for stock, payable in weekly or monthly installments of 25 cents or more per share. The number of shares you contract for depends, of course, upon how large a loan you desire.

When your payments are equal to from 20 to 35 per cent of the amount you need to build your home, you will obtain the loan by assigning your stock to the association, in addition to giving a first mortgage on both the house and lot to the association. The mortgage is only for the amount between the total cost and the money you have paid in.

After this has been arranged, all you need do is to keep on paying into the association the regular monthly installments, plus the interest on the mortgage. This stock continues to pay dividends, and when the dividends and the earnings equal the par value of the stock, you transfer the shares to the association, and in turn you receive title to the property.

A Good Investment

With its three floors, each arranged to give the greatest possible amount of floor space, and designed to make the most of the space limitations of a narrow lot, this three-apartment building appeals as much for its investment capabilities as for its up-to-date, pleasing appearance. The ornamental hip roof of green tile combines to make its appearance from the street more imposing.

The entrance is through the high English basement, which should be an inviting hallway, finished either in marble or wood or composition paneling. The apartments are entered from the hall landings, the door opening into a vestibule, connecting in turn with the living room and dining room.

Worthy of note is the living room, arranged according to the latest ideas in apartment construction, to occupy the full width of the apartment on each floor. The plan calls for light on two sides of the living room, but this could be increased to three sides with windows that flanked the fireplace at one end.

The sun parlor is divided from the living room by double doors and a wall, which construction could be omitted at the owner's discretion, making one large room. The dining room has triple window lighting and well-balanced wall space that shows the buffet and other furnishings to the best advantage. It opens directly into the kitchen, the ample dimensions of which are inviting in these days of almost too-compact kitchenettes. A nice feature is the outside folding door for the refrigerator. The party with his windows means considerable saving in ice expense in cool weather.

There are two bedrooms, which brings the number of rooms in all to five, exclusive of sun parlor. Both bedrooms adjoin the bathroom and have excellent lighting and closet space. This type of apartment suggests itself as an investment, the owner to occupy one floor and the remaining two floors let to the desired kind of tenants.

THE FORGOTTEN LETTER

Did you ever pass a furniture store display window, glance at the piece, see a small writing desk, just give it a merely glancing notice, then continue on your journey?

It did not occur to you that the escrivitoire, or small writing desk, or desk secretary you saw, stood there as a monument to a nation's forgetfulness. But it did.

Some of the world's greatest literature consists of letters. Who has not read and re-read, with tear-dimmed eyes, Lincoln's letter to the mother whose son was slain in battle?

Tucked away in mother's bureau drawer is a faded packet of letters that brings a gleam to her eyes and sweet wisdom to her face.

How tragic, the ribbon-tied bundle of letters stained with the tears of the maiden whose lover died overseas.

Letters—that say so much, or so little. How subtle, the letter that says one thing and means another. How aggravating, the letter that leaves you uncertain. How devastating, the forgotten letter reproduced to confound you.

It is to be regretted that in these days of polka-dot, progress you may call it, we are losing the courtesies, the gallantry, the fine politeness of the letter. Or are we? Perhaps you still write letters and receive them. If you do, encourage others because the day of friendly letter writing is waning, it is becoming a lost art.

A dining room, like anything else, is most satisfactory when it is best suited to its use, so whatever in it helps to make dining enjoyable is worthwhile, but anything that interferes with it should be dispensed of. The room should be comfortable, pleasant and attractive, and filled with cheer as to make of each meal not a mere hunger-stopper but a happy family gathering.

HOME OWNING IS BEST INVESTMENT

Safest Security and Pays Largest Returns on Money.

AN INCENTIVE TO SAVING

Interesting Figures Show Large Savings Made by Home Owners as Compared With Cost of Renting Same Home.

Acres of literature have been offered, editorials, lectures and books without number have been written dealing with the joys of home ownership, the health value, unrestricted freedom, the value of permanent friendships, good citizenship and community spirit, available only to home owners. The average home seeker readily accepts the argument that these advantages for himself and loved ones are in fact worth real money and are from every angle of the most value and importance. But there still remains a large army of individuals who must be sold on the proposition that, independent of all these things, the purchase of a home must justify itself on the basis of a real saving in "cold cash." That is, he must be shown that it is cheaper in dollars and cents to buy than to rent.

Compare Owning and Renting.

The intending home buyer should study carefully the following table of figures, which distinctly and clearly sets forth the financial advantage to the purchaser of a two-flat building, on a fifteen-year time-payment basis. Rentals figured are conservatively estimated and averaged over a long period of years. Buy a brick 2-apartment building.....$10,500.00 15 years' interest at 6%.....9,450.00

15 years' taxes.....1,500.00 15 years' water.....180.00 Cleaning and Repairs.....750.00 Insurance.....216.00 Interest on these sundry items ($2,640).....1,190.70

Total cost in 15 years.....$12,788.70 Rental income for 15 years.....$18,000.00

Interest for 15 years.....$1,190.70 (average of 7 1/2 years).....8,100.00

Total income.....$20,100.00 Total cost.....$12,788.70

Income for 15 years pays for building and creates a surplus of.....$ 7,311.30

In the meantime the tenant, at $30 per month, has frittered away (in principal and interest) $3,050.00 (and doesn't own a single, is still "in harness," subject to landlord dictation, is 15 years older, earning power waning, etc.

The following is an interesting calculation showing the deplorable predicament of a tenant as compared with a purchaser of a modest cottage selling for $5,000.00 on an eighteen-year payment plan.

"A" Pays $37.50 per month rent for 18 years. 18 years' rent at $37.50 per month.....$ 8,100.00 Interest at 6% (average 0 years).....4,374.00

Cost of 18 years' rent.....$12,474.00 And he doesn't own a single! He is 18 years older, with earning power waning, and still "in harness," paying rent.

See what "B" has accomplished in the same time with $2,074 less money.

"B" Buys cottage, $5,000.00 (paving paid). Pays $500 cash, balance payable with all interest in 18 years. Cost of cottage.....$ 5,000.00 Less cash payment.....500.00

Interest for 18 years at 6%.....$ 4,800.00 Add cash payment.....500.00 Interest on cash payment.....500.00

"B" has home absolutely paid for (with all interest) in 18 years for total cost of $10,400.00. $2,074.00 less than rent has cost "A." "B's" notes, paid monthly, represent ever-increasing equity, while "A's" accumulated rent receipts are worthless.

"B" and his family have all this time been in the full enjoyment of home, while "A" has been hauling his family and furniture from "pillar to post" to avoid "landlordism."

In treating with a modest home no taxes are figured, because the average tenant must admit that he pays in moving expenses, at today's cost, over a period of eight years and figuring broken furniture, lost time, extra help, etc., an amount fully equal to the tax consideration.

Use Careful Judgment.

It should be understood that in buying either a vacant lot or a home, the purchaser is called upon to use reasonable judgment, to compare the offerings of various subdividers and builders, consider the trend of population growth, present transportation and probable future improvements of all kinds. Assuming ordinary care in these matters, the intending home buyer may easily take for granted the fairness of this statement: The material and enhancement in the value of the property will far exceed any possible depreciation either in the value of the land and improvements or in the income therefrom.

play a few of our choicest pieces of porcelain or silver. It is not well to have all the family tableware on exhibition. Plates, tea cups, and carving knives are appropriate decorations for a table top, but some way a fringe of cups hanging from a shelf and other eating utensils strung along an open plate rail are too suggestive of dust and fly specks to be appetizing. Even heaps of china in a glass case seem out of place in the dining room—they are not only depressing that we lost interest and appetite. Then again we have gone into some bright, cheerful room with everything fresh and attractive, the lawn snowy, the silver and glassware glistening and the whole room inviting; and with perhaps the simplest of food have had the enjoyment of epicures.

Not Place for Skeletons. We occupy the dining room but a short time and our minds are at ease, as we can enjoy livelier surroundings than in the living room or library where we wish to concentrate on serious reading and conversation. For that very reason we do not want to look at portraits of dead nobles and heads of state on exhibition. Neither do we enjoy stuffed corpses of fish or game struck around on the wall. The ancients had a skeleton at the feast; we want glowing, vigorous life to inspire us.

The great FACT which STANDS OUT AND RINGS TRUE about our native city is this -- that THERE ARE MORE PEOPLE IN PORTSMOUTH who own THEIR HOMES than in any other CITY OF COMPARATIVE size in the STATE OF OHIO. A BROAD STATEMENT INDEED, but one worthy of much THOUGHT. To have attained this most ENVIABLE POSITION there must have been a REASON.

ALL CREDIT is given our long list of SPLENDID MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES with their WONDERFUL PAYROLLS which finds their way into THOUSANDS OF WORKING HANDS. But this fact ALONE would not have made this, "THE CITY OF HOMES." There must necessarily follow the great factor in life, THAT OF REGULAR AND SYSTEMATIC SAVING. THE BUILDING & LOAN ASSOCIATIONS of this City stand SECOND TO NONE in point of STRENGTH, RELIABILITY and SAFETY, backed by ASSETS of over EIGHT MILLION DOLLARS all of which is loaned upon PORTSMOUTH AND SUBURBAN HOMES. The TWO FACTORS can readily be seen to go HAND IN HAND -- PAYROLLS AND REGULAR SAVING. We speak with personal knowledge of one of these GREAT BUILDING AND LOAN INSTITUTIONS.

The Citizens Savings & Loan Association Co.

With ASSETS of over TWO AND ONE HALF MILLION DOLLARS was organized THIRTY-TWO YEARS AGO, and has been doing business under practically the SAME MANAGEMENT all this time. It has RECEIVED AND DISBURSED many MILLIONS OF DOLLARS. It has PROVIDED THE MEANS FOR THOUSANDS OF HOMES. It has SAFEGUARDED THE SAVINGS OF THOUSANDS OF DEPOSITORS. It has GAINED in ASSETS EACH YEAR SINCE ORGANIZATION AND IT HAS NEVER SUFFERED THE LOSS OF A SINGLE DOLLAR, a record for which the management is TRULY PROUD.

Why the "Better Homes" Demonstration In Portsmouth

1. To show the advantages of thrift for home ownership. Only 48 percent are home owners. Ownership encourages responsibility.
2. To overcome the present shortage of homes Portsmouth needs 1000 homes.
3. To strengthen home life and make it attractive.
4. To assist and encourage home-makers and home builders. Ninety-two per cent of the women of America do their own home work.

5. To Improve the home environment, thereby strengthening the child. To increase the efficiency of the wage-earner of the house.
6. To stimulate sensible and valuable purchasing for home improvement.
7. To mobilize community pride for a common objective — Pride of Home.

The future history of Portsmouth will be shaped in large measure by the character of its homes. If we continue to be a home-loving people we shall have the strength that comes only from a virile family life. This means that our homes must be attractive, comfortable, convenient, wholesome. They must keep pace with the progress made outside the home.

Leadership--

Thirty years have passed since this store first opened its doors to the public of Portsmouth.

With a sure and steady growth we reached the enviable position of being the leading furniture store in this city--a position we have maintained successfully for over ten years.

It is only because we have steadfastly adhered to the policy upon which this business was founded that this leadership has been made possible.

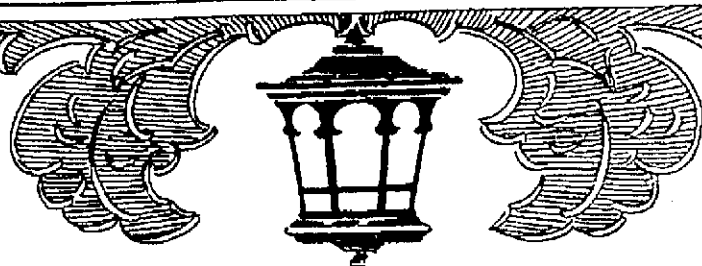

And that policy is: To give our customers the utmost in value at all times. To offer only merchandise of recognized quality. And to leave nothing undone that it is possible to do in the way of service to our customers.

We feel that in so far as we abide by these principles, to that extent are we helping the people of Portsmouth to realize their desires for better homes.

"The Royal" Way Leads To A Home Of Your Own

There are hundreds---aye, thousands of people living in their own homes who were it not for THE ROYAL SAVINGS AND LOAN CO. would be paying tribute to landlords. And there are hundreds, aye thousands, who are getting ready to own their own homes because they are patrons of this same institution. Soon the landlords will be handed the last month's rent and soon these patrons will have sufficient laid aside in this institution to make a substantial payment on a home of their very own.

*Home, Home, Sweet Home,
Be It Ever So Humble,
There's No Place Like Home.*

Sing that to the old familiar tune --- it's one of the sweetest songs ever written --- and it is one of the sweetest songs ever sung. Memory clusters around the home of your childhood. When you think back over the years, and compare the home in which you were born to the modern homes of today---my, what a difference! The grape-harbor, the coal shed, the big cistern pump, the chicken coops, rose bushes, garden---

Placing savings in this institution will lead to a home of your own. Remember we pay 6 per cent dividends twice yearly. Money begins to draw interest at once and checks for interest are mailed on all certificates twice a year. On pass books interest compounded every 6 months.

perhaps the old fashioned well, where mother used to "hang" the butter---then there was the spring house. There was the barn where you've romped and played many and many a day, where you've found a nest full of eggs, and where you've played hide and seek in the hay mow. "THESE WERE THE GOOD OLD DAYS," and there's a lump that keeps coming in your throat when you recall the days of childhood.

BUT NOW IT'S THE MODERN HOME!

If you are still paying rent, don't you think it about time you were planning to own a home of your very own? Opening a savings account here and keeping at it everlastingly will lead you to that home.

We will be pleased to have you call around, and let us talk the matter over with you.

We know we can help you, and it will be a decided pleasure to talk it over.

GALLIA STREET ON THE SQUARE

"Thanks to the Facilities Offered by The Portsmouth American Building and Loan Association Company, We Have a Home of Our Very Own"

You Can Say The Same Thing!

Did it ever occur to you that no man who is the head of a family had done his duty to those dependent upon him unless he has provided them with a home?

Those people who go through life in a ship-shod, careless and indifferent manner--paying out their hard earned money for the privilege of having a roof over their heads, are missing half of life. It's the fellow who has to deny himself many of the little luxuries that those dependent upon him might have a home who really develops character.

This institution stands ready and willing and anxious to help you own your own home. We have assisted many and they point to us as their salvation. We want to help you and know that we can if you but pin your faith to us.

Start A Savings Account

That is absolutely essential if you would own your own home. Decide--and decide determinedly--that you will lay aside a certain fixed sum each week--and live up to your determination. It will not be long until you will have enough to buy a lot. Once you own a lot, you can build a home with our money. Or if it is your desire to own a home already erected and you have enough to pay the first payment, we'll finance the rest, and you'll become one of the proudest citizens in the entire town.

Six Per Cent Twice A Year

Every six months we pay six per cent dividends. This means a handsome revenue for you. It means that while you are saving money, what you have saved is working for you. We know of many people whose interest has been the determining factor in the purchase of a home.

Anyone Can Spend Money --It Takes Backbone To Save It

It isn't the easiest thing in the world to save money--it's a real job, at first. But take our word for it--after you have saved the first $100 you will find a joy in saving that exceeds the thrill you may now experience in spending it.

Let's Talk Over This Saving Proposition

If you live more carefully, save here and there--and put your money in this institution, we'll guarantee you'll own a home of your very own within a comparatively short time. But mark you, you will have to start--RIGHT NOW.

The Colonial House

FURNISHING THE COLONIAL HOME

Appropriate Suggestions for Furnishings of Each Room.

PERIOD MAY PREDOMINATE

While Colonial Pieces Are Essential, Strict Adherence to This Style May Be Departed From.

By HUNT COOK

To furnish this home would be a joy to any woman or man who had even the least home-making instinct. And since it is a colonial house, colonial furnishings would be most appropriate, but by no means necessary. Period pieces might predominate, creating a colonial atmosphere, but they need not exclude.

The walls throughout the lower floor in putty color or sand would make a safe and restful background. The rugs should be plain, in deeper tones, excepting that in the dining room an unobtrusive pattern would be more practical though less artistic.

The hall would require in addition to the rug two side chairs and a fern stand near the newell post; side lights on either side of both doors, with bright stencil patterns on the shades.

In the living room the draperies should be of plain gauze or net or marquisette, with overdrapes of flowered cretonne or chintz, or brocade or velvet if an air of greater formality is desired. The piano, if a grand or a baby grand, should be placed at the end of the room remote from the entrance. The piano bench with piano lamp and flowers complete the unit. If an upright piano, it should be placed against the side wall and near the end windows. With the first arrangement, the overstuffed davenport should be against the side wall midway between the entrance door and end wall, and the table near the door with lamp and books and ash tray.

At the front end of the room, a long table with chairs informally placed at either end (if upright piano is used, the davenport would have to be used here), a table lamp, flowers, books, etc., complete the picture.

Built-in Book Cases.

The book cases should be built in, on either side of the fireplace, in front of each chair, not too near, and a reading lamp, or a reading lamp near one chair and a small stand with chair near the other. In front of the fireplace a low bench would be an attractive addition. The room will require but two pictures—good ones—one over the mantel shelf, one over the davenport or upright piano as the case may be.

The sunroom rug should correspond with the other first floor rugs, the drapes being a bright cretonne or chintz, or sunfast material with flowers or birds applied on in symmetrical arrangement. The furniture, which should be of red or wicker, stained, should include a day bed or chaise longue, or both, which should be upholstered in cretonne to match that used in the draperies. Window boxes or potted plants are a necessary adjunct.

The dining room might be appropriately furnished in mahogany or walnut, for a room of its dimensions, and an oblong or round table could be used. If the door leading to the kitchen were placed nearer the outside wall, the buffet could be placed at the end of the room, the serving table with a chair on either side between the two side windows, the closet cabinet and a chair against the opposite wall near the entrance door, tea cart and chair, or chairs, at front windows. Side lights and table candles should be used.

A tapestry over the buffet and a smaller piece above the serving table would make the best decorations. The draperies should correspond to those in the living room with more subdued but harmonious overdrapes.

The Bedrooms.

The larger of the front bedrooms should be the guest room, with the dressing room made into a bath room. The furnishings of the guest room should be neutral since people of varying tastes will occupy it. Twin beds are preferable. These with a small night table, a dresser and a dressing table, one overstuffed chair and one low chair or rocker and certainly a desk or writing table are enough. The windows should be draped in gauze or marquisette, with plain or flowered overdrapes.

Walnut, mahogany, or plainly painted furniture would be best in this room.

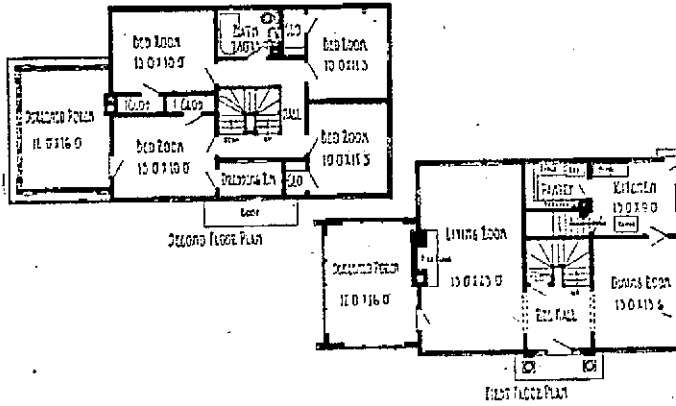

A Modern Colonial Interpretation

When the early settlers of New England wanted a home, they called in the settlement carpenter, told him to build a house and how many there were in the family. He usually duplicated that. He built a house, and constructed a house, usually duplicating that. These houses were plain, two-story gable buildings, such as practically every one is familiar with. But the artistic instinct would not be denied and for decoration there were round columns to support the roof over the entrance and above the front entrance door there usually was a fan-shaped window, worked out in an attractive way. Aside from the exact balance of the window and the placing of the entrance in the exact center of the house, the doorway decoration was the only relief from the primness that characterized the owners of the homes.

It was only comparatively recently that the beauty of this style of architecture was realized. Now the Colonial is recognized as a distinct type and America has claimed it as its own. Taking this plain, gabled two-story house as a basis, present-day architects are adding sun parlors and sleeping porches and garages at the ends of the building and in this way have developed what might be termed the "modern Colonial house."

of lavender, blue and pink flowers sparingly applied, would be suitable. A solid rug of dark gray or a gray rag rug with border carrying the three colors would complete the harmony.

An exceptionally fine example of the modern Colonial house is shown in the accompanying illustration. Here is a plain Colonial house with a typical Colonial entrance and wide clapboard siding that has had added to it a large screened porch, with a sleeping porch above it. The attractiveness of the exterior that has resulted from this treatment will be readily seen.

The house itself, exclusive of the porch, is 36 by 24 feet, and contains seven good-sized rooms besides a rather large entrance hall and bathroom. At the left of the entrance hall is the living room, extending the entire depth of the house at one end, being 13 by 23 feet. The screened porch opens off the living room, and is 13 by 16 feet. At the right of the entrance hall on the front is the dining room, 13 by 13 feet, 6 inches. At the back is the kitchen.

Considered from all viewpoints this is an exceptionally good design for a medium-sized home—one that will accommodate a good-sized family.

FRAME HOUSE IS TRULY AMERICAN

Has Been Closely Identified With Our History.

GREAT VARIETY IN STYLE

Building With Wood Offers Great Variety of Selection With Ease of Construction and Economy.

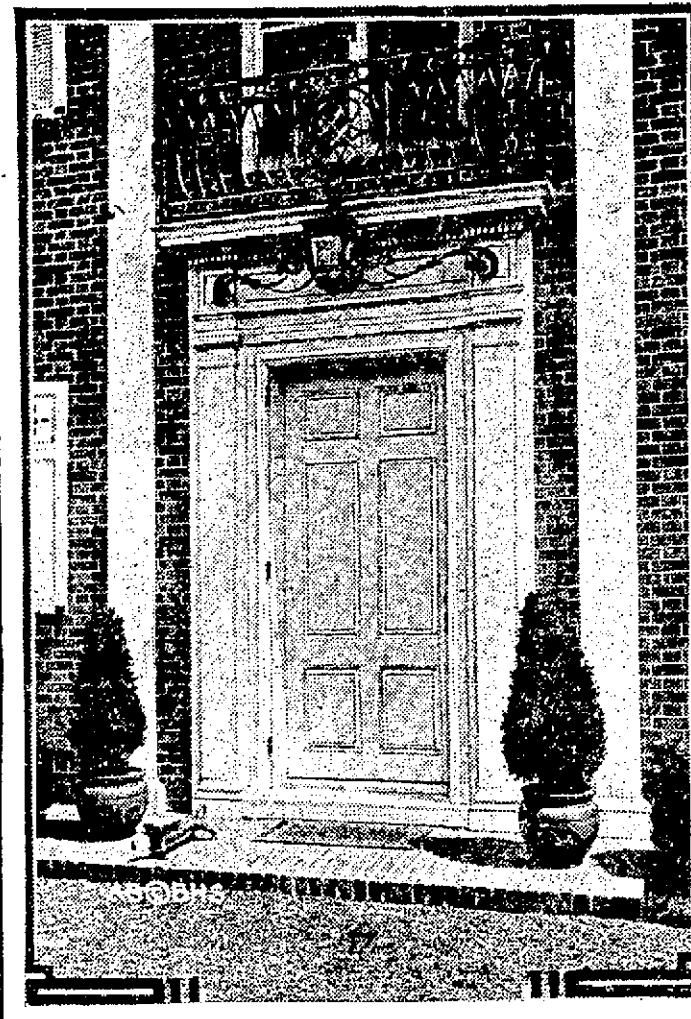

To many Americans the house of wood will perhaps always typify the home. This is not strange when it is recalled that the larger part of the development of our early houses dating back to the Colonial days grew up around the use of wood. Wonderful growths of timber were at hand, only needing the ax and saw to turn them into building material which can be quickly erected to form a shelter. As time went on and there was greater opportunity for more ambitious building, a class of highly-skilled carpenters and woodworkers was built up. The work these men did is seen today throughout the eastern section of the country and those houses and churches that fortunately remain are held as one of our priceless inheritances. The skill and knowledge of these craftsmen were imparted to their apprentices, and in this way a particular and almost inborn faculty was developed for working in wood. This briefly is the history of the way in which wood has played so prominent a part in the building of American houses.

It might be contended that the choice of wood was largely a matter of chance, but there are, on the other hand, a number of reasons that make it specially suitable for house construction, and it is due, as well to these favorable traits as to early building conditions that wood is so popular.

It has been said for many years that wood would probably be displaced as an American building material because of a diminishing supply. While this is an undoubted possibility, owing to the fact that wood is a natural product, there are still ample supplies of it in most sections of the country, and more efficient modern methods of marketing and manufacturing it into merchantable lumber, together with more scientific methods of conservation are checking the waste, and it is more than likely that for many generations wood will both be available and hold its popularity.

Owing to the fact that carpentry is such a common trade, pre-calling in all parts of the country, it is comparatively easy to find first-class workmen for wood construction. Wood building can also be carried on quickly, and it is not hindered by cold weather; so that in the matter of speed there is probably no other material that can compete with it.

Strictly Colonial

Architectural Use of Wood.

One of the particular advantages of wood for home building is the variety of forms in which it can be had. This variety makes it possible to design and build a wood house that will appropriately fit in with almost any set of conditions. We have, for instance, the choice of using clapboards, shingles, siding, vertical battens, wide weather boards and various combinations of two or more of these different forms. Then there are still further sub-divisions; clapboards are made in narrow and wide widths, shingles are made short and long so that totally different effects from an architectural standpoint may be had—all from the same basic material.

For the country house or cottage placed in a rural or wooded setting nothing is more appropriate than a shingled house, either stained in some appropriate color or left natural to weather. For the more formal suburban house the use of clapboards or siding is more usual and in better taste. They have smooth surfaces and being spaced at regular intervals and finished at the corners with corner boards, they present a trim, neat appearance that gives a house a substantial character. If they seem to some austere, relieving notes

Siding at present enjoys a wide popularity. Being wider than clapboards its effect on the building in sunlight is a series of strong horizontal lines about eight inches apart. Siding should, for most successful effects, be used on large houses; when used on a small house it is apt to give a "boxy" appearance which has the effect of making the house appear smaller than it really is. In this case it is better to use shingles or clapboards. Weather boarding in wide widths is not so commonly used as the previous forms, but it nevertheless has many interesting possibilities especially for summer camps and houses in wooded locations. These boards are generally rough sawed and stained which makes them harmonize well with the natural landscape. Batten boards are similarly used for camps and bungalows; they are laid on the building vertically with smaller boards or battens over the joints.

The Colonial house which is so universally popular today and is destined to remain so because of its eminent suitability to American living conditions, is primarily a wooden form and the many charming examples that have been built in recent years will tend to maintain interest in wooden buildings.

Permanency of Wood.

The durability of wood depends on the measures that are taken for its protection. If it is properly cared for there is almost no limit to its age, and if well constructed and given good care it should serve as a comfortable home for several generations.

Wood, of course, will burn, and when houses are poorly constructed and crowded closely together there is unquestionably a fire danger, but in the average private wooden house if care is taken in building to see that proper fire stopping is installed, which merely means that all open spaces leading into the walls are closed, there is but little danger of fire spreading quickly, and in the event of fire it is more easy to extinguish a blaze in a wooden than a masonry house, because the source of the fire can be reached.

Lumber today, possibly more than ever before, on account of the necessity for homes, which if built of any other material than wood might be beyond the reach of the potential home owner, stands as the most easily procurable, highly desirable and certainly the cheapest building material which can be used.

Copyright, American Homes Bureau.

HINTS ON HANGINGS

In deciding upon a material for curtains or portieres, let it be plain if the rug is figured, and vice versa. It may be the same color or a contrast but lighter in value. To be one with the wall, the background of printed linens or cottons should be the same color and thus make the design stand out.

The length of overcurtains (those that decorators dislike to hear called overdrapes) depends upon whether your ceiling should appear higher or lower. Overcurtains to the floor make rooms seem higher, and to the bottom of the casing ("the apron"), seem shorter. Only the curtains next to the glass escape the sill. These "glass curtains," if cut longer, are "Dutchy," and overcurtains cut that short are "baldy."

Whether you have a valance depends, too, upon the same reason. One should generally tie a group of windows together with a valance. Usually windows are better without them. A valance alone is an unfinished-looking thing.

When rooms open out into other rooms, especially the glass, if all alike, give effect of space, make rooms seem one, as they really are.

LEGAL HINTS TO THE HOME BUYER

Explaining Important Things That Should Be Known.

INSTALLMENT CONTRACTS

Most Homes Are Bought on Time Payment System — Owners Should Be Familiar With Terms of Contracts.

By JOHN LYLE VETTE, Attorney for Chicago Real Estate Board.

Because they are so widely used in the sale of homes and land intended for homes sites, installment sales contracts are the most important study for the prospective home owner.

These contracts ordinarily provide for a certain part down, the balance to be paid in monthly installments, the deferred payments bearing interest at an agreed rate, and a deed to be given when the price is fully paid.

Sometimes the contract provides for delivery of the deed before the whole, but after a substantial part of the price has been paid, in which event a purchase money mortgage for the balance is given.

Joint Tenancy.

If it is the desire of a purchaser that the home should go to his wife in the event of his death, the contract should provide that the deed from the seller should run to himself and wife not in tenancy in common, but in joint tenancy. Furthermore, it should provide that if one of them dies before they are entitled to a deed, all the purchasers' interest in the contract shall go to, and the deed when given shall be made to, the survivor. Much trouble and confusion has resulted from a failure to observe this precaution. The principal advantage of a joint tenancy is that it obviates the trouble, delay and expense involved in probating the decedent's estate.

Renewal of Mortgage.

Often property is sold on the installment plan, subject to a mortgage which will mature before the purchase price is fully paid. Unless the purchaser is prepared to pay off the mortgage at maturity the contract should provide for obtaining a new mortgage or an extension of the existing one and state who is to bear the expense thereof. It should also obligate both seller and purchaser to execute such papers as may become necessary for that purpose.

Abstracts of Title, Etc.

The contract should obligate the seller to furnish satisfactory evidence of his title, such as an abstract, guarantee policy, or Torrens certificate, brought down to date of the contract or date of delivery of deed, whichever is agreed upon. Unless the purchaser is willing to rely upon the financial responsibility of the seller, he should either have the title examined before he signs the contract or have the contract so phrased that it won't be operative as a contract if the title turns out to be defective, and if he takes the latter course he should have the title examined as soon after he signs the contract as possible. If the seller himself has no title but only a contract for the purchase of the property, the purchaser after completing his payments might find himself unable to obtain a deed.

Default in Taxes, Etc.

From the seller's point of view it is important not only that the purchaser should be obligated to pay all taxes, assessments and interest and principal on encumbrance, but also that if the purchaser defaults the seller may at his option pay any such item and thereby make the amount thereof so much additional indebtedness due under the contract.

Forfeitures.

Most installment contracts provide that in case of default by the purchaser, the seller may forfeit the contract, repossess the property and retain the payments already made in liquidated damages. It is to the advantage of the purchaser to have this right limited to cases where the default shall have continued for some specified time, as for example, for thirty days. Or the contract could be made to require the purchaser to give notice before the exercise of the right to forfeit. In that event, for the seller's protection, provision should be made for some sort of substituted service, if personal service should be impossible. In this connection, it is pertinent to note that courts do not favor forfeitures, and are prone to set aside upon slight circumstances as evidence of a waiver of the right to forfeit according to the strict terms of the contract. For example, if a purchaser has been in the habit of delaying his payments after their due dates and the seller receives them without complaint the courts will hold he cannot thereafter forfeit for a default unless he gives the purchaser a reasonable notice of his intention to do so. What is reasonable is a question of fact in each case, depending on all the circumstances.

Recording.

Possession by a purchaser is notice of his contract rights, the same as though his contract were of record. But in the case of vacant property of which he does not take possession, he must record his contract, or else run the risk of the seller disposing of an innocent third party, who in that event would acquire rights superior to those of the purchaser.

BUILDING GARAGE AS PART OF HOUSE

Arrangement Simplifies Heating Problem and Makes Better Balance Besides Great Convenience.

By JAMES R. M. MORISON

While there were innumerable reasons why the garage should be placed at the extreme end of the garden, in that time when we used horse-drawn vehicles, those same reasons do not hold good now that we use automobiles as a means of locomotion. And because this is true, why in the name of good sense should we not build the garage as a part of the house unit? To my mind this is unanswerable.

I feel that the garage should be incorporated in the house plans, and so be a part of the architectural beauty of the ensemble.

The house in one corner of the lot, the driveway trailing off after the garage, does not seem sensible, even if beauty were not to be considered at all. But beauty should play a large part in the planning of each home and its surroundings.

There are a number of economical arguments for building the garage as a part of the house, if the arguments of beauty and good taste should fail.

The practicability of heating the garage from the house heating plant at a distance is all the running of pipes under the ground below the frost line is expensive and not advisable. To heat the garage separately is not feasible, but when the garage is a part of the house, the heating problem vanishes. In this way many feet of pipe is saved; the labor of laying the same, which is no small item of expense, is also done away with.

Saves in Many Ways.

Besides the expense of pipe, laying it, its insulation, there will be the saving of the extra wall, both material and labor, to say nothing of the labor of making the long driveway.

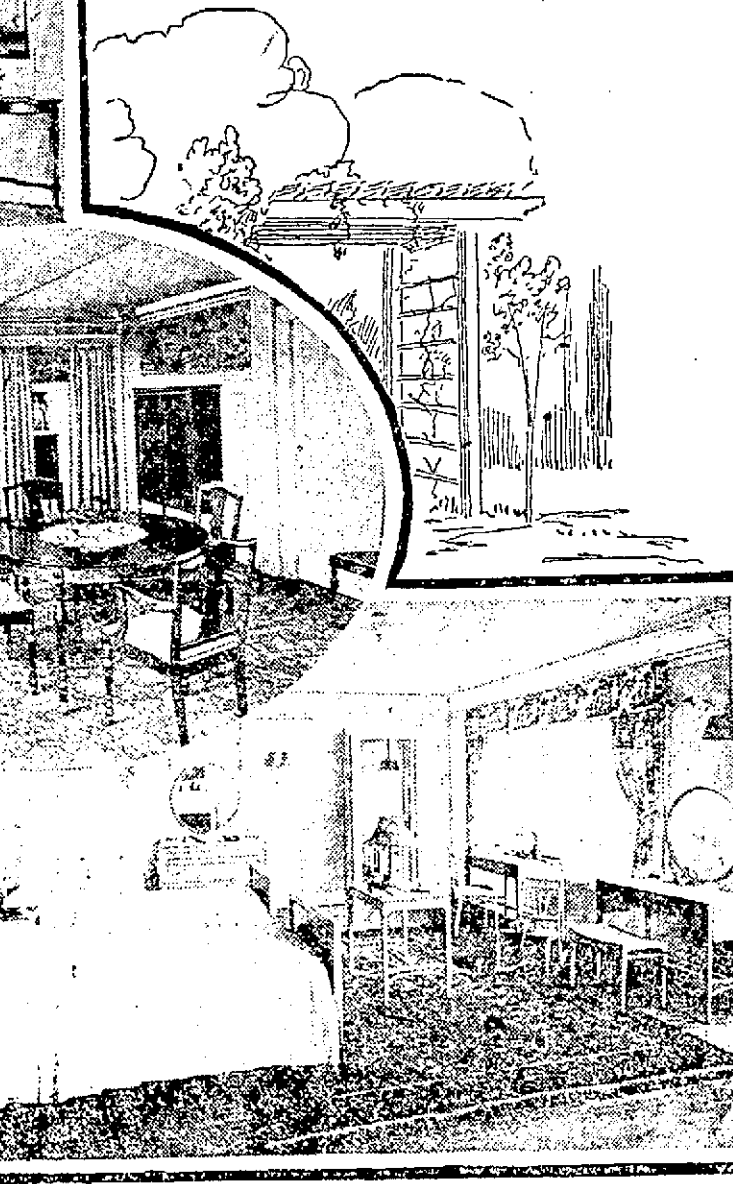

of laying it, insulation, masonry, plumbing, heating, the material and labor of an extra wall, and the roadway, and when considered in this practical light, the attached will be found the most profitable from many sides.

From the standpoint of beauty, what could be more attractive than an attached garage balancing on one side of the house of Colonial design? If the house is of the winged type, why not extend the wings backward, placing the garage in one wing and the kitchen in the other? When one is building in a hilly country, if the house is planned for a hill side, building the garage in the basement will be found satisfactory and will in no manner change the outside aspect of the house.

One advantage which appeals to me personally in this arrangement is the greater unbroken garden or lawn space resulting. The grounds about one's home may be used to so much better advantage if unbroken by a second building, and the planting may be so much more delightfully placed if a driveway does not interfere.

Excellent Examples of Good Taste and Refinement in These Living and Dining Rooms From a Home in the Colonial Style.

HOME BACKGROUNDS

If you would set off to advantage your pictures, furniture, family and friends, you should decorate your walls, ceiling and floor as background and not as decoration in themselves. The plainest, then, they are, the better.

Outrained papers, stipple tones, hairline effects, dashes, stripes are papers in colors that keep their place as background—the neutral tans, ivories and grays, or any colors provided they are not intense, are "neutralized," made "off-color" by adding gray or some color so that they are gray-green, etc. Cold water tints and painted canvases are also good backgrounds.

The choice of color depends upon the direction the room faces. Warm south and west rooms should have cool colors, blues, lavenders and greens; and north rooms, warm, yellow and red tints, the mulberry, rose and pink, used sparingly; while eastern rooms may have any colors in pale tints.

Paneling and figured papers make rooms seem smaller. Light colors and plain papers just the reverse.

For Thirty-Two Years We Have Been Helping To Make Portsmouth a City of Home Owners

Organized, primarily, that this institution might play an important part in the development of the Peerless City, in that we could be of assistance to those high minded citizens who desired to have a home of their very own, we can look back with pride over the achievements scored by this growing concern. The city is dotted here and there with pretty homes that were made possible by the helping hand we have extended.

Do You Own Your Own Home?

This is a question you should ponder deeply. It is not a frivolous query, but one that should strike deeply into your life. Every home owner is proud of his own vine and fig-tree--be it a modest 3-room cottage or a veritable palace.

Is Home Ownership A Matter Of Money?

If it is, then we suggest you immediately place your savings in this growing and prosperous institution. Remember our slogan is

"Security, Safety and 6 Per Cent"

By laying aside a certain stipulated amount, it will grow amazingly fast and almost before you know it you will have enough saved up to make initial payment. We are always glad of the opportunity of helping those who help themselves.

Day By Day In Every Way We Are Growing Better And Stronger

We are anxious to have you as one of our satisfied customers, regardless of the size of your account--we will appreciate it, whether large or small and we are confident we can be of real service to you.

What Is Home Without A Ford?

Ford owners, generally are home owners. The man who lives in a modest or modern home, as a rule, drives a Ford car. It is so inexpensive and gives him as many thrills as a bigger car--and he can keep his home all the more beautiful because the upkeep of a big car takes all the extra money.

The Ford Owner Is The Man With The Smile

He can take in all the beauty spots in the country and smile all the while. The upkeep is never a bug-bear to the man who owns a Ford.

Drive A FORD!

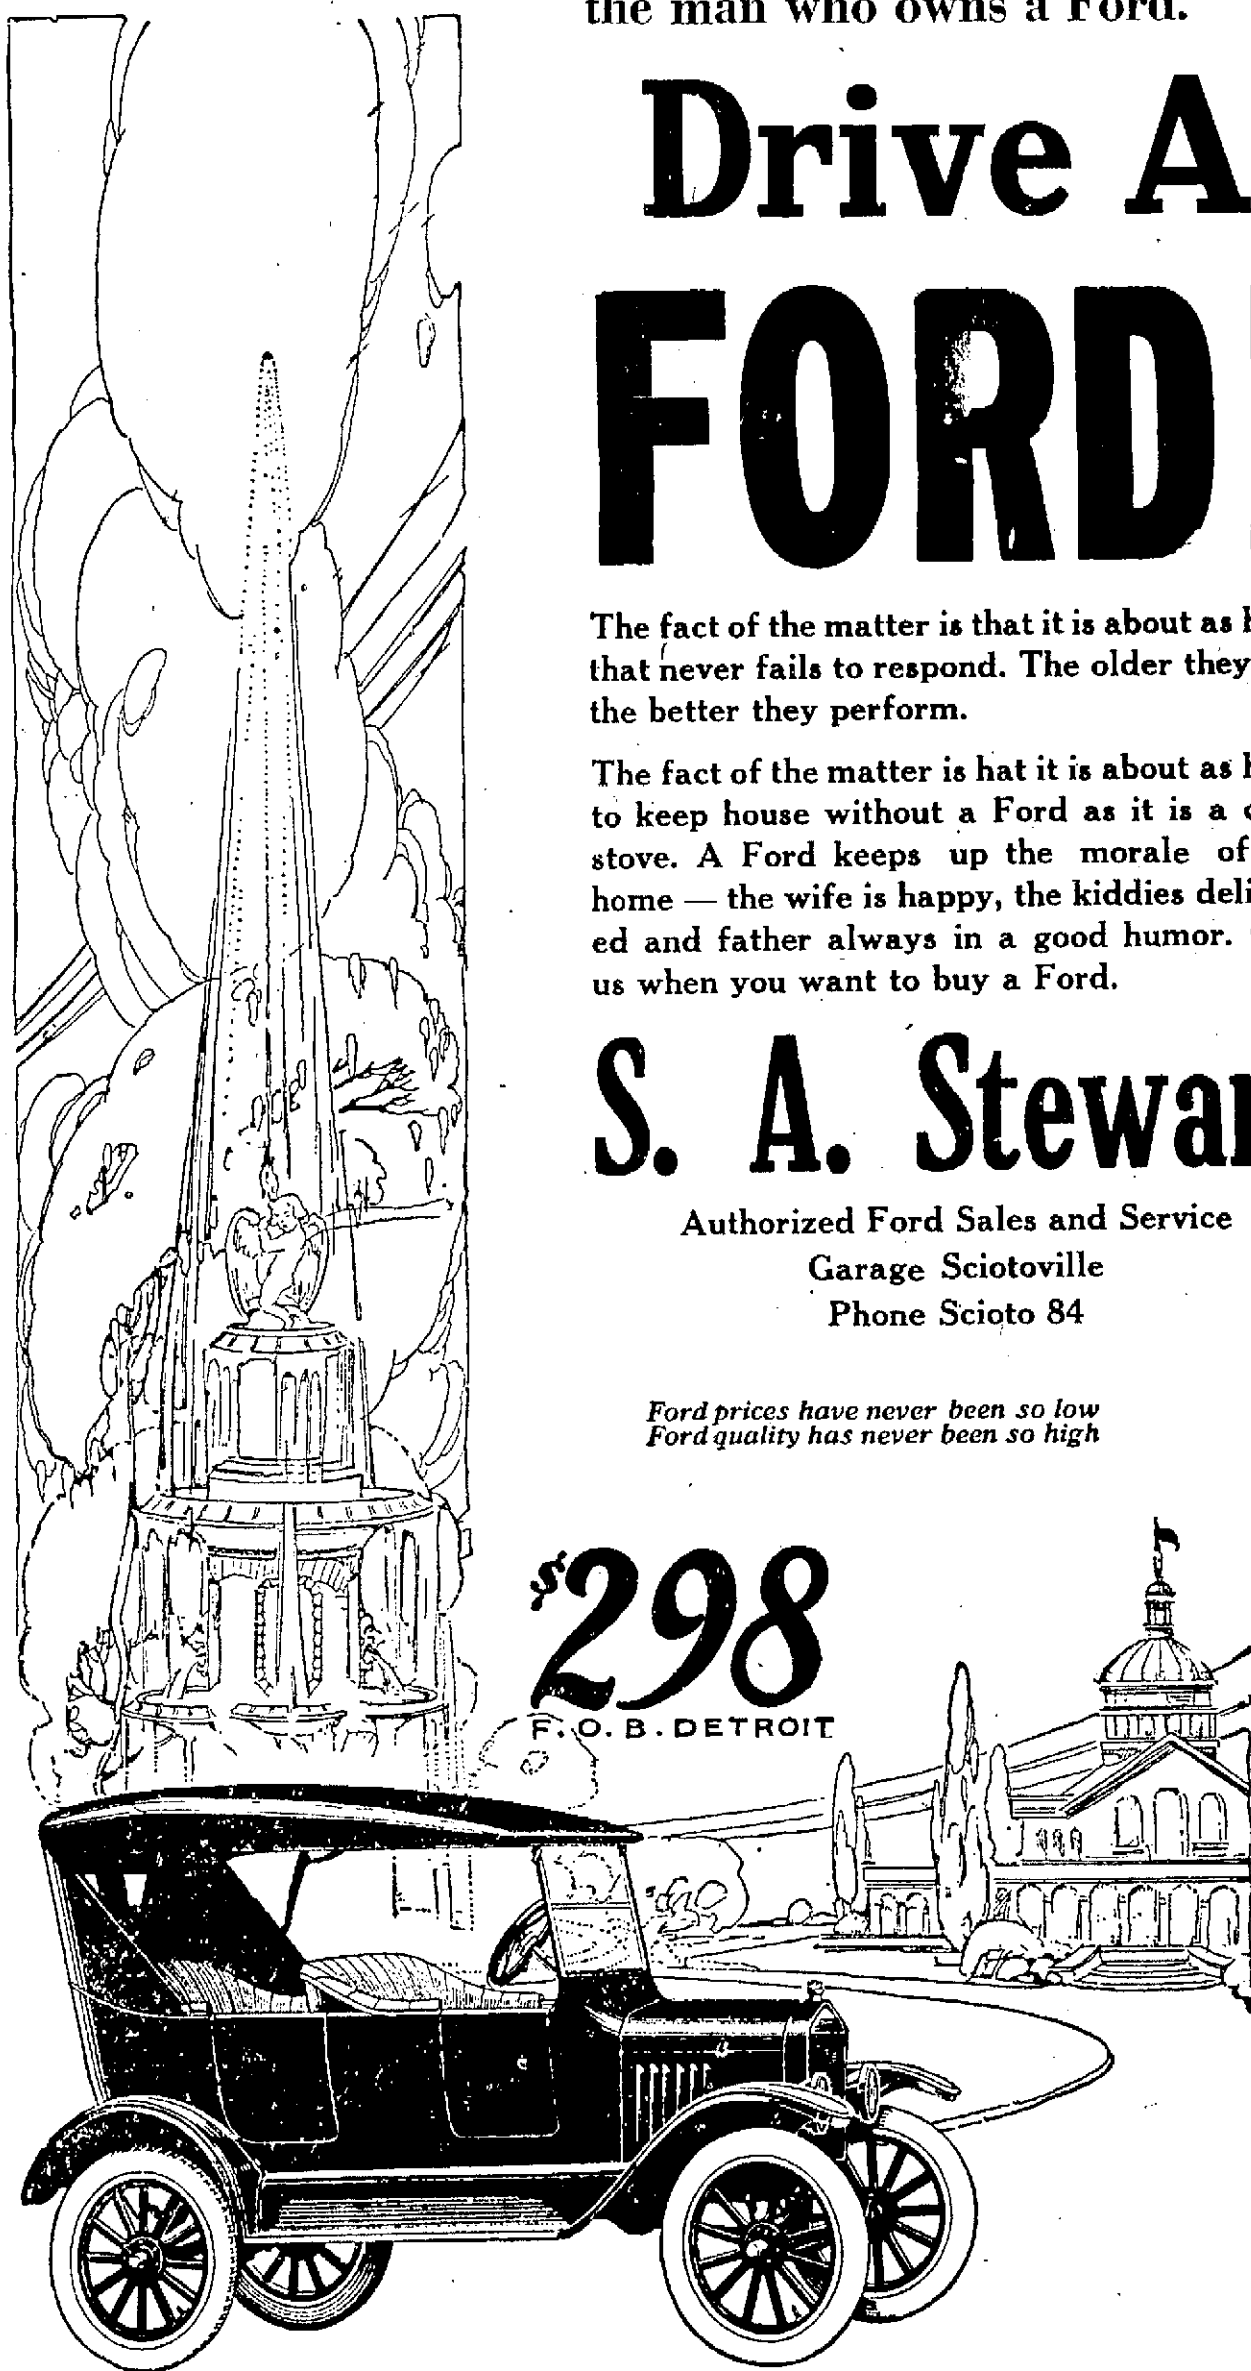

The fact of the matter is that it is about as hard that never fails to respond. The older they are the better they perform.

The fact of the matter is that it is about as hard to keep house without a Ford as it is a cook stove. A Ford keeps up the morale of the home -- the wife is happy, the kiddies delighted and father always in a good humor. Call us when you want to buy a Ford.

Important Notice

If you are contemplating the erection of a new home, we believe we can be of great assistance to you. We have a high class booklet containing half tone pictures of more than one hundred modern homes, cottages, two stories and bungalows. Complete plans are given with each illustration. The homes were selected out of the best the United States affords, and we are positive we can show you the very home you have dreamed about. We will be pleased to mail one of these booklets upon request.

--The fact that this concern has furnished material for a vast majority of the homes in Portsmouth

--The fact that our concern has been in continuous operation for well over a half century.

--The fact that our concern has grown from a modest beginning to one of the largest in this section of the state.

--The fact that we are kept busy--on the jump--constantly--but never too busy to take care of our ever increasing patronage.

--The fact that during our 67 years in business we have kept faith with the people.

--All these facts and many more should be conclusive proof that you can trust us, and feel secure in the thought that we will deliver according to specifications.

--Eliminate the houses in Portsmouth we have helped to construct, and the Peerless City would immediately become a village. No concern has played such a prominent part in the progress of this city as we have. We are not saying that boastfully--but just to give you an idea of the part we have played and are still playing, even bigger than ever.

Portsmouth Is Simply Humping Herself

--And we are in a position to furnish the building material for the splendid city she is bound to become. We keep before us the glory of our past achievements and constantly aim to improve service wherever possible.

No Job Too Big--- No Job Too Small

--Regardless of the size of the order, it receives prompt attention. If you are going to build, we will be more than pleased to give you estimates and advice that may mean a whole lot to you.

The Home Beautiful

--We compliment the progressive spirit of those who are planning the Home Beautiful Week. We believe it will be an unqualified success. We wish to call attention to the fact that we furnished the materials for the Stockham home on Kinney's Lane, and the W. W. Bauer property, 922 Second street, two of the homes that will be open for inspection next week.

PLAN FROM THE START

Homemakers Avoid Costly Errors and Much Worry and Delay by Consulting Experienced Architect and Contractor Before Building.

By JAMES R. M. MORISON

Home building may be the most fascinating thing in the world, or it may be actual misery, depending upon the home builder, upon the competence of the architect and the contractor who are responsible for carrying out the builder's ideas. To get the real joy out of building one's home, and to achieve the best results, a certain amount of knowledge of the methods of building is necessary. The architect is always surprised when he finds how little the owner actually knows about the building of his contemplated home. In many instances he cannot understand the drawings, and is not able to visualize the finished building. Yet there should be infinite pleasure in the building of one's own home, as there is in the creation of any other thing. Each home should be not only beautiful but should have a certain amount of personality of the owner and builder.

The selection of the site is always an important thing. The most desirable house, if it is badly placed, will be an unsuccessful home. I do not necessarily mean by badly placed, that it need face in any one particular direction, but that it should be situated in the most desirable place for the family which are to live in it. For example, a house situated a long way from schools and churches, as well as the owner's place of business, would be badly placed, no matter how beautiful the situation might be. One must consider good water, safe sewage disposal, good schools, the availability of gas and electricity, and good streets, and I might add, good neighbors.

After the location is decided upon, financing the building is the next step to be considered, and it is wise to have a third of the cost before beginning. Be sure that you have a clear title to the property and be sure that your arrangements for the payments on your building have been completed.

Selecting the Architect.
The next step is the selection of an architect. Here it pays to be cautious. The services of a capable man are worth much more than he charges you. The services of a poor architect are absolutely worthless.

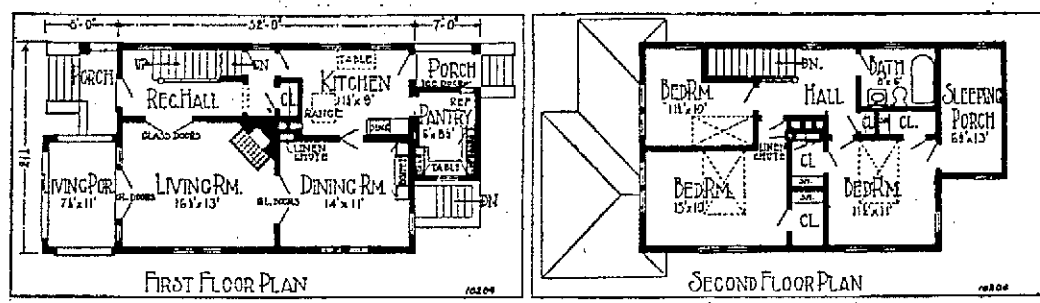

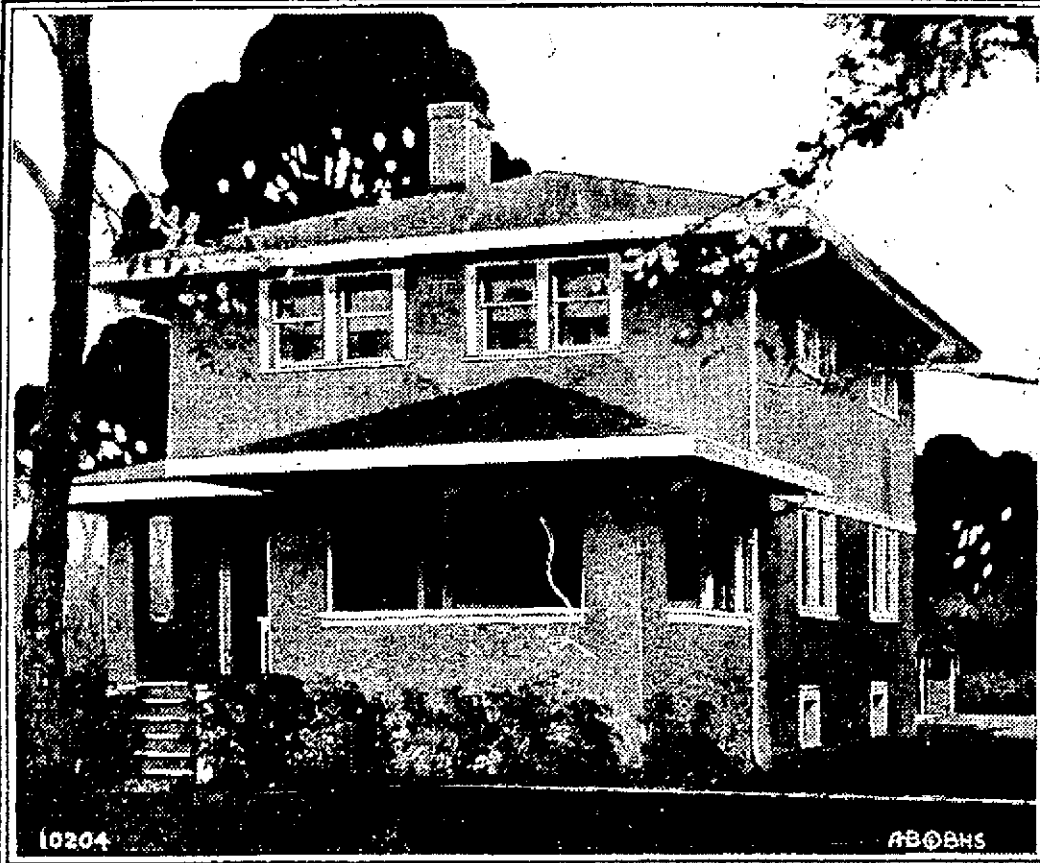

An architect must make all drawings necessary to the construction of the building and these drawings include, besides little sketches of the proposed house, plans of every floor, and elevations of every side, drawn to scale; also drawings of the more complicated pieces of construction and even drawings of all moulding and ornaments. Then, too, he should furnish a detailed and complete specification describing materials, manufacture and method of erection of everything that goes into the house. All this work which the architect must do is very little appreciated by the average home builder. I venture to say that no one who is not an architect realizes the number of days which it has taken to prepare the designs needed. It is not the actual drawing that takes so long but the thought and care necessary to secure the maximum of useable space on every floor and to perfect the appearance of the exterior. There is a piece of advice which I would give in the selection of an architect and that is, the man who is willing to work too cheaply is not worth employing because he cannot give you the value of your money.

The architect's first duties are to develop the client's ideas into workable form by means of sketches, so that the size and general appearance of the building, as well as approximate cost, may be determined. This is not an easy thing to do. Much patience is needed on both sides. Always remember that an architect cannot by some magic make a big house cost as little as a small one, nor can he tell you before the working drawings are made what the cost will be. Always remember that an architect is employed to design your home, but that it is the contractor's business to build it.

Size of Rooms.
If you know exactly the size of the house you want, the number of rooms and the dimensions of the rooms, you will save yourself and your architect much work. Remember always that, while large rooms are usually desirable, large rooms cannot be put into small houses. Home builders do not always realize that low ceilings in a small house will make the house seem larger and will be far better to look at than higher ceilings would be. Before you decide to have large openings between your hall and living room, and the hall and dining room, consider whether you really wish to give an impression of space as you enter your house or do you prefer the coziness of smaller, more intimate rooms. This you must decide for yourself, the architect cannot decide these things for you. The same thing applies to the placing of the stairs. Do you want the front stairs right at the entrance door or would you rather have them a little distance from the front door?

When it comes to the kitchen, it is not well to have a kitchen of

Chaste Lines for Stucco Home

Stucco is a popular building material. It makes an attractive exterior wall of a home, and by the addition of what is known as a "dash" various shades and colors may be obtained. It also gives the appearance of permanence at a reasonable cost. Stucco may be applied over most any of the materials used in homes, over wood or metal lath, brick or hollow clay building tile. The home shown in the accompanying illustration is a good example of the pleasing effect that may be obtained by applying stucco to the exterior walls.

This home was specially designed for a narrow lot, as it is only 22 feet, 6 inches wide, by 32 feet long, exclusive of a 7-foot projection at the rear, for porch and pantry, with a sleeping porch above. The house contains six good rooms, exclusive of the sun parlor at the front and the sleeping porch at the rear. As will be seen by the floor plans, there is a large living room, with a corner fireplace at the front, while connected with it is a large dining room. The double opening between these two rooms, and the large entrance hall at the side of the living room give the first floor a spaciousness that is most desirable. All rooms on the first floor are connected, so that the work of caring for the home can be done with a minimum of steps. The second floor contains three good-sized bedrooms, bathroom and sleeping porch.

While the exterior of this home has the appearance of being a plain, square house, the hip roof extension and the sun parlor and front porch, break the plainness and make the exterior attractive. The work from him and he will be obliged to have them made and you, of course, will have to pay him for having it done. After you have selected your plans, you will send them out to several builders, doubtless, and will accept the lowest estimate. You should not send the plans to any builder to whom you are not willing to give the job. If the price is satisfactory, remember, always, that it costs a builder a considerable sum of money to make such an estimate.

You should never sign a contract with a builder unless you have perfect confidence that he is able to carry through the construction of the house. There are two sides to each contract and when you have signed one, remember that if you expect the contractor to live up to his, you, too, have agreed to certain things, and unless you live up to your part of the contract, you cannot expect him to abide by his. One thing which an owner should always remember is that every chance after the building is started, means an additional cost. To

LAYING THE CONCRETE SIDEWALK.
Most walks are laid out in a straight line, but frequently the contour of the ground, obstacles or the desire to secure artistic effects may require the use of curves, says a recent bulletin of the United States Department of Agriculture. If used for artistic reasons a good plan is to plant shrubbery or trees in the center of the ground enclosed by the inside curve, thus creating an excuse for the departure from a straight line and at the same time discouraging persons making a "short cut" across the lawn. To prevent slippiness and to assure a comfortable foothold on a smooth surface the grade should not be too steep.

When a steep slope is necessary the surface of the concrete should be roughened. A steep grade occasionally can be avoided by following around a hillside or using steps. Steps are a nuisance and often dangerous, and if unavoidable, should be located in expected places and

CONCRETE FAVORED FOR FOUNDATIONS

Economical for Smallest Farm Building or Sky-scraper.

Every building should rest on a strong, durable foundation. By insuring uniform distribution of the weight of the building on the soil, such a foundation prolongs the life of the building, prevents settlement and cracking of walls and reduces maintenance and repair costs. Concrete meets all requirements so well that it is now being used for basement and foundation construction almost to the exclusion of other materials. Concrete is always used to support skyscrapers and is so moderate in cost that it is economical to use it for foundations of even the smallest farm buildings. Sand and pebbles make up the bulk of a concrete mixture and can usually be obtained locally at moderate cost, sometimes for only the labor of digging. Forms are easily made by any one having average carpenter skill, and mixing and placing is done by common labor under intelligent supervision.

Concrete foundations are unimpaired by freezing, thawing or other weather changes. They are rat-proof, fireproof, economical and permanent as a foundation can be made.

Many cities in rat-infested districts have passed ordinances requiring that buildings be made rat-proof with concrete floors and foundation walls, because no rat can gnaw through concrete. By keeping rats out of a storage building, a concrete foundation or basement wall will in a short time prevent waste or destruction of food or other products equal to its cost.

Concrete foundation and basement walls are of two types, those made of concrete cast in place and those built of precast units, such as concrete block. Both types have proved satisfactory. Concrete block walls are usually less expensive than solid concrete walls, but where loads are very heavy or where there is a severe side thrust of soil as in deep cellars or hillside locations, solid walls are usually preferable. Where unusual strength is required steel reinforcement and concrete masonry or buttresses are easily added.

Concrete foundation walls and footings must have sufficient strength to support the weight of the building safely and without settlement. When the foundation serves as a basement wall it must have strength to withstand the lateral pressure of the soil and also must be watertight.

For all types of buildings it is essential to extend the foundation below possible frost penetration even the firm-bearing soil if found at a shallower depth. Then the foundation will not be upheaved by freezing. The depth to which frost penetrates varies and may be as much as six feet in sections where winters are severe.

The base of the foundation is usually given a "spread" or "footing" to distribute the weight.

LANDSCAPE PAPERS FOR THE HALLWAY

Warm Inviting Aspect Easily Obtained Through Use of Appropriate Wall Paper.

A cordial hallway gives a first impression that can never be erased.

Perhaps your hall is dim and narrow and uninteresting. Take heart—and take wall paper, and you can make it charming. If it is a mere passage without room for much furniture, choose a bold, bright pattern, whose warmth and design enliven the cold aspect of a rather bare room—or if the passage be unusually narrow, choose a light, two-toned paper, whose unobtrusiveness makes the walls seem farther apart, and whose neutral coloring gives a feeling of airy space.

If you have a good deal of furniture, pictures, a tapestry paper of indefinite design and neutral tint makes the hall roomier. When open doorways give glimpses of other rooms, choose a paper of blending colors, whose harmonies echo the color schemes of its neighbors.

Almost always light papers are most satisfactory for halls—ivory, fawn, creamy effects—which light up and make spacious what might otherwise be just a drab passageway. Never use a striped paper in a long, narrow hall or you will make it unbearably lean and lanky. Further select some all-over paper of spreading effect, for width—or a light one-color paper of interesting texture, crepe or grasscloth. When a plain or two-toned paper is chosen, be sure that it does not far from any of the communicating rooms. There should be no conflict about the entrance to your house—but it should gently lead on to the more intimate rooms.

Landscape papers are favorites for halls. They are interesting; they form a happy link with the out-of-doors. If you have a fine ladder-backed chair, a drop-leaf table, or some such furniture reminiscent of early American days, the landscape papers become especially fitting. Lining tends to break up monotonous stretches of wall, and so is justly popular for hallways. For the narrow staircase on which trunks and furniture must be trundled, choose a heavy paper—possibly a linoleum, which wears almost "forever and ever," and is washable.

And what fun if you have a Colonial hall? There are infinite possibilities. Gay chintz patterns, floral patterns, accurate copies of old New England patterns that make your house—even if you've just moved in—look as though you'd lived there for years.

PAINTING STUCCO

The very rough, coarse surface of cement stucco, such as is used for the finishing of certain types of buildings and dwelling houses, is of such a nature that hand brushes cannot be used satisfactorily. The brushes are easily cut and the application greatly retarded. In such instances the spray painting machine has proven most useful. In some cases as high as five gallons of paint can be applied in forty minutes by one operator and one man to take care of the tank. The cost may run as low as $8.00 per square foot.

GARAGE OF CONCRETE CAR OWNER'S DELIGHT

Placed With Safety Near House, It Gives Many Advantages.

The amount of money invested in the average automobile or motor-truck justifies a substantial garage that will afford the required protection against weather, theft and fire.

Many automobile owners believe that a private garage proves more satisfactory than renting space in public storage. The home garage can be located near the owner's residence, while rental space is set down within convenient distance. With a garage on the home grounds he has his car where the most use can be made of spare time to keep the machine clean and in good running order. He has a place to keep oil, grease and other car supplies and can therefore purchase them at quantity prices when these offer attractive savings. Not only is it handy to have the car near the house for use in bad weather and in emergencies, but there will be less danger from fire, tampering and pilfering, as the owner is usually able to keep closer watch of garage and car.

In addition to the fire hazards common to other buildings, garages have a peculiar hazard of their own—the presence of oil and gasoline necessary to car operation. Too often garages are built of short-lived, combustible material, built to increase the fire risk rather than to reduce it. Fire may originate in a garage of nonburning construction but is not likely to make headway and is almost certain to be confined where it starts, so nearby structures are safeguarded. A fire-resistant garage also protects its contents from fire which may originate in adjacent buildings. Fire risk is one of the greatest with which the car owner has to contend. This can be reduced to a minimum with drop-proof construction. Concrete, because of its fireproofness, makes the ideal building material for a garage.

FIREPROOF FLOORS

Thus far the concrete houses which have been built and classed as fireproof have been of the monolithic construction and the block and tile houses should now have a fireproof floor, either cast in place or by the use of precast concrete floor joists. The latter method is probably the cheapest and more easily installed.

The Beautifying Touch

THE HISTORY OF REPRODUCTIONS

Great Progress Made Possible by Photographic Processes.

BRINGS REAL ART TO ALL

Perfect Copies of Priceless Pictures May Be in the Humblest Home.

Romance, magic, beauty and adventure are not solely themes of the written page. Written history can only give one-half the story, for the scroll of the pen in the formation of a master record of human history can but portray the events to the eye of the mind. If this be linked with vivid presentation of the eye of the body, the visualization becomes complete, and the record is made permanent upon the lasting pages of memory.

Cultural advance of races is dependent upon ability to perceive, create and appreciate natural and human beauty. It is therefore important that the beautiful thoughts, feelings, reactions and ideas of the race be transmitted to the world through the masterful pencil of its artists. They, influenced by the legends, loves, jealousies, and other emotions and signs of the times have been inspired to record these facts upon their canvases which have been hung upon the walls of time. As a result of this, we are today provided with vivid, graphic and colorful characterizations of the events of all the ages which have become immortalized by the artists' brush.

If we could but gather these many masterpieces into one vast room, we could compile a wonderful pictorial album of the universe, akin to that which historians have recorded by the means of words. But this could be but a single volume, since there would only be one original of every picture. Its appreciation would be limited to the few who had means enough to travel to this treasure trove where in the pictorial history was displayed. Fortunately, the magic of modern science, so replete with ingenious schemes and devices, has come to our rescue, and has put her mighty factors to work in a wondrous way. Through the scientific art of reproduction, we have been able to extract copies from the mighty book, carrying them to the ends of the earth, and as a result you may find some of these copies hanging on the very walls of your own room.

Three Processes of Reproduction. The art of reproduction involves three technical processes—engraving, photography, and printing. Little is known about the art of reproduction in history until the "revival of learning" or Renaissance was ushered in. Prior to this time, there existed only the original paintings of the great masters. These were very costly, and were only able to be purchased by kings and noblemen. In the fifteenth century, however, the art of engraving was introduced and became very well developed. Every painter employed an engraver, and through the engraver's work, pictures became widely used as units of meaning in the decoration of the halls and walls of the old castles. Raphael and Titian, two master painters of this age, employed engravers who worked side by side with them, multiplying the designs upon their canvases. Rubens, a business man as well as a painter, established a school for engravers, and disseminated his original work through this channel. It is interesting to find that Durer and Rembrandt, two masters of painting, did their own engraving, and these two men today stand out in history as master engravers as well as master painters.

An engraving is said to be a translation of an original, and accurate as this may be, it can never be considered an exact copy. Exact copies of masterpieces were first introduced as a result of the invention of photography. In 1823, just a short time after the death of the last of the famous engravers, Daguerre introduced the science of photographic reproduction. This art was brought about by the power of a ray of light to print its image upon the sensitive plate of the camera. This phenomenal performance has held the attention of men during the past 75 years, during which time much experimental work has been done, until today we have a perfected scientific art called photo-engraving. The perfect copies of the masterpieces of the world are furnished to even the humblest home through the photographic process called "printing." Prints are meritorious in that they are perfect copies of the originals in color and in form, and their style and technique are material for observation.

Photo-Engraving an Art. There are masters in the art of photo-engraving, as well as in the art of painting. The reproducer must be left in handling his tools, he must possess a knowledge of the chemical effects of the acids he uses for etchings, and moreover, he must be sensitive to artistic values in order to produce a master print. Truly, then, it may be said that a good reproduction of a masterpiece is more desirable than the original of a mediocre painter, for the reproduction is a master's work of a master artist.

Copies of good pictures are with the income of even the families of modest means, but their selection should be made with some discrimination. Reproductions are influencing factors in every home, and especially is this true in their effect upon the mind of the child. Pictures of any kind are important in the molding of child character. The world of a child is the home; in the formative years, the magic, adventure and beauty of life is confined within this realm. Playing about in a room, the child is attracted to the pictures upon the walls, and in the little child brain there is recorded an impression of these meaningful expressions of truth and beauty which hang upon the walls of the home. It is therefore of the greatest importance that the pictures in the home should portray good thoughts and right impressions. Look back to your own childhood, and see if you cannot recall some of the pictures in your home. It is safe to wager that you can recall at least one picture which has had some lasting effect upon you.

A story is told of a woman who lived in a middle western town. Her only son, at the age of sixteen, ran away to sea, and becoming attached to this seafaring life, could not be induced to again settle down to a dry land existence. His mother, greatly perturbed over this condition, wondered why it was that the boy had developed this strong desire for an ocean life, when neither of the parents nor any of the relatives had ever experienced a similar inclination. One day the mother was telling this to a friend of the family, who was calling at the home. He, noticing an oil painting of a ship in full sail hanging in the parlor, inquired how long this picture had been in the household. Learning that it had been a wedding present to the mother, and had always hung in the home, he said, "That picture is the cause of your boy's love of the sea. Throughout his entire life this picture has wielded an influence upon him. Filled with romance, mystery and adventure, the painting has stimulated his imagination to that point where he really desired to experience in reality all the charm and fascination that he visualized in the picture." Exaggerated as this story might be, there are in it some points worthy of consideration, for it attests the fact that pictures do exert influences on child life.

Teaching by Pictures. Reproductions may also be used in the home for purposes of instruction. Many a little object lesson can be successfully taught by the use of a picture. In fact, the value of this idea is being daily demonstrated in our public schools, where it is found that pictures aid in fastening a fact upon the pages of the child's memory. Reproductions serve the grownup as opporunities to graphically perpetuate in his home the impressive bits of scenic beauty or fascinating encounters in travel. The very soul of reproductions lies in their reproduction. Also, prints serve as a means of carrying out ideas reflected in the room; they may be selected with the idea of having their content conform with the period of furniture used in decoration. There are but a few of the possibilities afforded by the use of prints. Because of their variety of many subjects, because of their accuracy of expression, and because of their moderate cost, several good reproductions should be placed in every household for the aesthetic, cultural and educational effect that they exert upon every member of the family.

Beautiful Pictures Appropriate for Any Home.

IN LIGHTING THE HOME BE KIND TO YOUR EYES

Selection and Arrangement of Lamps Should Provide Efficient Illumination Combined With Beautiful Effects.

Every home has as a part of its equipment some form of artificial light. Of the twenty-one million homes in the United States, more than eight million are lighted by electricity, and this number is increasing daily.

Among this eight million, those who make the best use of electricity are said by illuminating experts to be limited to comparatively few. Electricity offers to homeowners, if they but use it intelligently and in accordance with illuminating rules easily obtainable, possibilities of lighting that in addition to its utilitarian qualities offers valuable gifts of good vision, beauty, color, variety, expressiveness, pleasure. In order that it fulfill all its possible functions, however, illumination must be lifted from the plane to which it has been habitually relegated in the home-maker's budget of plans, placed among the essentials, and given the dignity it deserves in thoughtful consideration and rational apportionment of expenses. To judge the value of artificial lighting relative to that of draperies, furnishings, etc., it is necessary to look into its potentialities.

Above all things, artificial lighting must illuminate. It must be applied to the home in a radiant glow which will enable eyes to see, without the discomfort of glare or the distress of gloom, all that they are required to see at all times. It must therefore be adapted to the room or the portion of the room over which it flows. It must be logically placed, scientifically diffused and directed, and accurately controlled. It must be adapted in quantity and quality to the activities it is to illuminate; brilliant yet kind for reading or for working; softly stated or shadowed for occupations wherein no close work is involved; or skillfully dressed for bringing out the spirit of furnishings and decorations.

Value Is Greater Than Cost. It must not be understood that this program of realizing home lighting will need to involve excessive costs. If planned at the time homes are built, good lighting may be accomplished for a small proportion of building costs.

Under constant strain due to faulty illumination, eyes become quickly affected. Either insufficient light or glaring light will prove injurious. Your eyes, in particular, being immature and susceptible to permanent impairment, are deserving of the protection afforded by correct illumination.

Following the assurance that light is giving really adequate illumination, there should be consideration given to the psychological possibilities of artificial light.

"It should be evident," says a prominent exponent of correct lighting practice, "that light is a vital and powerful factor in influencing the moods or expressions of a room. In fact, the decorator's work is effective only when illuminated. By touching a switch, the expression of a room may be altered in an instant. To accomplish a similar change, the decorator must refigure the room. It is strange that the powers of light have been so little appreciated."

The adoption of correct illumination to home lighting offers wide opportunities for individual expression. Beauty walks hand in hand with utility, and light is being found so flexible, so expressive, that it can be made either to create a picture in itself or to temper and shade the pictures it touches into a variety of charming moods.

Lighting Laws Simple and Easy. To take advantage of the opportunities offered him, the household-er should acquire a knowledge of the primary laws governing illumination. These are simple, and when once understood will stand between him and many faults in his illuminating system which might otherwise exist even though he spent much money buying new lamps, brackets and chandeliers.

Most essential among these rules is one that says no light-source (lamp-filament) should be visible to the eye. If a lamp be so high that it is out of the line of vision, this rule may be modified; not otherwise; and even then it may well be fostered or enameled.

Two distinctive plans of illumination are in vogue, direct and indirect; with adaptations and combinations into semi-direct and semi-indirect.

Illumination of a room can be accomplished in two ways: by the installation of a central ceiling fixture of sufficient intensity to make it possible to read or work in every part of the room; or by the use of several fixtures which give localized light to certain spots, leaving other areas in shadow. For ideal illumination of more important rooms, both central fixture and smaller brackets and lamps are required, so as to adapt illumination to varying needs and moods.

Indirect Lighting Kindest. In the central fixtures recently perfected, the indirect system is largely used; frequently with an additional feature comprising some direct lighting. For extended reading or work, indirect lighting is considered to be kindest to the eyes. In direct lighting, light is thrown from a light-colored ceiling and is reflected through the room, and therefore must be quite strong in order to provide sufficient illumination in every part of the room. Direct lighting may be used in lesser intensity in lamps or other fixtures for individual areas. If shades of silk, parchment, opaque glass or other material be used to shield the eyes from contact with lamp filament or from reflections from light sources.

Consideration of the importance of adequate light for all living purposes will show that good illumination involves but a small expenditure as compared with some of the phases of furnishing which have less real value to family welfare. Pictures, rugs, hangings and exquisite furniture are frequently indulged in homes whose incomes are not large, while lights which serve or destroy vision, upon which no price can be placed, are slanted to illegitimate proportions.

HOW TO SELECT HOME LIGHTING

EACH ROOM NEEDS STUDY

Individual Treatment of Every Room, Considering Its Uses, Is Basis for Choice of Lighting Fixtures.

By Lillian Cassels of the Society for Electrical Development, Inc.

When the homemaker begins shopping for lighting fixtures and electric lamps, she will find that these have been made in many forms, shapes, sizes, and degrees of efficiency; and may be astonished and somewhat bewildered at the outset by the beauty and the diversified colorings and ornamentations provided. But in this, as in other buying, an application of common sense will bring positive results in comfort and efficiency; and a lighting system built up which will be both a present joy and a nucleus for wide future development.

Living room needs call for illumination at times which flood the entire room with soft but brilliant light, which will not create glare nor allow direct light-rays to shine into the eyes under it. This is accomplished by a central fixture, or which there are in the market many desirable types. Several systems of breaking up the light-rays and spraying these through the room in a bright yet pleasing glow are in use in these central fixtures; both beauty of material and design is considered, and one can hardly go astray in selection, if the basic needs of light that illuminate without glare is kept in mind.

The Family Room. When the family gathers to talk, play cards, or entertain, this kind of illumination is what will be desired.

But at other times, when one or more individuals are reading or working in the living room, more pleasing effects are obtained by the use of separate lamps with the overhead light switched off. Portable lamps must be so shaded and placed that their light-rays will not offend by shining directly into anyone's eyes.

Lamps, located so that they light the face being read, not the player's face, are available for placing either beside an upright piano or on the desk section of a parlor grand. A small wall bracket, shielded with a reflector or shade that throws its light-rays, down into the talking machine, is most convenient while changing records and needles. Another comfort is a sewing-lamp provided with a daylight lamp and adequately shaded. This supplies light of a whiteness approaching that of natural daylight, and is valuable for fine work, or for reading in instances when artificial light tires the eyes.

A Circle of Light. Dining room lights are of several types. There has been a tendency to forsake the old-time dome, which had several faults. It was frequently unsightly and clumsy, and in the way when table was moved. If it hung low enough so that lamps did not cast blinding rays in the eyes of diners, it impeded a clear view across the table. Yet no lighting effect seems as appropriate to the dining room as one which floods the table with light, bringing out the beauty of exquisite service and the attractive colors of food, while the rest of the room remains in shadow. This seems to throw around the group at the table an outer wall of seclusion, and to make the gathering one of life's brightest moments.

There are a number of new fixtures obtainable which will accomplish this effect without the objections accompanying the old dome. In some, this is accomplished by directing the flow of light upward to a reflector which throws it back in a softened brilliance. In others, disks or enclosing shades of translucent glass are interposed between lamp and vision; breaking up and amusing the light, which is then sprayed on the table in a concentrated circle. All are to be hung high enough to escape contact when one passes under them.

One fixture of this type is all that is really required in a dining room. For special occasions, however, or for providing decorative spots of color, wall brackets or portable candle-type fixtures are an additional pleasure. These may be shaded with glass, silk, or parchment to suit any color or design in furnishings.

For the Bedrooms. Most bedrooms have central chandeliers; a few have, in addition, side brackets for mirror lighting. But it is only in high-class hotels and a few recently built or equipped homes that bedside lights are considered a necessity; and even in these, the comfort of individualized mirror lights are seldom found. Yet it would appear that it might be wearing on a man's nerves to be obliged to arrange his necktie or brush his hair over his wife's shoulder, as he probably does if his own dressing mirror is unlighted. When there is but one wall bracket, it is not difficult to guess whose dresser is arrayed beside it.

Two lights for each mirror, one on each side, give the best light obtainable; light being thrown upon the face of the person dressing, and not into the mirror—which latter is a serious fault found in a great deal of mirror lighting. However, one pendant light just about the mirror and about two feet from the wall gives satisfactory results if the lamp be sufficiently powerful and the shading properly done.

If central fixtures are used in bedrooms, they should be simple in line and rather unobtrusive. They do not preclude beauty or harmonization with one's scheme of decoration. There are being made so many types of center fixtures that all tastes may be served. It is essential here, however, as elsewhere in the home, that there be visible no bare lamps to vex the eyes. If the central fixture be close to the ceiling, and the ceiling fairly high, then shades are not absolutely essential; but even in this case, frosted or enameled lamps should be used.

It is quite possible to find beautifully decorated translucent glass shades in sizes which are adaptable to all these bedroom lights, as well as to lights elsewhere. Some of the hand-painted shades are works of art. Parchment or silk shades are also liked; but the more by this material, the better. Chandeliers and brackets recently have been shown with delicately tinted enameled color embellishments on the metal. A few of these have the color repeated in some chaste crystal pendants, while the shades are in perfect color accord.

Portable lamps are additional sources of light are frequently liked in the bedroom. A reading lamp beside one's favorite chair is preferred by some to the bedside reading light. While wiring is being done, it is not difficult to provide outlets sufficient so that varying needs and varying moods may be accommodated.

Porches and Halls.

The front porch should have a light controlled by a switch just inside the door. There must be a weather-proof receptacle for it. Because the fixture is exposed to moisture and changes in temperature, it should be made of copper or galvanized iron. This may be a lantern type fixture, of verdé or black finish. Glass panels should be rather dense, and a 25 to 40 watt lamp will usually give sufficient light. Accompanying this, an illuminated house number is a pleasing feature. This may be a glass panel, on which the number is painted, hung on chains between the two porch pillars or in such a position that the light will illuminate it clearly.

Vestibules are usually of small dimensions. It is customary in these to have one light, mounted close to the ceiling. A simple fixture containing one unshaded frosted globe of low intensity is sufficient here, as the fixture is out of the line of vision. However, there are more ornamental hall lights for those who want them. Wrought iron lantern-type fixtures, in harmony with that used to light the porch, are attractive. If there is a larger entrance hall, two torches placed at the ends of a console table give a charming and stately lighting effect.

Closets, both on the main floor and elsewhere in the house, should have individual lights. These may be either so wired that the swinging open of the door will turn them on, or controlled by a pull chain. The latter is more commonly favored. Inner halls, if small, may be lighted by unobtrusive ceiling fixtures, with squat ornamental globe of etched or cut glass, or wall brackets may be chosen if preferred. Lights need not be brilliant here.

Bathrooms should be controlled by a switch just inside the door. Copyright, American Homes Bureau.

Influences Which Guide in Their Selection.

REFLECTING PERSONALITY

Choice Shows Unconscious Manifestation of Individuality.

Perhaps you are examining a group of pictures casually, without the remotest intention of purchasing; merely admiring them for their own sake, when one very abruptly stands out from the others and suddenly "occurs" to you that the picture is just what you have been looking for to fill the north wall of the living room, a corner of the den, or some bare nook in your home. Only the psychologist cares to follow and relate the long process of selection, definition and rejection which has made it possible for this seemingly random thought to occur. Just for amusement, suppose we work out, to imagination, the cause of the strange action related above, which has very likely occurred to us all. We will do consciously what takes place.

Select a wall, nook or corner in your home, which is now unfilled. Consider first of all the size of the space, then the color of the wall, ceiling, floor, of the rugs and furniture in the room. You will immediately decide that only certain combinations of colors will blend harmoniously with those surrounding. Consider the lighting in the room. Perhaps the wall you have chosen is dimly lighted, or it may be colorful and bright. Suppose it is the latter. After that consider your own personality, remembering that you do not have to like certain pictures merely because they are said to be good, or happen to be from a school of painting that is in vogue at the moment. If you know what you like, without knowing why, or even if the object of your choice is generally accepted as a so-called "good picture," it is enough. If it pleases you it is good, for it reflects your personality and character.

Can Only Apply to Pictures.

Your mind has by this time made certain very definite requirements for the picture which might fill the space you have selected. Certain colors are predominant; it must be of a certain size; it may be gay or somber according to your choice; it must cost only a certain amount, and most important of all it must please you. Were it anything but a picture we plan to select, the task would seem almost hopeless, but your mind knows from past experience that pictures are so varied in their treatment, decorative and artistic values, that your choice is practically unlimited, and that there certainly is a picture which will fill the very exact requirements you have decided upon. We have imposed some very difficult limitations and almost nothing but pictures would bear such limitations. We would despair of finding another article in the same manner.

So we have worked through the process of deciding what you require in a picture to fill a certain space, doing the work consciously. Strange as it may seem you are unconsciously making similar selections and decisions all the time. When you notice a certain picture and suddenly decide that it belongs somewhere in your home, it is not the result of immediate circumstances. Many times your eye has measured the space in which you feel it belongs. Many times you have decided on the size, colors and other particulars, so that you are actually looking without knowing what is taking place.

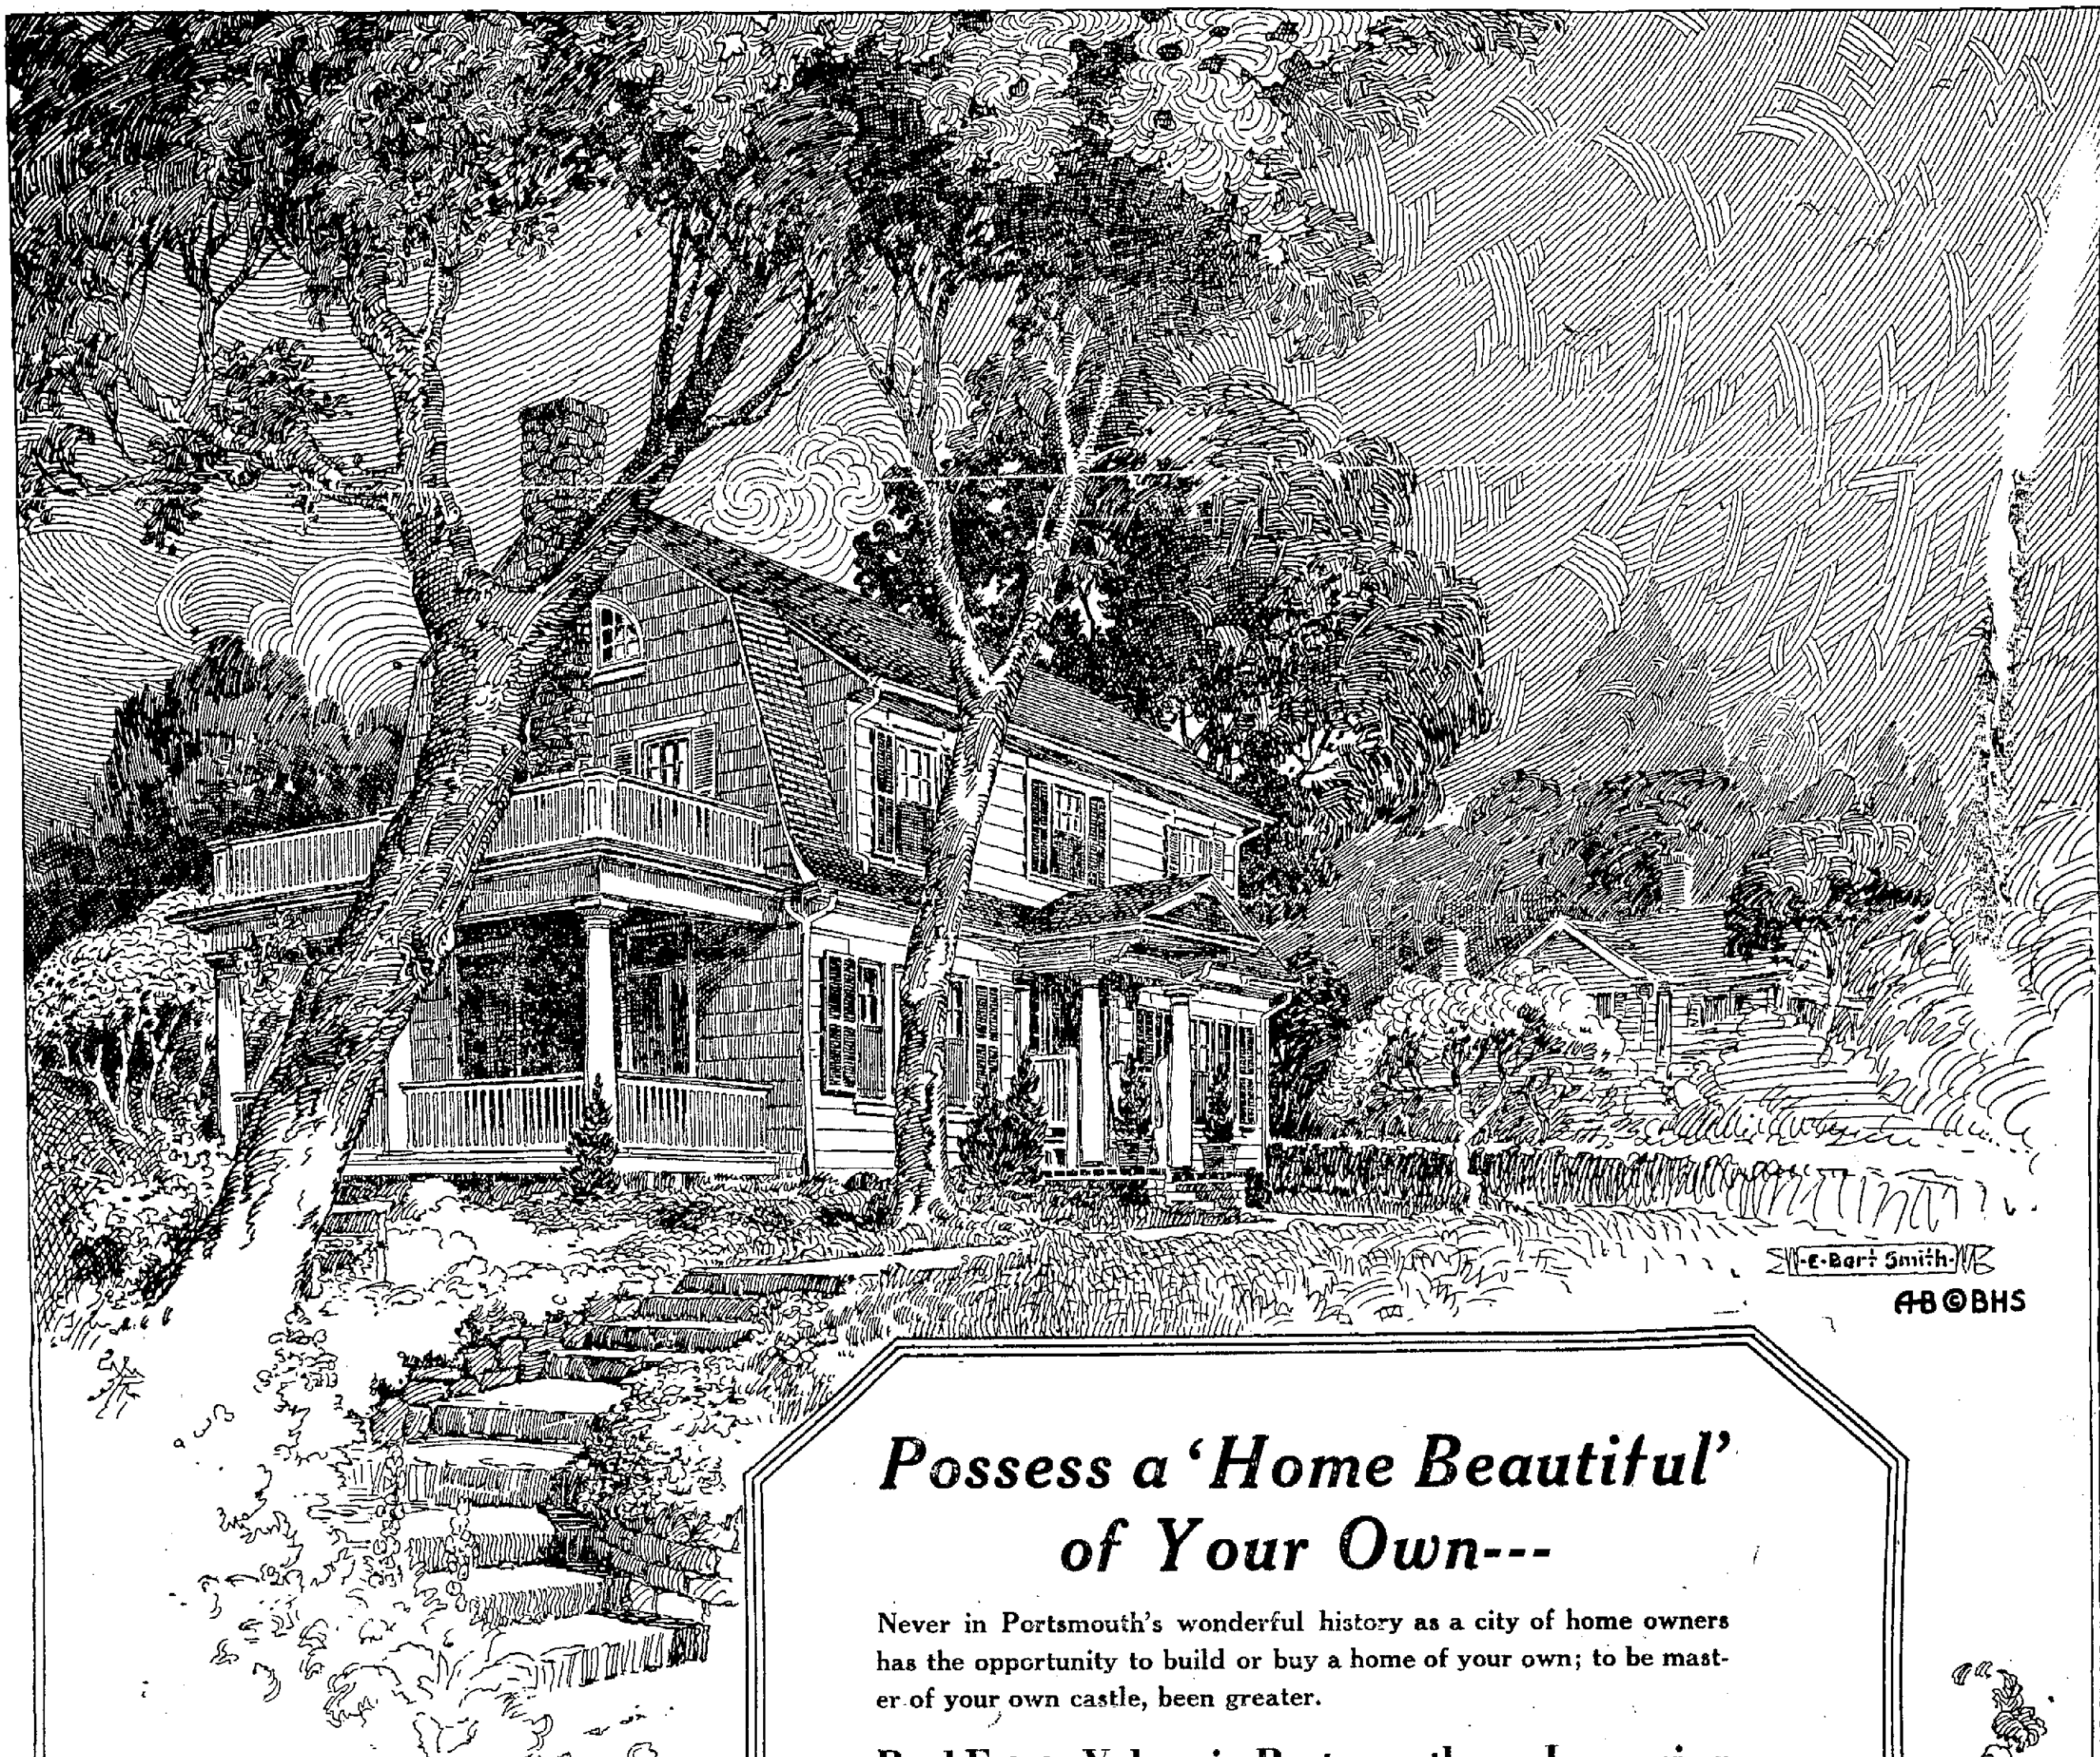

Good Reproductions Not Costly.

How sad it would be to devote so much thought to the problem of a bare wall space, find the picture which belongs there, then find it too high priced. Fortunately that need never very seldom among the better-known pictures. We know there are original masterpieces, worthy of great galleries, for those who can spend thousands of dollars on pictures alone. On the other hand, for those who measure their home furnishings in units of hundreds of dollars, or single dollars, there are copies and reproductions of good pictures, together with originals of less famous artists whose works often possess great merit.

No home need be without good pictures, for craftsmen have produced masterpieces with wonderful processes, the stories of which would prove as interesting as those which surround the original painting. The printer has built wonderful presses which employ these engraved plates. The paper and ink makers have each played their parts, co-operating to bring truly great pictures within the reach of all in a form which is worthy of the originals.

Today the worth of pictures cannot be measured by price alone, for the thoughts of beauty produced by them is appreciated in the printed original or in the printed reproduction. Good pictures serve a definite need in the general scheme of things, acting as a counterbalance against the all too practical phases of everyday life. There are paintings which have stood for years as the objects to which people have attached their need for things of beauty, and without which our world would be a very drab and prosaic place in which to live.
